Nº 623

Kayman dibni

C. Grignion fout

Nº 623

Kayman dibni

C. Grignion fout

P. P. 5250 fa

THE.

SPECTATOR.

VOLUME the EIGHTH.

LONDON:

Printed for J. and R. TONSON and S. DRAPER.

MD CCLIII.

TO

William Honeycomb, Efq;

may possibly dilappoint renders, "and "youtelell" too,

of the Spectator having been Dedicated to some of the most celebrated Persons of the Age, I take leave to Inscribe this Eighth and Last to You, as to a Gentleman who hath ever been ambitious of appearing in the best Company.

Vol. VIII.

A

You

DEDICATION.

You are now wholly retired from the buly Part of Mankind, and at leifure to reflect upon your past Atchievements; for which Reason I look upon You as a Person very well qualified for a Dedication.

I may possibly disappoint my Readers, and yourself too, if I do not endeavour on this Occafion to make the World acquainted with your Virtues. And here, Sir, I shall not compliment You upon your Birth, Person, or Fortune; nor any other the like Persections, which You possess whether You will or no: But shall only touch upon those, which are of your own acquiring, and in which which every one must allow You have a real Merit.

DEDICATION.

Your janty Air and easy Motion, the Volubility of your Discourse, the Suddenness of your Laugh, the Management of your Snuff-Box, with the Whiteness of your Hands and Teeth, (which have justly gained You the Envy of the most polite part of the Male World, and the Love of the greatest Beauties in the Female) are intirely to be ascribed to your own personal Genius and Application.

You are formed for these Accomplishments by a happy Turn of Nature, and have finished Your-self in them by the utmost Improvements of Art., A Man that is defective in either of these Qualifications (whatever may be the fecret Ambition of his Heart) must never hope to make the Figure You have done, among the fashionable part of his Species. It is therefore no wonder, we see such Multitudes of aspiring young Men fall short of You in all these Beauties of your Character, notwithstanding the Study and Practice of them is the whole Business of their Lives. But I need not tell you that the free and disengaged Behaviour of a fine Gentleman makes as many aukward Beaux, as the Easiness of your Favourite Waller hath made infipid Poets.

DEDICATION

At

DEDICATION.

At present You are content to aim all your Charms at your own Spouse, without farther Thought of Mischief to any others of the Sex. I know You had formerly a very great Contempt for that Pedantic Race of Mortals who call themselves Philosophers; and yet, to your Honour be it spoken, there is not a Sage of them all could have better acted up to their Precepts in one of the most important Points of Life: I mean in that Generous Difregard of Popular Opinion which You shewed some Years ago, when You chose for your Wife an obscure young Woman, who doth not indeed pretend to an ancient Family, but has certainly

A 3

agreeably

DEDICATION

ly as many Forefathers as any Lady in the Land, if the could but reckon up their Names.

I must own I conceived very extraordinary hopes of You from the Moment that You confessed your Age, and from eight and forty (where You had fluck fo many Years) very ingeniously step'd into. your Grand Climacterie. Your Deportment has fince been very venerable and becoming. If I am rightly informed, You make a regular Appearance every Quarter Sessions among your Brothers of the Quorum; and if things go on as they do, stand fair for being a Colonel of the Militia. I am told that your Time passes away as agreeably

DEDICATION.

Country Life, as it ever did in the Galantries of the Town: And that You now take as much pleasure in the planting of young Trees, as You did formerly in the cutting down of your Old ones. In short, we hear from all Hands that You are thoroughly reconciled to your dirty Acres, and have not too much Wit to look into your own Estate.

After having spoken thus much of my Patron, I must take the Privilege of an Author in saying something of myself. I shall therefore beg leave to add, that I have purposely omitted setting those Marks to the End of every Paper, which appeared in my former Volumes,

A A SPECCATOR.

that

DEDICATION.

that You may have an Opportunity of shewing Mrs. Honeycomb the Shrewdness of your Conjectures, by ascribing every Speculation to its proper Author: Though You know how often many profound Critics in Stile and Sentiments have very judiciously erred in this Particular, before they were let into the Secret. I am,

SIR,

Your most faithful

Humble Servant,

The SPECTATOR.

MARCHE CERTAINERANGE

THE

SPECTATOR.

Experience of the Rife of the Biglion and Yo

VOL. VIII.

form the Render, Ass. we refer &

Glixbourged on the Atlanta in the will some the their the troit. appropriate the second of the SPECTATOR

THE

Bookseller to the Reader.

IN the Six bundred and thirty second Spectator, the Reader will find an Account of the Rise of this Eighth and Last Volume.

I have not been able to prevail upon the feveral Gentlemen who were concerned in this Work to let me acquaint the World with their Names.

Perhaps it will be unnecessary to inform the Reader, that no other Papers, which have appeared under the Title of Spectator, since the closing of this Eighth Volume, were written by any of those Gentlemen who had a Hand in this or the former Volumes.

Bookseller to the Reader. The Site Site Assessment and Atheric Robbit Alle you had . Time to have the countries of A the Between the chief to present when the leveral German was a serie inverse of in The state of the state of the state of the state of sorth their market. Policy of the formation of The state of the s that where to among stale through The second second second Harmer Lander

THE

SPECTATOR

Nº 556 Tuesday, June 18, 1714.

Qualis ubi in lucem soluber mala gramina pastus,
Frigida sub terra tumidum quem bruma tegebat;
Nunc positis novus exuviis, nitidusque juventa,
Lubrica convolvit sublato pectore terga
Arduus ad solem, & linguis micat ore trisulcis.

Virg. Æn. 2. v. 471.

So shines, renew'd in Youth, the crested Snake,
Who slept the Winter in a thorny Brake;
And casting off his Slough, when Spring returns,
Now looks aloft, and with new Glory burns:
Restor'd with pois'nous Herbs, his ardent Sides
Restect the Sun, and rais'd on Spires he rides;
High o'er the Grass hissing he rolls along,
And brandishes by Fits his forky Tongue.

DRYDEN.

PON laying down the Office of SPEC-TATOR, I acquainted the World with my Design of electing a new Club, and of opening my Mouth in it after a most folemn Manner. Both the Election and the Ceremony are now past; but not finding it so easy, as I at sirst imagined, to break thro' a Fifty

Fifty Years Silence, I would not venture into the World under the Character of a Man who pretends to talk like other People, 'till I had arrived at a full Freedom of Speech.

I shall reserve for another time the History of such Club or Clubs of which I am now a talkative, but unworthy Member; and shall here give an Account of this surprising Change which has been produced in me, and which I look upon to be as remarkable an Accident as any recorded in History, since that which happened to the Son of Crassus, after having been many Years as much Tongue-tied as myfelf.

UPON the first opening of my Mouth, I made a Speech, consisting of about half a Dozen well-turned Periods; but grew so very hoarse upon it, that for three Days together, instead of sinding the use of my Tongue, I was afraid that I had quite lost it. Besides, the unusual Extension of my Muscles, on this Occasion, made my Face ake on both Sides to such a Degree, that nothing but an invincible Resolution and Perseverance could have prevented me from falling back to my Monofyllables.

I afterwards made feveral Essays towards speaking; and that I might not be startled at my own Voice, which has happened to me more than once, I used to read aloud in my Chamber, and have often stood in the Middle of the Street to call a Coach, when I knew there was none within hearing or reines soons down to within hat

WHEN I was thus grown pretty well acquainted with my own Voice, I laid hold of all Opportunities to exert it. Not caring however to speak much by myself, and to draw upon me the whole Attention of those I conversed with, I used, for some time, to walk every Morning in the Mall, and talk in Chorus with a Parcel of Frenchmen. I sound my Modesty greatly relieved by the communicative Temper of this Nation, who are so very sociable, as to think they are never better Company, than when they are all opening at the same time.

I then fancied I might receive great Benefit from Pemale Conversation, and that I should have a Convenience of talking with the greater Freedom, when I was not under my life get in a Word among them; and found that if I did not change my Company, I was in danger of being reduced to my primitive Taciturnity.

THE Coffee-houses have ever fince been my chief Places of Resort, where I have made the greatest Improvements; in order to which I have taken a particular Care never to be of the same Opinion with the Man I conversed with. I was a Tory at Button's, and a Whig at Child's, a Friend to the Englishmen, or an Advocate for the Examiner, as it best served my Turn; some sancy me a great Enemy to the French King, though, in reality, I only make use of him for a Help to Discourse. In short, I wrangle and dispute for Exercise; and have carried this Point so far that I was once like to have been run through the Body for making a little too free with any Betters.

IN a word, I am quite another Man to what I was Tam dispar sibi — Nil suit unquam Hor. Sat. 3. lib. 1. v. 18.

Nothing was ever fo unlike itself.

MY old Acquaintance scarce know me; nay I was asked the other Day by a Jew at Jonathan's, whether I was not related to a dumb Gentleman, who used to come to that Cossee-house? But I think I never was better pleased in my Life than about a Week ago, when, as I was battling it across the Table with a young Templar, his Companion gave him a Pull by the Sleeve, begging him to come away, for that the old Prig would talk him to Death.

BEING now a very good Proficient in Discourse, I shall appear in the World with this Addition to my Character, that my Countrymen may reap the Fruits of my new-acquired Loquacity.

THOSE who have been present at public Disputes in the University, know that it is usual to maintain Hereuses for Argument's sake. I have heard a Man a most impudent Socinian for Half an Hour, who has been an Orthodox Divine all his Life after. I have taken the fame Method to accomplish myself in the Gift of Utterance, having talked above a Twelve month, not fo much for the Benefit of my Hearers, as of myself. But fince I have now gained the Faculty, I have been fo long endeavouring after, I intend to make a right use of it, and shall think myself obliged; for the future, to speak always in Truth and Sincerity of Heart; While a Man is learning to fence, he practifes both on Friend and Foe; but when he is a Master in the Art, he never exerts it but on conversed with a what he thinks the right Side.

THAT this last Allusion may not give my Reader a wrong Idea of my Defign in this Paper, I must here inform him, that the Author of it is of no Faction, that he is a Friend to no Interests but those of Truth and Virtue. nor a Foe to any but those of Vice and Folly. Though I make more Noise in the World than I used to do, I am fill resolved to act in it as an indifferent SPECTATOR. It is not my Ambition to increase the Number either of Whigs or Tories, but of wife and good Men, and I could heartily wish there were not Faults common to both Parties, which afford me sufficient Matter to work upon, without defeending to those which are peculiar to either.

IF in a Multitude of Counsellors there is Safety, we ought to think ourselves the securest Nation in the World. Most of our Garrets are inhabited by Statesmen, who watch over the Liberties of their Country, and make a Shift to keep themselves from starving, by taking into their Care the Properties of their Fellow-

Subjects.

AS these Politicians of both Sides have already worked the Nation into a most unnatural Ferment. I shall be so far from endeavouring to raise it to a greater Height, that, on the contrary, it shall be the chief Tendency of my Papers, to inspire my Countrymen with a mutual Good will and Benevolence. Whatever Faults either Party may be guilty of, they are rather inflamed than cured by those Reproaches, which they cast upon one another. The most likely Method of rectifying any Man's Conduct, is by recommending to him the Principles of Truth and Honour, Religion and Virtue; and fo long as he acts with an Eye to these Principles, whatever Party he is of, he cannot fail of being a good Englishman, and a Lover of his Country.

AS for the Persons concerned in this Work, the Names of all of them, or at least of such as desire it, shall be published hereafter: 'Till which time I must intreat the curious Reader to suspend his Curiosity, and rather to consider what is written, than who they are that write it.

HAVING thus adjusted all necessary Preliminaries with my Reader, I shall not trouble him with any more presatory Discourses, but proceed in my old Method, and entertain him with Speculations on every useful Subject that falls in my Way.

CICIONALICADATA

No 557 Monday, June 21.

Quippe domum timet ambiguam, Tyriofque bilingues. Virg. Æn. 1. v. 665.

He fears th' ambiguous Race, and Tyrians double-

THE RE is nothing, fays Plato, so delightful, as the bearing or the speaking of Truth. For this Reason there is no Conversation so agreeable as that of the Man of Integrity, who hears without any Intention to betray, and speaks without any Intention to deceive.

AMONG all the Accounts which are given of Cato, I do not remember one that more redounds to his Honour than the following Passage related by Platarch. As an Advocate was pleading the Cause of his Client before one of the Prætors; he could only produce a single Witness in a Point where the Law required the Testimony of two Persons; upon which the Advocate insisted on the Integrity of that Person whom he had produced: but the Prætor told him, That where the Law required two Witnesses he would not accept one, tho' it were Cato himself. Such a Speech from a Person who sat at the Head of a Court of Justice, while Cato was still living, shews us, more than a thousand Examples, the high Reputation this great Man had gained among his Contemporaries upon the Account of his Sincerity.

WHEN such an inflexible Integrity is a little fortned and qualified by the Rules of Conversation and Goodbreeding, there is not a more shining Virtue in the whole Catalogue of Social Duties. A Man however ought to take great care not to polish himself out of his Veracity, nor to refine his Behaviour to the Prejudice of his Virtue.

THIS Subject is exquisitely treated in the most elegant Sermon of the great British Preacher. I shall beg leave to transcribe out of it two or three Sentences, as a proper Introduction to a very curious Letter, which I shall make the chief Entertainment of this Speculation.

"THE old English Plainness and Sincerity, that generous Integrity of Nature, and Honesty of Disposition; which always argues true Greatness of Mind, and is usually accompanied with undaunted Courage and Refolution, is in a great measure lost among us. THE Dialect of Conversation is now-a days so fwelled with Vanity and Compliment, and so surfeited (as I may say) of Expressions of Kindness and Refpect, that if a Man that lived an Age or two ago should return into the World again, he would really want a Dictionary to help him to understand his own Language, and to know the true intrinsic Value of the Phrase in fashion; and would hardly, at first, believe at what a low Rate the highest Strains and Expressions of Kindness imaginable do commonly pass in current Payment; and when he should come to understand it, it would be a great while before he could bring himself, with a good Countenance and a good Confcience, to converse with Men upon equal Terms and in their own Way.

I have by me a Letter which I look upon as a great Curiofity, and which may ferve as an Exemplification to the foregoing Paffage, cited out of this most excellent Prelate. It is faid to have been written in King

Charles

Charles II's Reign by the Ambassador of Bantam, a little after his Arrival in England.

n Mafter, mit to see mid street on the year TA HE People, where I now am, have Tongues further from their Hearts than from London to "Bantam, and thou knowest the Inhabitants of one of these Places do not know what is done in the other. They call thee and thy Subjects Barbarians, because we speak what we mean; and account themselves a civilized People, because they speak one thing and mean another: Truth they call Barbarity, and Falfhood Politeness, Upon my first landing, one who was fent from the King of this Place to meet me, told me, That be was extremely forry for the Storm I had met with just before my Arrival. I was troubled to hear him grieve and afflict himfelf upon my Account; but in less than a Quarter of an Hour he smiled, and was s as merry as if nothing had happened. Another who came with him, told me by my Interpreter, He fould be glad to do me any Service that lay in his Power. Upon which I defir'd him to carry one of my Portmantuas for me; but instead of serving me according to his Promise, he laughed, and bid another do it. I lodged, the first Week, at the House of one who defired me to think myself at home, and to consider his House as my own. Accordingly, I the next Morning began to knock down one of the Walls of it, in order to let in the fresh Air, and had packed up some of the Houshold-Goods, of which I intended to have made thee a Present; but the false Variet no sooner faw me falling to Work, but he fent Word to defire me to give over, for that he would have no fuch Doings in his House. I had not been long in this Nation, before I was told by one, for whom I had asked a certain Favour from the Chief of the King's Servants. whom they here call the Lord-Treasurer, That I had eternally obliged bim. I was so surpris'd at this Gratitude, that I could not forbear faying, what Service is there which one Man can do for another, that can oblige him to all Eternity! However I only asked him for my Reward, that he would lend me his eldelt Daughter during my Stay in this Country; but I quickly found that he was as treacherous as the rest of his Countrymen. AT my first going to Court, one of the great Men almost put me out of Countenance, by asking ten thousand Pardons of me for only treading by Accident upon my Toe. They call this kind of Lye a Compliment; for when they are Civil to a great Man, they tell him Untruths, for which shou wouldst order any of thy Officers of State to receive a hundred Blows upon his Foot. I do not know how I shall e negotiate any thing with this People, fince there is fo little Credit to be given to them. When I go to fee the King's Scribe, I am generally told that he is onot at home, the perhaps I faw him go into his . House almost the very Moment before. Thou wouldest fancy that the whole Nation are Physicians, for the first Question they always ask me, is, How I do: I have this Question put to me above a hundred times a Day. Nay, they are not only thus inquilitive after my Health, but wish it in a more solemn Manner, with a full Glass in their Hands, every time I fit with them at Table, tho' at the fame time they would perfuade me to drink their Liquors in fuch Quantities as Lhave found by Experience will make me fick. They often pretend to pray for thy Health also in the same Manner; but I have more Reason to expect it from the Goodness of thy Constitution, than the Sincerity. of their Wishes. May thy Slave escape in Safety from this double tongued Race of Men, and live to lay himself once more at thy Feet in thy Royal City of a there will be one Man and do for million and Ladely of Proceeding Lydensel the or and talke an estate that he would late me his

Bantam. D. W. The Sand Show of griller on wall?

TOO SET WORK

Nº 558. Wednesday, June 23.

Qui fit, Macenas, ut nemo, quam fibi fortem Seu ratio dederit, sou fors objecerit, illa Contentus vivat : laudet divensa sequentes? O Fortunati mercatores, gravis annis Miles ait, multo jam fractus membra labore! Contrà mercator, navim jastantibus aufinis, Militia est potior. Quid enim? concurritur : bore Momento cita mors venit, aut victoria lata. Agricolum laudat juris legumque peritus, Sub galli cantum consultor ubi offia pulsat. Ille, datis vadibus, qui rure extractus in urbem eft, 1 Solos felices viventes clamat in urbe. - Cetera de genere boc (adeò sunt multa) loquacem Delassare walent Fabium. Ne te morer, audi Quò rem deducam. Siquis Deus, en Ego, dicat, Jam faciam quod vultis: eris tu, qui modo miles, Mercator: tu consultus modo, rustieus. Hinc was, Vos bine mutatis discedite partibus. Eja, Quid ftatis? Nolint. Atqui licet effe beatis. -as an our senumental as a little Sat. 1. 1. 1. v. 1.

and with you to each took or or who thou are too

Whence is't, Mixcenas, that so few approve
The State they're plac'd in, and incline to rove;
Whether against their Will by Fate impos'd,
Or by Consent and prudent Choice espous'd?
Happy the Merchant! the old Soldier cries,
Broke with Fatigues, and warlike Enterprise,
The Merchant, when the dreaded Hurricane Tosses his wealthy Cargo on the Main,
Applauds the Wars and Toils of a Campaign:
There an Engagement soon decides your Doom,
Bravely to die, or come victorious home.
The Lawyer wows, the Farmer's Life is hest,
When, at the Dawn, the Clients break his Rest;

The Farmer, baving put in Bail thappear, And fore'd to Town, cries, they are bappiest there: With Thousands more of this inconstant Race, Wou'd tire e'en Fabius to relate each Case. Not to detain you longer, pray attend The Iffue of all this; shou'd Jove descend, And grant to ev'ry Man bis rash Demand, To run his Lengths with a neglectful Hand; First, grant the barass'd Warrior a Release, Bid him go trade, and try the faithless Seas, To purchase Treasure and declining Ease: Next, call the Pleader from his learned Strife, To the calm Blessings of a Country Life: And, with these separate Demands dismiss Each Suppliant to enjoy the promis'd Blis: Don't you believe they'd run? Not one will move, Tho profer'd to be happy from above. HORNECK.

It is a celebrated Thought of Socrates, that if all the Misfortunes of Mankind were cast into a public Stock, in order to be equally distributed among the whole Species, those, who now think themselves the most unhappy, would prefer the Share they are already possessed of, before that which would fall to them by such a Division. Horace has carried this Thought a great deal farther in the Motto of my Paper, which implies that the Hardships or Missortunes we lie under, are more easy to us than those of any other Person would be, in case we could change Conditions with him.

AS I was ruminating on these two Remarks, and seated in my Elbow-Chair, I insensibly sell asseep; when on a sudden, methought, there was a Proclamation made by Jupiter, that every Mortal should bring in his Griess and Calamities, and throw them together in a Heap. There was a large Plain appointed for this Purpose. I took my Stand in the Centre of it, and saw with a great deal of Pleasure the whole human Species marching one after another, and throwing down their several Loads, which immediately grew, up into a prodigious Mountain, that seemed to rise above the Clouds.

THERE

THERE was a certain Lady of a thin airy Shape, who was very active in this Solemnity. She carried a magnifying Glass in one of her Hands, and was clothed in a loose flowing Robe, embroidered with several Figures of Fiends and Spectres, that discovered themselves in a thousand chimerical Shapes, as her Garment hovered in the Wind. There was something wild and distracted in her Looks. Her Name was FANCY. She led up every Mortal to the appointed Place, after having very officiously assisted him in making up his Pack, and laying it upon his Shoulders. My Heart melted within me to see my Fellow-Creatures groaning under their respective Burdens, and to consider that prodigious Bulk of human Calamities which lay before me.

THERE were however several Persons who gave me great Diversion upon this Occasion. I observed one bringing in a Fardel very carefully concealed under an old embroidered Cloke, which, upon his throwing it into the Heap, I discovered to be Poverty. Another, after a great deal of Pussing, threw down his Luggage, which, upon examining, I found to be his Wife.

THERE were Multitudes of Lovers faddled with very whimfical Burdens composed of Darts and Flames; but what was very odd, tho' they fighed as if their Hearts would break under these Burdens of Calamities, they could not persuade themselves to cast them into the Heap, when they came up to it; but after a few faint Efforts, shook their Heads and marched away, as heavy-loaden as they came. I faw Multitudes of old Women throw down their Wrinkles, and feveral young ones who stripped themselves of a tawny Skin. There were very great Heaps of red Noses, large Lips, and rusty Teeth. The Truth of it is, I was surpris'd to fee the greatest part of the Mountain made up of bodily Deformities. Observing one advancing towards the Heap, with a larger Cargo than ordinary upon his Back, I found upon his near Approach, that it was only a natural Hump, which he dispos'd of, with great Joy of Heart, among this Collection of human Miseries. There were likewise Distempers of all sorts, tho' I could not but observe, that there were many more imaginary ginary than real. One little Packet I could not but take actice of, which was a Complication of all the Difeases incident to human Nature, and was in the hand of a great many fine People: This was called the Spleen. But what most of all surpris'd me, was a Remark I made, that there was not a single Vice or Folly thrown into the whole Heap: At which I was very much assonish'd, having concluded within myself, that every one would take this Opportunity of getting rid of his Passions, Prejudices, and Frailties.

who I did not question came loaden with his Crimes: but upon searching into his Bundle, I found that instead of throwing his Guilt from him, he had only laid down his Memory. He was followed by another worthless Rogue who slung away his Modesty instead of his Ignorance.

WHEN the whole Race of Mankind had thus cafe their Burdens, the Phantom which had been so tufy on this Occasion, seeing me an idle Spectator of what passed, approached towards me. I grew uneasy at her Presence, when of a sudden she held her magnifying Glass full before my Eyes. I no sooner saw my Face in it, but was startled at the Shortness of it, which now appeared to me in its utmost Aggravation. The immoderate Breadth of the Features made me very much out of Humour with my own Countenance, upon which I threw it from me like a Mask. It happened very luckily, that one who flood by me had just before thrown down his Visage, which, it seems, was too long for him. It was indeed extended to a most shameful length; I believe the very Chin was, modestly speaking. as long as my whole Face. We had both of us an Opportunity of mending ourselves; and all the Contributions being now brought in, every Man was at liberty to exchange his Misfortune for those of another Person. But as there arose many new Incidents in the Sequel of my Vision, I shall reserve them for the Subject of my next Paper.

a representation of the second of the second

STEET OF STREET OF STREET

N° 559

Friday, June 25.

Quid cause est, merito quin illis Jupiter ambas Iratus buccas inflet, neque se fore postbac Tam facilem dicat, votis ut præbeat aurem? Hor. Sat. 1.1.1.v. 20.

Were it not just that Jove provok'd to Heat,
Shou'd drive these Tristers from the ballow'd Seat,
And unrelenting stand when they intreat?

HORNECK.

In my last Paper, I gave my Reader a Sight of that Mountain of Miseries, which was made up of those several Calamities that afflict the Minds of Men. I saw, with unspeakable Pleasure, the whole Species thus delivered from its Sorrows: though at the same time, as we stood round the Heap, and surveyed the several Materials of which it was composed, there was scarce a Mortal, in this vast Multitude, who did not discover what he thought Pleasures and Blessings of Life; and wonder'd how the Owners of them ever came to look apon them as Burdens and Grievances.

AS we were regarding very attentively this confusion of Miseries, this Chaos of Calamity, Jupiter issued out a second Proclamation, that every one was now at liberty to exchange his Affliction, and to return to his Habitation with any such other Bundle as should be delivered to him.

UPON this, FANCY began again to bestir herself, and parcelling out the whole Heap with incredible Activity, recommended to every one his particular Packet. The Hurry and Consussion at this time was not to be expressed. Some Observations, which I made upon the Occasion, I shall communicate to the Public. A venerable gray-headed Man, who had laid down the Colic, and who I sound wanted an Heir to his Estate, snatched up an undutiful Son, that had been thrown into the Heap by his angry Father. The graceless Vol. VIII.

Youth, in less than a quarter of an Hour, pulled the old Gentleman by the Beard, and had like to have knock'd his Brains out : so that meeting the true Father, who came towards him with a Fit of the Gripes, he begg'd him to take his Son again, and give back his Colic; but they were incapable either of them to recede from the Choice they had made. A poor Galley-Slave, who had thrown down his Chains, took up the Gout in their stead, but made such wry Faces, that one might easily perceive he was no great Gainer by the Bargain. It was pleafant enough to fee the feveral Exchanges that were made, for Sickness against Poverty, Hunger against want of Appetite, and Care against Pain,

THE Female World were very bufy among themselves in bartering for Features; one was trucking a Lock of Gray Hairs for a Carbuncle, another was making over a short Waste for a pair of round Shoulders, and a third cheapning a bad Face for a lost Reputation: But on all these Occasions, there was not one of them who did not think the new Blemish, as soon as she had got it into her Possession, much more disagreeable than the old one. I made the fame Observation on every other Misfortune or Calamity, which every one in the Affembly brought upon himself, in lieu of what he had parted with; whether it be that all the Evils which befal us are in some measure suited and proportioned to our Strength, or that every Evil becomes more supportable by our being accustomed to it. I shall not determine.

I could not for my Heart forbear pitying the poor hump-back'd Gentleman mentioned in the former Paper, who went off a very well-shaped Person with a Stone in his Bladder; nor the fine Gentleman who had ftruck up this Bargain with him, that limped thro' a whole Affembly of Ladies, who used to admire him, with a Pair of Shoulders peeping over his Head.

A ROLLIUTY I must not omit my own particular Adventure. My Friend with the long Visage had no sooner taken upon him my short Face, but he made such a grotesque Figure in it, that as I looked upon him I could not forbear laughing at myself, insomuch that I put my own Race out of Countenance. The poor Gentleman was fo sensible of the Ridicule, that I found he was assamed of what he had done : On the other fide I found that I myfelf had no great Reason to triumph, for as I went to touch my Forehead I missed the Place, and clapped my Finger upon my upper Lip. Besides, as my Nose was exceeding prominent, I gave it two or three unlucky Knocks as I was playing my Hand about my Face, and aiming at some other Part of it. I saw two other Gentlemen by me, who were in the same ridiculous Circumstances. These had made a foolish Swop between a Couple of thick bandy Legs, and two long Trapflicks that had no Calfs to them. One of these looked like a Man walking upon Stilts, and was so lifted up into the Air, above his ordinary Height, that his Head turned round with it, while the other made fuch aukward Circles, as he attempted to walk, that he scarce knew how to move forward upon his new Supporters: Observing him to be a pleasant Kind of Fellow I fluck my Cane in the Ground, and told him I would lay him a Bottle of Wine, that he did not march up to it on a Line, that I drew for him, in a Quarter of an

THE Heap was at last distributed among the two Sexes, who made a most piteous Sight, as they wandered up and down under the Pressure of their several Burdens. The whole Plain was filled with Murmurs and Complaints, Grones and Lamentations. Jupiter at length, taking Compassion on the poor Mortals, ordered them a second time to lay down their Loads, with a Defign to give every one his own again. They discharged themselves with a great deal of Pleasure; after which, the Phantom, who had led them into fuch grofs Delufions, was commanded to disappear. fent in her stead a Goddess of a quite different Figure: Her Motions were steady and composed, and her As-pect serious but chearful. She every now and then cast her Eyes towards Heaven, and fixed them upon Jupiter: Her Name was PATIENCE. She had no fooner placed herself by the Mount of Sorrows, but, what I thought very remarkable, the whole Heap funk to such a degree, that it did not appear a third part so big as it was before. She afterwards returned every Man his own proper Calamity, and teaching him how off with it contentedly, being very well pleafed that he had not been left to his own Choice, as to the kind of Evils which fell to his Lot.

BESIDES the feveral Pieces of Morality to be drawn out of this Vision, I learnt from it, never to repine at my own Misfortunes, or to envy the Happiness of another, fince it is impossible for any Man to form a right Judgment of his Neighbour's Sufferings; for which Reason also I have determined never to think too lightly of another's Complaints, but to regard the Sorrows of my Fellow-Creatures with Sentiments of Humanity and Compassion, — Verba intermissa retentat. Ovid. Met. 1. 1. v. 746.

He tries bis Tongue, bis Silence softly breaks.

DRYDEN:

VERY one has heard of the famous Conjurer, who, according to the Opinion of the Vulgar, has studied himself dumb; for which Reason, as it is believed, he delivers out all his Oracles in Writing. Be that as it will, the blind Tiresias was not more famous in Greece, than this dumb Artist has been for some Years last past, in the Cities of London and Westminster. Thus much for the prosound Gentleman who honours me with the following Epistle.

BEING informed that you have lately got the Use of your Tongue, I have some Thoughts of sollowing your Example, that I may be a Fortune teller properly speaking. I am grown weary of my Taciturnity, and having served my Country many Years under the Title of the dumb Doctor, I shall now prophely by Word of Mouth, and (as Mr. Lee says of the Magpy, who you know was a great Fortune teller among the Ancients) chatter Futurity. I have hitherto chosen to receive Questions and return Answers in Writing, that I might avoid the Tediousness and Trouble of Debates, my Queritts being generally of a Humour to think, that they have never Predictions enough for their Money. In short, Sir, my Case has been something like that of those discreet Animals the Monkeys, who, as the Indians tell us, can speak if they would, but purposely avoid it that they may not be made to work. I have hitherto gained a Livelihood. by holding my Tongue, but shall now open my Mouth in order to fill it. If I appear a little Word-bound in my first Solutions and Responses, I hope it will not be imputed to any Want of Forefight, but to the long Disuse of Speech. I doubt not by this Invention to have all my former Customers over again; for if I have promised any of them Lovers or Husbands, Riches or good Luck, it is my Defign to confirm to them viva woce, what I have already given them under my Hand. If you will honour me with a Visit, I will compliment you with the first opening of my Mouth, and if you please you may make an entertaining Dialogue out of the Conversation of two dumb Men. Excuse this Trouble, worthy Sir, from one who has been a long time

Your filent Admirer,

Cornelius Agrippa.

I have received the following Letter, or rather Billetdown, from a pert young Baggage, who congratulates with me upon the same Occasion.

Dear Mr. Prate-apace,

June 23, 1714.

I AM a Member of a Female Society who call ourfelves the Chit-Chat Club, and am ordered by the whole Sisterhood, to congratulate you upon the Use of your Tongue. We have all of us a mighty Mind to hear you talk, and if you will take your Place among us for an Evening, we have unanimously agreed to allow you one Minute in ten, without Interruption.

bin Salk and ad I am, SIR, I the main W. o

Your bumble Servant,

S. T.

P. S. 'You may find us at my Lady Betty Clack's, who will leave Orders with her Porter, that if an elderly Gentleman, with a short Face, enquires for her, he shall be admitted and no Questions asked.

AS this particular Paper shall confist wholly of what I have received from my Correspondents, I shall fill up the remaining Part of it with other congratulatory Letters of the same Nature.

SIR, Oxford, June 25, 1714.

WE are here wonderfully pleased with the Opening of your Mouth, and very frequently open ours in Approbation of your Defign; especially since we find you are resolved to preserve your Taciturnity as to all Party Matters. We do not question but you are as great an Orator as Sir Hudibras, of whom the Poet sweetly sings,

His Mouth, but out there flew a Trope.

If you will fend us down the Half-dozen well-turned Periods, that produced such dismal Effects in your Muscles, we will deposit them near an old Manuscript of Tully's Orations, among the Archives of the University; for we all agree with you, that there is not a more remarkable Accident recorded in History, since that which happened to the Son of Crassus, nay, I believe you might have gone higher, and have added Balaam's Ass. We are impatient to see more of your Productions, and expect what Words will next fall from you, with as much Attention as those who were fet to watch the speaking Head, which Frier Bacon formerly erected in this Place. We are. Worthy S I R.

Your most bumble Servants,

B. R. T. D. &c.

Honeft SPEC,

nother of the bear the property of the constitution

Middle-Temple, June 24.

TAM very glad to hear that thou beginnest to prate: and find, by thy Yesterday's Vision, thou art so used to it, that thou canst not forbear talking in thy Sleep. Let me only advise thee to speak like other Men, for I am afraid thou wilt be very queer, if thou doft not intend to use the Phrases in fashion, as thou callest them in thy Second Paper. Hast thou a Mind to pals for a Bantamite, or to make us all Quakers? I do affure thee, dear SPEC, I am not polished out of my Veracity, when I subscribe myself

Thy conftant Admirer, and bumble Servant,

Frank Townly:

が必要がある。

Nº 561

Wednesday, June 30.

Paulatim abolere Sichæum Incipit, & vivo tentat prævertere amore Jampridem resides animos desuetaque corda.

Virg. Æn. 1. v. 724.

k aidiler beimage dei

Works in the pliant Bosom of the Fair, And molds ber Heart anew, and blots ber former Care.

The Drad is to the living Love resign'd, And all Eneas enters in her Mind.

DRYDEN.

Lay Maddle, She was magned in, A La L

TAM a tall, broad-shoulder'd, impudent, black Fellow, and, as I thought, every way qualified for a rich Widow: But, after having tried my Fortune for above three Years together, I have not been able to get one single Relict in the Mind. My first Attacks were generally successful, but always broke off as soon as they came to the word Settlement. Though I have not improved my Fortune this way, I have my Fx-perience, and have learnt several Secrets which may be of use to those unhappy Gentlemen, who are commonly distinguished by the Name of Widow-hunters, and who do not know that this Tribe of Women are, generally speaking, as much upon the Catch as themselves. I shall here communicate to you the Mysteries of a tertain Female Cabal of this Order, who call themselves the Widow-Club. This Club consists of nine experienced Dames, who take their Places once a Week round a large oval Table.

I. Mrs. Prefident is a Person who has disposed of fix Husbands, and is now determined to take a seventh; being of Opinion that there is as much Virtue in the Touch of a seventh Husband as of a seventh Son. Her · Comrades are as follow.

II. Mrs. Snapp, who has four Jointures, by four different Bedfellows, of four different Shires. She is at present upon the Point of Marriage with a Middlesex Man, and is said to have an Ambition of extending her Possessions through all the Counties in England, on ' this fide the Trent.

Galant, is now wedded to an old Gentleman of Sixty. Upon her making her Report to the Club after a Week's Cohabitation, she is still allow'd to sit as a Widow, and accordingly takes her Place at the Board.

IV. The Widow Quick, married within a Fortnight, after the Death of her last Husband. Her Weeds have ferved her thrice, and are still as good as new.

'V. Lady Catharine Swallow. She was a Widow at Eighteen, and has fince buried a fecond Husband and two Coachmen.

'VI. The Lady Waddle. She was married in the 15th Year of her Age to Sir Simon Waddle, Knight, aged Threescore and twelve, by whom she had Twins nine Months after his Decease. In the 55th Year of her Age she was married to James Spindle Esq: a Youth

Youth of One and twenty, who did not out-live the Honey-Moon. To nection the prince block entry of an all a

' VII. Deborah Conquest The Case of this Lad fomething particular. She is the Relict of Sir Sampfon Conquest, some time Justice of the Quorum. Sir Sampson was seven Foot high, and two Foot in Breadth from the Tip of one Shoulder to the other. He had married three Wives, who all of them died in child-bed. This terrified the whole Sex, who none of them durit venture on Sir Sampson At length Mrs. Deberah undertook him, and gave so good an Account of him, that in three Years time the very fairly laid him out, and measured his Length '-upon the Ground. This Exploit has gain'd her for great a Reputation in the Club, that they have added Sir Sampson's three Victories to hers, and give her the Merit of a fourth Widowhood; and the takes her · Place accordingly.

Nº 561

VIII. The Widow Wildfre, Reliet of Mr. John Wildfire, Fox-hunter, who broke his Neck over a fix Bar Gate. She took his Death to much to Heart, that it was thought it would have put an End to her Life, had the not diverted her Sorrows by receiving the Addresses of a Gentleman in the Neighbourhood, who made Love to her in the fecond Month of her Widowhood. This Gentleman was discarded in a Fortnight for the sake of a young Templar, who hadthe Possession of her for fix Weeks after, 'till he was beaten out by a broken Officer, who likewife gave up his Place to a Gentleman at Court. The Courtier. was as fhort liv'd a Favourite as his Predecessors, but had the Pleasure to see himself succeeded by a long Series of Lovers, who followed the Widow Wildfire to the 37th Year of her Age, at which Time there ensued a Cessation of ten Years, when John Felt. Haberdasher, took it in his Head to be in love with her, and it is thought will very suddenly carry her off. IX. The last is pretty Mrs. Runnet, who broke hen first Husband's Heart before she was fixteen, at which Time the was entred of the Club, but foon after left it, upon Account of a Second, whom the made to quick a Dispatch of, that she returned to her Seat in less than B c HHT:

than a Dwelvemonth. This young Matron is looked upon as the most rising Member of the Society, and will probably be in the President's Chair before the dies.

folved to give the Pictures of their deceased Husbands to the Club Room, but two of them bringing in their Dead at full Length, they covered all the Walls:

Upon which they came to a second Resolution, that every Matron should give her own Picture, and set it round with her Husband's in Miniature.

AS they have most of them the Misfortune to be troubled with the Colic, they have a noble Cellar of Cordials and strong Waters. When they grow Maudlin, they are very apt to commemorate their former Partners with a Tear. But ask them which of their Husbands they condole, they are not able to tell you, and discover plainly that they do not weep so much for the loss of a Husband as for the want of one.

THE principal Rule, by which the whole Society are to govern themselves, is this, To cry up the Pleafures of a single Life upon all Occasions, in order to deter the rest of their Sex from Marriage, and ingross

" the whole Male World to themselves.

THEY are obliged when any one makes Love to a Member of the Society, to communicate his Name, at which time the whole Assembly fit upon his Reputation, Person, Fortune, and good Humour; and if they find him qualified for a Sister of the Club, they lay their Heads together how to make him sure. By this means they are acquainted with all the Widow hunters about Town, who often afford them great Diversion. There is an honest Irish Gentleman, it seems, who knows nothing of this Society, but at different times has made Love to the whole Club.

THEIR Conversation often turns upon their former Husbands, and it is very diverting to hear them relate their several Arts and Stratagems, with which they amused the Jealous, pacified the Choleric, or wheedled the Good-natured Man, till at last, to use the Club Phrase, They sent him out of the House with his Heels foremost. THE Politics, which are most cultivated by this Society of She-Machiavels, relate chiefly to these two Points, How to treat a Lover, and how to manage a Husband. As for the first Set of Artifices, they are too numerous to come within the Compais of your Paper, and shall therefore be referred for a Second Letter.

THE Management of a Husband is built upon the following Doctrines, which are universally affented to by the whole Club. Not to give him his Head at first.

Not to allow him too great Freedoms and Familiarities.

Not to be treated by him like a raw Girl, but as a .. Woman that knows the World. Not to lessen any thing of her former Figure. To celebrate the Generofity, or any other Virtue, of a deceased · Husband, which she would recommend to his Succes-

for. To turn away all his old Friends and Servants, that the may have the dear Man to herfelf. To make him difinherit the undutiful Children of any former Wife. Never to be thoroughly convinced of his Affection, till he has made over to her all his Goods and Chattles.

AFTER fo long a Letter, I am, without more

Your bumble Servant, &c.

CACADORAGE ESTABLISHED FOR

Nº 562 Friday, July 2.

Prasens, absens ut sies. Ter. Eun. Act. 1. Sc. 2. Be present as if absent.

If it is bard and nice Subject for a Man to speak of himfelf, says Cowley; it grates his own Heart to say any thing of Disparagement, and the Reader's Ears to bear any thing of Praise from him. Let the Tenour of his Discourse be what it will upon this Subject, it generally proceeds from Vanity. An oftentations Man will rather relate a Blunder or an Absurdity he has committed, than be debarred from talking of his own dear Person.

SOME

SOME very great Writers have been guilty of this Fault. It is observed of Tully in particular, that his Works run very much in the first Person, and that he takes all Occasions of doing himself Justice. Does he think, fays Brutus, that his Consulship deserves more Applause than my putting Casar to Death, because L am not perpetually talking of the Ides of March, as he is of the Nones of December? I need not acquaint my learned Reader, that in the Ides of March Brutus destroyed Cæsar, and that Cicero quashed the Conspiracy of Catiline in the Calends of December. How shocking soever this great Man's talking of himself might have been to his Contemporaries, I must confess I am never better p'eased than when he is on this Subject. Such Openings of the Heart give a Man a thorough Infight into his Perfonal Character, and illustrate several Passages in the History of his Life: Besides, that there is some little Pleasure in discovering the Infirmity of a great Man, and feeing how the Opinion he has of himself agrees with what the World entertains of him.

THE Gentlemen of Port-Royal, who were more eminent for their Learning and their Humility than any other in France, banished the Way of speaking in the First Person out of all their Works, as rising from Vain-Glory and Self-Conceit. To show their particular Aversion to it, they branded this Form of Writing with the Name of an Egotism; a Figure not to be found among the ancient Rhetoricians.

THE most violent Egotism which I have met with in the Course of my Reading, is that of Cardinal Wolfey, Ego & Rex meus, I and my King; as perhaps the most eminent Egotist that ever appeared in the World, was Montagne the Author of the celebrated Essays. This lively old Gascon has woven all his bodily Insirmities into his Works, and after having spoken of the Faults or Virtues of any other Man, immediately publishes to the World how it stands with himself in that Particular. Had he kept his own Counsel he might have passed for a much better Man, though perhaps he would not have been so diverting an Author. The Title of an Essay promises perhaps a Discourse upon Virgil or Julius Casar; but when you look into it, you are sure to meet with more upon Monfieur Montagne, than of either of them. The younger Scaliger, who feems to have been no great Friend to this Author, after having acquainted the World that his Father fold Herrings, adds these Words: La grande fadaise de Montagne, qui a ecrit qu'il aimoit mieux le vin blanc-que diable a-t on à faire de sçavoir ce qu'il aime? For my Part, says Montagne, I am a great Lover of your White Wines What the Devil fignifies it to the Public, fays Scar liger, whether he is a Lover of White Wines or of Red Wines ? declary of a distribute court for applications con-

I cannot here forbear mentioning a Tribe of Egotifts, for whom I have always had a mortal Aversion, I mean the Authors of Memoirs, who are never mentioned in any Works but their own, and who raife all their Productions out of this fingle Figure of Speech.

MOST of our modern Prefaces favour very strongly of the Egotism. Every infignificant Author fancies it of Importance to the World, to know that he writ his Book in the Country, that he did it to pass away some of his idle Hours, that it was published at the Importunity of Friends, or that his natural Temper, Studies or Conversations, directed him to the Choice of his Subject.

letther is the field not a collect bearing that they - Id populus curat scilicet.

Such Informations cannot but be highly improving to the Reader. his countries investigated and is never be

IN Works of Humour, especially when a Man writes under a fictitious Personage, the talking of one's self may give some Diversion to the Public; but I would advile every other Writer never to speak of himself, unless there be something very considerable in his Character: Tho' I am sensible this Rule will be of little Use in the World, because there is no Man who fancies his Thoughts worth publishing, that does not look upon himfelf as a confiderable Person.

I shall close this Paper with a Remark upon such as are Egotifts in Conversation: These are generally the vain of hallow Part of Mankind, People being naturally full of themselves when they have nothing else in them. There is one kind of Egotists which is very common S I R.

in the World, tho' I do not remember that any Writer has taken notice of them; I mean those empty conceited Fellows, who repeat as Sayings of their own, or some of their particular Friends, feveral Jests which were made before they were born, and which every one who has conversed in the World has heard a hundred times over. A forward young Fellow of my Acquaintance was very guilty of this Absurdity: He would be always laying a new Scene for some old Piece of Wit, and telling us, That as he and Jack such-a-one were together, one or t'other of them had such a Conceit on such an Occasion; upon which he would laugh very heartily, and wonder the Company did not join with him. When his Mirth was over, I have often reprehended him out of Terence, Tuumne, obsecro te, boc dictum erat? vetus credidi. But finding him still incorrigible, and having a Kindness for the young Coxcomb, who was otherwise a good-natured Fellow, I recommended to his Perusal the Oxford and Cambridge Jests, with several little Pieces of Pleasantry of the same Nature. Upon the reading of them, he was under no small Confusion to find that all his Jokes had passed through several Editions, and that what he thought was a new Conceit, and had appropriated to his own Use, had appeared in Print before he or his ingenious Friends were ever heard of. This had fo good an Effect upon him, that he is content at present to pass for a Man of plain Sense in his ordinary Conversation, and is never facetious but when he knows his Company.

The Shadow of a mighty Name. Lucan. 1. 1. v. 135.

I Shall entertain my Reader with two very curious Letters. The first of them comes from a chimerical Person, who I believe never writ to any Body before.

the state of the s Am descended from the Ancient Family of the Blanks, a Name well known among all Men of Bufinels! It is always read in those little white Spaces of Writing which want to be filled up, and which for that Reason are called blank Spaces, as of right appertaining to our Family: For I confider myself as the "Lord of a Manor, who lays his Claim to all Wastes or Spots of Ground that are unappropriated. I am a near Kinsman to John a Styles and John a Nokes; and they, I am told, came in with the Conqueror. I am mentioned oftner in both Houses of Parliament than any other Person in Great-Britain. My Name is written, or, more properly speaking, not written I am one that can turn my " Hand to every Thing, and appear under any Shape whatsoever. I can make myself Man, Woman, or Child. I am sometimes metamorphosed into a Year of our Lord, a Day of the Month, or an Hour of the Day. I very often represent a Sum of Money, and am generally the first Subsidy that is granted to the "Crown. I have now and then supplied the Place of " several Thousands of Land Soldiers, and have as frequently been employed in the Sea-Service.

Now, Sir, my Complaint is this, that I am only made use of to serve a Turn, being always discarded as soon as a proper Person is found out to fill up my Place. ' If you have ever been in the Play-house before the 'Curtain rifes, you fee most of the Front-Boxes filled with Men of my Family, who forthwith turn out and refign their Stations upon the Appearance of those for whom they are retained.

BUT the most illustrious Branch of the Blanks are those who are planted in high Posts till such time as Persons of greater Consequence can be found out to ' fupply them. One of those Blanks is equally quali-' fied for all Offices; he can serve in time of need for a Soldier, a Politician, a Lawyer, or what you pleafe. I have known in my Time many a Brother Blank that has been born under a lucky Planet, heap up great Riches, and swell into a Man of Figure and Importance, before the Grandees of his Party could agree among themselves which of them should step into his Place. Nay, I have known a Blank continue so long in one of these vacant Posts, (for such it is to be reckoned all the Time a Blank is in it) that he has grown too formidable and dangerous to be removed.

BUT to return to myself. Since I am so very commodious a Person, and so very necessary in all well-regulated Governments, I desire you will take my Case into Consideration, that I may be no longer made a Tool of, and only employed to stop a Gap.

Such Usage, without a Pun, makes me look very blank.

For all which Reasons I humbly recommend myself to your Protection, and am

Your most obedient Servant,

Blank.

P. S. I herewith send you a Paper drawn up by a Country-Attorney, employed by two Gentlemen, whose Names he was not acquainted with, and who did not think sit to let him into the Secret, which they were transacting. I heard him call it a Blank Instrument, and read it after the following Manner. You may see by this single Instance of what Use I am to the busy. World.

hid compression appropriate marista

Blank, do own myself indebted in the Sum of Blank, to Goodman Blank, for the Service he did me in procuring for me the Goods following, Blank: And I do hereby promise the said Blank to pay unto him the said Sum of Blank, on the Blank Day of the Month of Blank next ensuing, under the Penalty and Forfeiture of Blank:

I shall take Time to consider the Case of this my imaginary Correspondent, and in the mean while shall present my Reader with a Letter which seems to come from a Person that is made up of Flesh and Blood.

Good Mr. SPECTATOR,

I Am married to a very honest Gentleman that is exceeding good-natured, and at the same time very choleric. There is no standing before him when 'he is in a Passion; but as soon as it is over he is the best-humour'd Creature in the World. When he is angry he breaks all my China-Ware that chances to 'lie in his Way,' and the next Morning fends me in twice as much as he broke the Day before. I may positively say, that he has broke me a Child's Fortune fince we were first married together.

AS foon as he begins to fret, down goes every thing that is within Reach of his Cane. I once prevailed upon him never to carry a Stick in his Hand, but this faved me nothing; for upon feeing me do fomething that did not please him, he kicked down a great Jar, that cost him above Ten Pound but the Week before. I then laid the Fragments together in a Heap, and gave him his Cane again, defiring him that if he chanced to be in Anger, he would spend his Passion upon the China that was broke to his Hand; but the very next Day upon my giving a wrong Message to one of the Servants, he slew into " such a Rage, that he swept down a Dozen Tea-Dishes, which, to my Misfortune, stood very convenient for a Side Blow.

'I then remov'd all my China into a Room which he never frequents; but I got nothing by this neither, for my Looking-Glasses immediately went to Rack.

' IN short, Sir, whenever he is in a Passion he is angry at every thing that is brittle; and if on fuch Occasions he had nothing to vent his Rage upon, I do not know whether my Bones would be in Safety. Let me beg of you, Sir, to let me know whether there be any Cure for this unaccountable Distemper; or if not, that you will be pleased to publish this Letter: For my Husband having a great Veneration for your Writings, will by that Means know you do not approve of his Conduct.

1 am,

The control of the compete

13441

Your most humble Servant, &c. position of a longitude but the transfer of an arministrate

Street of the state of the stat being Auctorian in in that of being lacordinate with

Nº 564.

Wednesday, July 7.

Regula, peccatis quæ pænas irroget æquas: Ne Scutica dignum borribili sectere slagello.

Hor. Sat. 3. 1. 1. v. 117.

Let Rules be fix'd that may our Rage contain, And punish Faults with a proportion'd pain; And do not flay him who deserves alone A whipping for the Fault that he hath done.

CREECH.

than

T is the Work of a Philosopher to be every Day subduing his Passions, and laying aside his Prejudices. I endeavour at least to look upon Men and their Actions only as an impartial Spectator, without any Regard to them as they happen to advance or cross my own private Interest. But while I am thus employed myself, I cannot help observing, how those about me suffer themselves to be blinded by Prejudice and Inclination, how readily they pronounce on every Man's Character, which they can give in two Words, and make him either good for nothing, or qualified for every thing. On the contrary, those who fearch thoroughly into human Nature, will find it much more difficult to determine the Value of their Fellow-Creatures, and that Mens Characters are not thus to be given in general Words. There is indeed no fuch thing as a Person intirely good or bad; Virtue and Vice are blended and mixed together, in a greater or less Proportion, in every one; and if you would fearch for some particular good Quality in its most eminent Degree of Perfection, you will often find it in a Mind, where it is darkned and eclipsed by an hundred other irregular Passions.

MEN have either no Character at all, fays a celebrated Author, or it is that of being inconfistent with themselves. They find it easier to join Extremities, than to be uniform and of a piece. This is finely illustrated in Kenophon's Life of Cyrus the Great. That Author tells us, that Cyrus having taken a most beautiful Lady named Panthea, the Wife of Abradatus, committed her to the Cuffody of Araspas, a young Persian Nobleman, who had a little before maintain'd in Discourse. That a Mind truly virtuous was incapable of entertaining an unlawful Paffion. The young Gentleman had not long been in Possession of his fair Captive, when a Complaint was made to Cyrus, that he not only folicited the Lady Panthea to receive him in the Room of her absent Husband, but that finding his Intreaties had no Effect, he was preparing to make use of Force. Cyrus, who loved the young Man, immediately fent for him, and in a gentle Manner representing to him his Fault, and putting him in mind of his former Affertion, the unhappy Youth, confounded with a quick Sense of his Guilt and Shame, burk out into a Flood of Tears, and fpoke as follows.

OH Cyrus, I am convinced that I have two Souls? Love has thught me this Piece of Philosophy. If I had but one Soul, it could not at the same time pant after Virtue and Vice, wish and abbor the same thing. It is certain therefore we have two Souls: When the good Soul rules, I undertake noble and wirtuous Astions; but when the bad Soul predominates, I am forced to do Evil. All I can say at present is, that I find my good Soul, encouraged by your Presence, has got the better of my bad.

I know not whether my Readers will allow of this Piece of Philosophy; but if they will not, they must confess we meet with as different Passions in one and the fame Soul, as can be supposed in two. We can hardly read the Life of a great Man who lived in former Ages, or converse with any who is eminent among our Contemporaries, that is not an Inflance of what I am faying.

BUT as I have hitherto only argued against the Partiality and Injustice of giving our Judgment upon Men in gross, who are such a Composition of Virtues and Vices, of Good and Evil, I might carry this Reflexion fill farther, and make it extend to most of their Actions. If on the one hand we fairly weighed every Circumstance, we should frequently find theme obliged to do that Action we at first Sight condemn in order to avoid another we should have been much more displeased with. If on the other hand we nicely examined such Actions as appear most dazzling to the Eye, we should find most of them either deficient and lame in several Parts, produced by a bad Ambition, or directed to an ill End. The very same Action may fometimes be so oddly circumstanced, that it is difficult to determine whether it ought to be rewarded or punish'd. Those who compiled the Laws of England were so senfible of this, that they have laid it down as one of their first Maxims, It is better suffering a Mischief than an Inconvenience, which is as much as to fay in other Words, That fince no Law can take in or provide for all Cases, it is better private Men should have some Injustice done them, than that a public Grievance should not be redreffed. This is usually pleaded in Defence of all these Hardships which fall on particular Persons in particular Occasions, which could not be foreseen when a Law To remedy this however as much as possible: the Court of Chancery was erected, which frequently mitigates, and breaks the Teeth of the Common Law, in Cases of Mens Properties, while in Criminal Cases there is a Power of pardoning still lodged in the Crown.

impossible in a large Government to distribute Rewards and Punishments strictly proportioned to the Merits of every Action. The Sparton Commonwealth was indeed wonderfully exact in this Particular; and I do not remember in all my Reading to have met with so nice an Example of Justice as that recorded by Plutarch, with which I shall close my Paper for this Day.

THE City of Sparta being unexpectedly attacked by a powerful Army of Thebans, was in very great Danger of falling into the Hands of their Enemies. The Citizens suddenly gathering themselves into a Body, fought with a Resolution equal to the Necessity of their Affairs, yet no one so remarkably distinguished himself on this Occasion, to the Amazement of both Armies, as Isadas, the Son of Phaebidas, who was at that time in the Bloom of his Youth, and very remarkable for the Comelinest.

of his Person. He was coming out of the Bath when the Alarm was given, so that he had not Time to put on his Clothes, much less his Armour; however transported with a Desire to serve his Country in so great an Exigency, snatching up a Spear in one Hand and a Sword in the other, he slung himself into the thickest Ranks of his Enemies. Nothing could withstand his Fury: In what Part seever he sought he put the Enemies to Flight without receiving a single Wound. Whether, says Plutarich, he was the particular Care of some God, who rewarded his Valour that Day with an extraordinary Protection, or that his Enemies struck with the Unusual ness of his Dress, and Beauty of his Shape, supposed him something more than Man, I shall not determine.

THE Galantry of this Action was judged so great by the Spartans, that the Ephori, or chief Magistrates, decreed he should be presented with a Garland; but as soon as they had done so, fined him a thousand Drachmas for going out to the Battle unarmed,

Nº 565.

Friday, July 9.

Terrasque, tra us gue maris, columque profundum.
Virg. Georg. 4. v. 221.

For God the whole created Mass inspires; Thro' Heav'n, and Earth, and Ocean's Depth's he throws His Instuence round, and kindles as he goes.

vinter is the sound of the Drypen:

Was Yesterday about Sun set walking in the open Fields, 'till the Night insensibly sell upon me. I at first amused myself with all the Richness and Variety of Colours, which appeared in the Western Parts of Heaven: In Proportion as they saded away and went out, several Stars and Planets appeared one after another, 'till the whole Firmament was in a Glow. The Blueness of the Æster was exceedingly heightened and enlivened enlivened by the Season of the Year, and by the Rays of all those Luminaries that passed through it. The Galaxy appeared in its most beautiful White. To complete the Scene, the full Moon rose at length in that clouded Majesty which Milson takes notice of and opened to the Eye a new Picture of Nature, which was more finely shaded, and disposed among softer Lights, than that which the Sun had before discovered to us.

AS I was furveying the Moon walking in her Brightness and taking her Progress among the Constellations, a Thought rose in me which I believe very often perplexes and disturbs Men of serious and contemplative Natures. David himself fell into it in that Reflexion, When I consider the Heavens the Work of thy Fingers, the Moon and the Stars which thou haft ordained; what is Man that thou art mindful of him, and the Son of Man that thou regardest bim! In the same Manner when I confidered that infinite Hoft of Stars, or, to speak more Philosophically, of Suns, which were then shining upon me, with those innumerable Sets of Planets or Worlds, which were moving round their respective Suns; when I still enlarged the Idea, and supposed another Heaven of Suns and Worlds rising still above this which we discovered, and these still enlightned by a superior Firmament of Luminaries, which are planted at so great a Distance, that they may appear to the Inhabitants of the former as the Stars do to us; in short, while I pursued this Thought, I could not but reflect on that little infignificant Figure which I my felf bore amidst the Immensity of God's Works.

WERE the Sun, which enlightens this Part of the Creation, with all the Host of Planetary Worlds that move about him, utterly extinguished and annihilated, they would not be missed more than a Grain of Sand upon the Sea-shore. The Space they posses is so exceedingly little in comparison of the whole, that it would scarce make a Blank in the Creation. The Chasm would be imperceptible to an Eye, that could take in the whole Compass of Nature, and pass from one End of the Creation to the other; as it is possible there may be such a Sense in ourselves hereafter.

after, or in Creatures which are at present more exalted than ourselves. We see many Stars by the Help of Glasses, which we do not discover with our naked Eyes; and the siner our Telescopes are, the more still are our Discoveries. Huygenius carries this Thought so far, that he does not think it impossible there may be Stars whose Light is not yet travelled down to us, since their sirst Creation. There is no Question but the Universe has certain Bounds set to it; but when we consider that it is the Work of infinite Power, prompted by infinite Goodness, with an infinite Space to exert itself in, how can our Imagination set any Bounds to it?

TO return, therefore, to my first Thought, I could not but look upon myself with secret Horror, as a Being that was not worth the smallest Regard of One who had so great a Work under his Care and Superintendency. I was afraid of being overlooked amidst the Immensity of Nature, and lost among that infinite Variety of Creatures, which in all Probability swarm through all these immeasurable Regions of

Matter William - Marie Control

IN Order to recover myself from this mortifying Thought I considered that it took its Rife from those narrow Conceptions, which we are apt to entertain of the Divine Nature. We ourselves cannot attend to many different Objects at the fame Time. If we are careful to inspect some Things, we must of course neglect others. This Imperfection, which we observe in ourselves, is an Impersection that cleaves in some degree to Creatures of the highest Capacities, as they are Creatures, that is, Beings of finite and limited Natures. The Presence of every created Being is confined to a certain Measure of Space, and confequently his Observation is stinted to a certain Number of Objects. The Sphere in which we move, and act, and understand, is of a wider Circumference to one Creature than another, according as we rife one above another in the Scale of Existence. But the widest of these our Spheres has its Circumference. When therefore we reflect on the Divine Nature, we are fo used and acenflowed to this Imperfection in ourselves, that we cannot forbear in some measure ascribing it to him in whom whom there is no Shadow of Impersection. Our Reafon indeed assures us that his Attributes are infinite, but the Poorness of our Conceptions is such that it cannot forbear setting Bounds to every Thing it contemplates, till our Reason comes again to our Succour, and throws down all those little Prejudices which rise in us unawares, and are natural to the Mind of Man.

WE shall therefore utterly extinguish this melancholy Thought, of our being overlooked by our Maker in the Multiplicity of his Works, and the Infinity of those Objects among which he seems to be incessantly employed, if we consider, in the first Place, that he is Omnipresent; and, in the second, that he is Omniscient.

IF we consider him in his Omnipresence: His Being passes through, actuates, and supports the whole Frame of Nature. His Creation, and every Part of it, is full of him. There is nothing he has made, that is either fo distant, so little, or so inconsiderable, which he does not effentially inhabit. His Substance is within the Sub-Rance of every Being, whether material, or immaterial. and as intimately present to it, as that Being is to itfelf. It would be an Imperfection in him, were he able to remove out of one Place into another, or to withdraw himself from any Thing he has created, or from any Part of that Space which is diffused and spread abroad to Infinity. In short, to speak of him in the Language of the old Philosopher, he is a Being whose Centre is every where, and his Circumference no where.

IN the second Place, he is Omniscient as well as Omnipresent. His Omniscience indeed necessarily and naturally slows from his Omnipresence; he cannot but be conscious of every Motion that arises in the whole material World, which he thus essentially pervades, and of every Thought that is stirring in the intellectual World, to every Part of which he is thus intimately united. Several Moralists have considered the Creation as the Temple of God, which he has built with his own Hands, and which is filled with his Presence. Others have considered infinite Space as the Receptacle, or rather the Habitation of the Almighty: But the noblest and most exalted way of confidering this infinite Space is that of Sir Ifauc Neuron, who calls it the Senforium of the Godhead. Brutes and Men have their Senforiola, or little Senforiums, by which they apprehend the Presence and perceive the Actions of a few Objects, that lie contiguous to them. Their Knowledge and Observation turn within a very narrow Circle. But as God Almighty cannot but perceive and know every Thing in which he refides, infinite Space gives Room to in-Knowledge, and is, as it were, an Organ to Omaifcience and enjour such and their the most to

WERE the Soul separate from the Body, and with one Glance of Thought should flart beyond the Bounds of the Creation, should it for Millions of Years continue its Progress through infinite Space with the fame Activity, it would fill find itself within the Embrace of its Creator, and encompassed round with the Immentity of the Godhead. While we are in the Body is not less presents with us, because he is concealed from usua O that I know subtre I might find him ! lays Job: Bebeld I gosforward, but he is not there's and back-ward, but A camiet perceive him: On the left hands where he does work, but I cannot behold him: he bideth himself on the right hand that I cannot see him. In short, Reason as well as Revelation assure us, that he cannot be absent from us, notwithstanding he is undifcovered by uses very service for sold aloof year it OH!

I Nothis Confideration of God Almighty's Omniprefence and Omniscience every uncomfortable Thought vanishes. ... He cannot but segard every Thing that has Being, especially such of his Creatures who fear they are not regarded by him. He is privy to all their Thoughts, and to that Anxiety of Heart in particular, which is apt to trouble them on this Occasion : For, as it is impossible he should overlook any of his Creatures, so we may be consident that he regards, with an Eye of Mercy those who endeavour to recommend themfelves to bis Notice, and in an unfeigned Humility of Heart think themselves unworthy that he should be mind-Face to make this Court to a Lady, without he led dentiels from the Service to recommend bin, Authe

WOL. VIII.

Pro-

のの変化の対象の

Nº 566 Monday, July 12.

Militiæ Species Amor est - Ovid. Ars Am. 1. 2. v. 233, Love is a kind of Warfare.

As my Correspondents begin to grow pretty numerous. I think myself obliged to take some Notice of them, and shall therefore make this Paper a Miscellany of Letters. I have, since my re-assuming the Office of Spactator, received abundance of Rpistles from Gentlemen of the Blade, who, I find, have been so used to Action that they know not how to lie still. They feem generally to be of Opinion, that the Fair at home ought to reward them for their Services abroad, and that, till the Cause of their Country calls them again into the Field, they have a fort of Right to quarter themselves upon the Ladies. In order to favour their Approaches, I am defired by some to enlarge upon the Accomplishments of their Profession, and by others to give them my Advice in the carrying on their Attacks. But let us hear what the Gentlemen say for themselves.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

HO' it may look somewhat pervense amidst the Arts of Peace, to talk too much of War, it is but Gratitude to pay the last Office to its Manes, since even Peace itself is, in some Measure, obliged to it for * Its Being.

YOU have, in your former Papers, always recommended the Accomplished to the Favour of the Fair; and, I hope, you will allow me to represent some Part of a Military Life not altogether unnecessary to the forming a Gentleman. I need not tell you, that in France, whose Fashions we have been formerly so fond of, almost every one derives his Presences to Merit from the Sword; and that a Man has scarce the Face to make his Court to a Lady, without some Credentials from the Service to recommend him. As the * Profession is very ancient, we have Reason to think fome of the greatest Men among the old Remans derived many of their Virtues from it, their Commanders being frequently in other Respects some of the most thin-

ing Characters of the Age. THE Army not only gives a Man Opportunities of exercifing those two great Virtues Patience and Courage, but often produces them in Minds where they had foarce any Footing before. I must add, that it is one of the best Schools in the World to receive a general Notion of Mankind in, and a certain Freedom of Behaviour, which is not fo eafily acquired in any other Place. At the same time I must own, that some Military Airs are pretty extraordinary, and that a Man who goes into the Army a Coxcomb will come out of it a Sort of Public Nufance: But a Man of Senfe, or one who before had not been sufficiently used to a mixed Conversation, generally takes the true Turn. The Coust has in all Ages been allowed to be the Standard of Good-breeding; and I believe there is not a juster Observation in Monsieur Rochefoucault, than that A Man who has been bred up wholly to Bustness, can never get the Air of a Courtier at Court, but will immediately catch it in the Camp. The Reason of this most certainly is, that the very Essence of Good breeding and Politeness consists in several Niceties, which are so minute that they escape his Observation, and he falls fhort of the Original he would copy after; but when he fees the same Things charged and aggravated to a Fault, he no fooner endeavours to come up to the Pattern which is fet before him, than, though he stops somewhat short of that, he naturally rests where in reality he ought. I was, two or three Days ago, mightily pleased with the Observation of an humorous Gentleman upon one of his Friends, who was in other Respects every way an accomplished Perfon, That be wanted nothing but a Dash of the Cox-Alertness and Unconcern in the common Actions of · Life, which is usually so visible among Gentlemen of the Army, and which a Campaign or two would in-* fallibly have given him. YOU

YOU will eafily guess, Sir, by this my Panegyric upon a Military Education, that I am myfelf a Soldier, and indeed I am fo. I remember, within three Years after I had been in the Army, I was ordered into the Country a Recruiting. I had very particular Success in this part of the Service, and was over and above affured, at my going away, that I might have taken a young Lady, who was the most considerable Fortune in the Country along with me. I preferred the Pursuit of Fame at that time to all other Considerations, and tho' I was not absolutely bent on a wooden Leg, refolved at least to get a Scar or two for the good of Europe. I have at present as much as I defire of this fort of Honour, and if you could recommend me effectually, should be well enough contented to pass the Remainder of my Days in the Arms of some dear kind Creature, and upon a pretty Estate in the Country. This, as I take it, would be following the Example of Lucius Cincinnatus, the old Roman Dictator, who at the End of a War left the Camp to follow the Plough. I am, Sir, with all imaginable Respect,

Your most Obedient, Humble Serwant,

Will Warly.

Mr. SPECTATOR.

I am an Half-pay Officer, and am at present with a Friend in the Country. Here is a rich Widow in the Neighbourhood, who has made Fools of all the Fox-hunters within fifty Miles of her. She declares the intends to marry, but has not yet been asked by the Man she could like. She usually admits her humble Admirers to an Audience or two; but, after she has once given them Denial, will never see them more. I am assured by a Female Relation, that I shall have fair Play at her; but as my whole Success depends on my first Approaches, I desire your Advice, whether I had best Storm; or proceed by way of Sap.

most motorale say the high

I am, SIR,

Yours, &c.

P. S. I had forgot to tell you, that I have already carried one of her Outworks, that is, secured her Maid.

deliger significant

Mr. SPECTATOR,

Have affifted in several Sieges in the Low Countries, and being still willing to employ my Talents, as a Soldier and Engineer, lay down this Morning at Seven o' Clock before the Door of an obstinate Female, who had for some time refused me Admittance. I made a Lodgment in an outer Parlour about · Twelve: The Enemy retired to her Bed-Chamber, e yet I fill purfued, and about Two o'Clock this Afternoon the thought fit to Capitulate. Her Demands are . indeed somewhat high, in relation to the Settlement of her Fortune. But being in Possession of the House, I e intend to inlift upon Carte Blanche, and am in hopes, . by keeping off all other Pretenders for the Space of wenty four Hours, to flarve her into a Compliance. I beg your speedy Advice, and am, sate provinces of side and sale & J R. Yours,

From my Camp in Red Lion Square, Saturday four in the Afternoon. At reliab 4 and with the first of the territory

はいののはいのできているのからできていると

No 567 Wednesday, July 14:

but accommend with the rement from the halogala a da ku "hi "di Bib A Jili vit "likis that bee W arted when to the West that

Inceptus clamor frustratur biantes. viction and pricing prior at 1

Virg. Æn. 6. v. 49%.

- The weak Voice deceives their gasping Throats.

DRYDEN.

Have received private Advice from some of my Correspondents, that if I would give my Paper a general Run, I should take care to feason it with Scandal. have indeed observed of late that few Writings fell which are not filled with great Names and illustrious Titles. The Reader generally casts his Eye upon a new Book, and if he finds feveral Letters separated from one another another by a Dash, he buys it up, and peruses it with great Satisfaction. An M and an b, a T and an r, with a short Line between them, has sold many insipid Pamphlets. Nay I have known a whole Edition go off by virtue of two or three well written & c.

A sprinkling of the Words Faction, Frenchman, Parpist, Plunderer, and the like fignificant Terms, in an Italic Character, have also a very good Effect upon the Eye of the Purchaser; not to mention Scribler, Liar, Rogue, Rascal, Knave, and Villain, without which it is impossible to carry on a Modern Controversy.

OUR Party-writers are so sensible of the secret Virtue of an Innuendo to recommend their Productions, that of late they never mention the Q n or P t at length, though they speak of them with Honour, and with that Deference which is due to them from every private Person. It gives a secret Satisfaction to a Peruser of those mysterious Works, that he is able to decipher them without Help, and, by the Strength of his own natural Parts to fill up a Blank-Space, or make out a Word that has only the first or last Letter to it.

SOME of our Authors indeed, when they would be more Satirical than ordinary, omit only the Vowels of a great Man's Name, and fall most unmercifully upon all the Consonants. This way of Writing was first of all introduced by T-m Br--wn, of facetious Memory, who, after having gutted a Proper Name of all its intermediate Vowels, used to plant it in his Works, and make as free with it as he pleased, without any Danger of the Statute.

THAT I may imitate these celebrated Authors, and publish a Paper which shall be more taking than ordinary, I have here drawn up a very curious Libel, in which a Reader of Penetration will find a great deal of concealed Satire, and, if he be acquainted with the present Posture of Affairs, will easily discover the Meaning of it.

If there are four Persons in the Nation who endeavour to bring all things into Confusion, and ruin their native Country, I think every honest Engl-shm n ought to be upon his Guard. That there are fuch, every one will agree with me, who hears me name *** with his first Friend and Favourite *** not to his green

to mention *** nor *** These People may cry Ch-rch, Ch-rch as long as they please, but, to make nie of a homely Proverb, The Proof of the P--dd--ing is in the eating. This I am fure of, that if a certain Prince should concur with a certain Prelate, and we have Monsieur Z-n's Word for it) our Posterity would be in a fweet P—ckle. Must the British Nation suffer for sooth, because my Lady 2-p-1 s has been disobliged? Or is it reasonable that our English Fleet; which used to be the Terror of the Ocean, should lie Wind-bound for the take of a ....... I love to speak out and declare my Mind clearly, when I am talking for the Good of my Country. I will not make my Court to an ill Man, tho he were a B——y or a 7-y. Nay, I would not flick to call such a Politician, a Traitor, an Enemy to his Country, and a Bl-nd-rb-fs, &c, &c.

THE remaining Part of this political Treatife, which is written after the manner of the most celebrated Authors in Great-Britain, I may communicate to the Public at a more convenient Season. In the mean while I shall leave this with my curious Reader, as some ingenious Writers do their Enigmas, and if any fagacious Person can fairly unriddle it, I will print his Explanation, and, if he plea-les, acquaint the World with his Name.

I hope this short Essay will convince my Readers, it is not for want of Abilities that I avoid State-Tracts, and that if I would apply my Mind to it, I might in a little time be as great a Master of the Political Scratch as any the most eminent Writer of the Age. I shall only add, that in order to outshine all this Modern Race of Syncopists, and thoroughly content my English Reader, I intend shortly to publish a SPECTATOR, that shall not have a fingle Nowel in it. on 'make all const not be and bear all being back happed, it work is agrivery whately and looking

ENTREE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERT

Nº 568 Friday, July 16.

Dam recitas, incipit effe Tuus.

Mart. Epig. 30 la 1.

Reciting makes it thine.

66 C3 3VD

Was Vefterday in a Coffee House not far from the Royal-Exchange, where I observed three Persons in close Conference over a Pipe of Tobacco; upon which, having filled one for my own Use, I lighted it at the little Wax-Candle that flood before them; and after having thrown in two or three Whiffs amongst them, fat down and made one of the Company. I need not tell my Reader, that lighting a Man's Pipe at the fame Candle, is looked upon among Brother-fmokers as an Overture to Convertation and Friendship. As we here laid our Heads together in a very amicable Manner, being intrenched under a Cloud of our own raising. I took up the last Spectaton, and casting my Eye over it, The Spectaton, fays I, it way witty to day; upon which a lufty lethargic old Gentleman, who fat at the Upper end of the Table, having gradually blown out of his Mouth a great deal of Smoke, which he had been collecting for fome time before, Ay, fays he, more wirty than wife fam afraid. His Neighbour, who fat at his right Hand, immediate ly coloured, and being an angry Politician, laid down his Pipe with so much Wrath that he broke it in the Middle, and by that Means furnished me with a Tobacco-stopper. I took it up very fedately, and looking him full in the Face, made use of it from time to time all the while he was speaking: This Fellow, says he, can't for bis Life keep out of Politicks. Do you foe how he abuses four great Men bere? I fix'd my Eye very attentively on the Paper, and asked him if he meant those who were meant by Asteriks, Asteriks, says he, do you call them? they are all of them Stars. He might as well have put Garters to 'em. Then pray do but mind the two or three next Lines: Ch-rch and P-dd-ng in the same Sentence! Our Clergy are very much beholden to him. Upon this the third Gentleman. who was of a mild Disposition, and, as I found, a Whig in his Heart, defired him not to be too fevere upon the SPECTATOR neither; For, fays he, you find be is very cautious of giving Offence, and bas therefore put towo Dashes into his Pudding. A Fig for his Dash, says the angry Politician. In his next Sentence be gives a plain Innuendo, that our Posterity will be in a sweet P-ckle. What does the Fool mean by his Pickle? Why does be not write it at length, if he means boneftly? bave read over the whole Sentence, lays I; but I look upon the Parenthesis in the Belly of it to be the most dangerous Part, and as full of Instinuations as it can bold. But who, fays I, is my Lady Q -- p-t-s ? Ay, Anfiver that if you can, Sir, fays the furious Statesman to the poor Whig that fat over-against him. But without giving him Time to reply, I do affure you, says he, were Magnatum What is the World come to? Must every Magnatum, What is the World come to? Body be allowed to -- ? He had by this Time filled a new Pipe, and applying it to his Lips, when we expected the last Word of his Sentence, put us off with a Whist of Tobacco; which he redoubled with so much Rage and Trepidation, that he almost stifled the whole Company. After a thort Paule, I owned that I thought the Spectaton had gone too far in writing to many Letters of my Lady 2 potes's Name; but howover, lays I, be bas made a little Amends for it in bis next Sentence, subere be leaves a blank Space without for much as a Consonant to direct us. I mean, says I, after shofe Words, The Fleet, that used to be the Terfor of the Ocean, should be Wind bound for the sake of a-; after which ensues a Chasm, that in my Opinion looks modest enough. Sir, says my Antagonist, you may easily know his meaning by his Gaping: I suppose be designs his Chasm, as you call it, for an Hole to creep out at, but I believe it will bardly ferve bis Turn. can endure to see the great Officers of State, the B-y's and T-t's treated after fo fourtilous a Manmer? Mendery.

Nº 568

I can't for my Life, says I, imagine who they are the SPECTATOR means? No! says he!— Your bumble Servant, Sir! Upon which he flung himself back in his Chair after a contemptuous Manner, and smiled upon the old lethargic Gentleman on his left hand, who I found was his great Admirer. The Whig however had begun to conceive a Good-will towards me, and seeing my Pipe out, very generously offered me the Use of his Box; but I declined it with great Civility, being obliged to meet a Friend about that Time in another Quarter of the City.

AT my leaving the Coffee house, I could not forbear reflecting with myself upon that gross Tribe of Fools who may be termed the Over-wise, and upon the Difficulty of writing any thing in this censorious Age, which a weak Head may not confirme into private Saure and personal Reflexion.

A Man who has a good Note at an Immuende, fmells Treason and Sedition in the most innocent Words that can be put together, and never fees a Vice or Felly ftigmatized, but finds out one or other of his Acquaintance pointed at by the Writer. I remember an empty pragmatical Fellow in the Country, who upon reading over the cubole Duty of Man, had written the Names of feveral Persons in the Village at the Side of every Sin which is mentioned by that excellent Author; fo that he had converted one of the best Books in the World into a Libel against the 'Squire, Church-wardens, Overfeers of the Poor, and all other the most considerable Persons in the Parish. This Book with these extraordinary marginal Notes fell accidentally into the Hands of one who had never feen it before; upon which there arose a current Report that some Body had written a Book against the Squire and the whole Parish. The Minister of the Place having at that Time a Controverfy with fome of his Congregation upon the Account of his Tithes, was under some Suspicion of being the Author, till the good Man set the People right, by shewing them that the satirical Passages might be applied to feveral others of two or three neighbouring Villages, and that the Book was writ against all the Sinners in England. Asserted The State of the State

HEEGS AND TO BE STORY

No 569 Monday, July 19.

Hor. Ars Poet. v. 434.

Wife overe the Kings, who never chose a Friend, Till with full Cups they had unmask'd his Soul, And seen the bottom of his deepest Thoughts.

Roscommon.

TO Vices are so incurable as those which Men are apt to glery in. One would wonder how Drunkennels should have the good Luck to be of this Number. Anarcharfis, being invited to a Match of Drinking at Coristh, demanded the Prize very humourously, because he was drunk before any of the rest of the Company: for, says he, when we run a Race, he who arrives at the Goal first is intitled to the Reward: On the contrary, in this thirsty Generation, the Honour falls upon him who carries off the greatest Quantity of Liquor, and knocks down the rest of the Company I was the other Day with honest Will Funwell the West-Sexon, who was reckoning up how much Liquor had past through him in the last twenty Years of his Life, which, according to his Computation, amounted to twenty three Hogsheads of October, four Ton of Port, half a Kilderkin of small Beer, nineteen Barrels of Cider, and three Glasses of Champagne; besides which he had affifted at four hundred Bowls of Punch. not to mention Sips, Drams, and Whets without Number. I question not but every Reader's Memory will suggest to him several ambitious young Men, who are as wain in this Particular as Will Funnell, and can boaft of as glorious Exploits.

OUR modern Philosophers observe, that there is a general Decay of Moisture in the Globe of the Earth.

This

This they chiefly ascribe to the Growth of Vegetables, which incorporate into their own Substance many suid Bodies that never return again to their former Nature: But with Submission, they ought to throw into their Account those innumerable rational Beings which fetch their Nourishment chiefly out of Liquids; especially when we consider that Men, compar'd with their Fellow-Creatures, drink much more than comes to their Share.

BUT however highly this Tribe of People may think of themselves, a drunken Man is a greater Monster than any that is to be found among all the Creatures which God has made; as indeed there is no Character which appears more despicable and desormed, in the Eyes of all reasonable Persons, than that of a Drunkard. Bonosas, one of our own Countrymen, who was addicted to this Vice, having set up for a Share in the Roman Empire, and being deseated in a great Battle, hang'd himself. When he was seen by the Army in this melancholy Situation, notwithstanding he had behaved himself very bravely, the common Jest was, That the Thing they saw hanging upon the Tree before them, was not a Man but a Bottle.

THIS Vice has very fatal Effects on the Mind, the Body, and Fortune of the Person who is devoted to it.

IN regard to the Mind, it first of all discovers every Flaw in it. The sober Man, by the Strength of Reason, may keep under and subduc every Vice or Folly to which he is most inclined; but Wine makes every latent Seed sprout up in the Soul, and shew itself; it gives Fury to the Passions, and Force to those Objects which are apt to produce them. When a young Fellow complained to an old Philosopher that his Wife was not handsom, Put less Water in your Wine, says the Philosopher, and you'll quickly make her so. Wine heightens Indisference into Love; Love into Jealousy, and Jealousy into Madness. It often turns the Good-natured Man into an Idiot, and the Choleric into an Assassin It gives Bitterness to Refertment, it makes Vanity insupportable, and displays every little Spot of the Soul in its utmost Desormity.

More does this Vice only betray the hidden Faults of a Man, and flew them in the most odious Coloms, but often occasions Faults to which he is not naturally subject. There is more of Turn than of Truth in a Saying of Seneca; That Drunkenness does not produce but difeover Faults. Common Experience teaches the contrary. Wine throws a Man out of himself, and insufes Qualities into the Mind, which she is a Stranger to in her sober Moments. The Person you converse with, after the third Bottle, is not the same Man who at first sat down at Table with you. Upon this Maxim is founded one of the pretitiest Sayings I ever met with, which is inscribed to Publics Syrus, Qui sbrium ludificat ledit absentance. He subscripts upon a Man that is drunk, injures the Absent.

THUS does Drumkenness act in direct Contradiction to Reason, whose Business it is to clear the Mind of every Vice which is crept into it, and to guard it against all the Approaches of any that endeavours to make its Entrance. But besides shele ill Essects which this Vice produces in the Person who is actually under its Dominion, it has also a bad Instuence on the Mind even in its sober Moments, as it insensibly weakens the Understanding, impairs the Memory, and makes those Faults habitual which are produced by frequent Exceffes. (1 made and

I should now proceed to shew the ill Effects which this Vice has on the Bodies and Fortunes of Men y but these I shall reserve for the Subject of some suture Paper.

HE TO THE THE PARTY OF THE PART

Nº 570 Wednesday, July 21.

Chiming Trifles.

Hor. Ars Poet, v. 322.

HERE is scarce a Man living who is not actuated by Ambition. When this Principle meets with an honest Mind and great Abilities, it does infinite Service to the World; on the contrary, when a Man a Man only thinks of diffinguishing himself, without being thus qualified for it, he becomes a very pernicious or a very ridiculous Creature. I shall here confine myself to that pretty kind of Ambition, by which some Men grow eminent for odd Accomplishments, and trivial Performances. How many are there whose whole Reputation depends upon a Pun or a Quibble? You may often see an Arist in the Streets gain a Circle of Admirers by carrying a long Pole upon his Chin or Forehead in a perpendicular Posture. Ambition has taught some to write with their Feet, and others to walk upon their Hands. Some tumble into Fame, others grow immertal by throwing themselves through a Hoop.

Getera de genere boc adeò funt multa, loquacem
Delassare valent Fabium ----

Hor. Sat. 1. 1. 1. v. 13.

With Thousands more of this ambitious Race Wou'd tire e'en Fabius to relate each Cafe.

asques offered who tarefler by onder the Downston.

I am led into this Train of thought by an Adventure I

I was the other Day at a Tavern, where the Master of the House accommodating us himself with every thing we wanted, I accidentally fell into a Discourse with him; and talking of a certain great Man, who shall be nameless, he told me, That he had sometimes the Honour to treat bim with a Wbiftle; (adding by the way of Parenthesis) For you must know, Gentlemen, that I whistle the best of any Man in Europe. This naturally put me upon defiring him to give us a Sample of his Art; upon which he called for a Case-Knife, and applying the Edge of it to his Mouth, converted it into a mufical Instrument, and entertained me with an Italian Solo. Upon laying down his Knife, he took up a Pair of clean Tobacco-Pipes; and after having flid the small end of them over the Table in a most melodious Trill, he fetched a Tune out of them, whiftling to them at the fame time in Confort. In short, the Tobacco-Pipes became Musical Pipes in the Hands of our Virtuolo, who confessed to me ingenuously, he had broke fuch Quantitles of them, that he had almost broke himfelf, before he had brought this Piece of Mulie to any erable Perfection. I then told him I would bring a apuny of Friends to dine with him next Week, as an couragement to his Ingenuity; upon which he thanked me, faying. That he would provide himfelf with a new Frying Pan against that Day. I replied, That is was no Matter; Roft and Boiled would ferve our Turn. He finised at my Simplicity, and told me, That it was his Defign to give us a Tune upon it. As I was furpris'd at such a Promife, he fent for an old Prying-Pan, and grating it upon the Beard, whiftled to it in fuch a melodious Manner, that you could scarce distinguish it from a Bass-Viol. He then took his Seat with us at the Table, and hearing my Friend that was with me hum over a Tune to himself, he told him if he would fing out, he would accompany his Voice with a Tobacco-Pipe. As my Friend had an agreeable Bass, he chose rather to sing to the Frying-Pan; and indeed between them they made up a most extraordinary Confort. Finding our Landlord fo great a Proficient in Kitchen-Music, I asked him if he was Mafler of the Tongs and Key. He told me, that he had laid it down some Years since, as a little unfashionable; but that if I pleased he would give me a Lesson upon the Gridiron. He then informed me that he had added two Bars to the Gridiron, in order to give it a greater Compass of Sound; and I perceived was as well pleased with the Invention, as Sapphe could have been upon adding two Strings to the Lute. To be short, I found that his whole Kitchen was furnished with musical Instruments; and could not but look upon this Artist as a kind of Burlesk Musician.

HE afterwards of his own Accord fell into the Imitation of feveral Singing-Birds. My Friend and I toffed our Mistresses to the Nightingale, when all of a sudden we were surprised with the Music of the Thrush. He next proceeded to the Sky-Lark, mounting up by a proper Scale of Notes, and afterwards falling to the Ground with a very regular and easy Descent. He then contracted his Whistle to the Voice of several Birds of the smallest Size. As he is a Man of a larger Bulk and higher Stature than ordinary, you would fancy him him a Giant when you looked upon him, and a Tom-Tit when you thur your Byes. I must not omit acquainting my Reader, that this accomplished Person was formerly the Master of a Toyshop near Temple-Bur; and that the famous Charles Marbers was bred up under him. I am told that the Misfortunes which he has met with in the World, are chiefly owing to his great Application to his Music; and therefore cannot but recommend him to my Readers as one who deferves their Favour, and may afford them great Diversion over a Bottle of Wine, which he sells at the Queen's Arms, near the End of the little Piazza in Covent Garden, later greated dorsal talaged boy to the manda Coulor. Placing eyr Calum quid quarimus ultra? Luc.

Nº 571 Friday, July 23.

What feek we beyond Heavin!

A S the Work, I have engaged in, will not only confift of Papers of Humour and Learning, bet of feveral Effays Moral and Divine, I shall publish the following one, wich is founded on a former SPECT ATOR. and fent me by a particular Friend, not questioning but it will please such of my Readers, as think it no Disparagement to their Understandings to give way fometimes to a ferious Thought.

SIR I PO broad nine and to there

TN your Paper of Friday the 9th Instant, you had Oct casion to consider the Ubiquity of the Godhead, and at the fame time, to thew, that as he is present to every thing, he cannot but be attentive to every thing. and privy to all the Modes and Parts of its Existence: or, in other Words, that his Omniscience and Omnipresence are coexistent, and run together through the whole Infinitude of Space. This Confidenation might furnish us with many incentives to Devotion, and Mo-LIVES

tives to Morality; but as this Subject has been handled by feveral excellent Writers, I shall consider it in a Light wherein I have not feen it placed by others.

First, How disconsolate is the Condition of an intellectual Being, who is thus present with his Maker, but at the same time receives no extraordinary Benefit or Advantage from this his Presence !

Secondly, How deplorable is the Condition of an intellectual Being who feels no other Effects from this his Presence, but such as proceed from Divine Wrath and Indignation!

Thirdly, How happy is the Condition of that intellectual Being, who is sensible of his Maker's Presence from the secret Effects of his Mercy and Loving kindness!

First. How disconsolate is the Condition of an intellectual Being, who is thus present with his Maker, but at the same time receives no extraordinary Benefit or Advantage from this his Presence! Every Particle of Matter is actuated by this Almighty Being which passes through it. The Heavens and the Earth, the Stars and Planets move and gravitate by virtue of this great Principle within them. All the dead Parts of Nature are invigorated by the Presence of their Creator, and made capable of exerting their respective Qualities. The several Instincts, in the brute Creation, do likewife operate and work towards the feveral Ends which are agreeable to them, by this Divine Energy. Man only, who does not co-operate with his holy Spirit, and is unattentive to his Presence, receives none of those Advantages from it, which are perfective of his Nature, and necessary to his Well-being. The Divinity is with him, and in him, and every where about him, but of no Advantage to him. It is the fame thing to a Man without Religion, as if there were no God in the World. It is indeed impossible for an infinite Being to remove himself from any of his Creatures; but the he cannot withdraw his Effence from us, which would argue an Imperfection in him, he can withdraw from us all the loys and Confolations of it. His Presence may perhaps be necessary to support us in our Existence; but he may leave this our Existence Existence to itself, with regard to its Happiness or Missery. For, in this Sense, he may cast us away from his Presence, and take his holy Spirit from us. This single Consideration one would think sufficient to make us open our Hearts to all those Insusions of Joy and Gladness which are so near at hand, and ready to be poured in upon us; especially when we consider, Secondly, The deplorable Condition of an intellectual Being who seeds no other Effects from his Maker's Presence, but such as proceed from Divine Wrath and Indignation!

WE may affure ourselves, that the great Author of Nature will not always be as one, who is indifferent to any of his Creatures. Those who will not feel him in his Love, will be sure at length to feel him in his Displeasure. And how dreadful is the Condition of that Creature, who is only sensible of the Being of his Creator by what he suffers from him! He is as effentially present in Hell as in Heaven; but the Inhabitants of those accursed Places behold him only in his Wrath, and shrink within the Flames to conceal themselves from him. It is not in the Power of Invagination to conceive the searful Effects of Omnipotence incented.

BUT I shall only consider the Wretchedness of an intellectual Being, who, in this Life, lies under the Displeasure of him, that at all l'imes and in all Places is intimately united with him. He is able to disquiet the Soul, and vex it in all its Faculties. He can hinder any of the greatest Comforts of Life from refreshing us and give an Edge to every one of its flightest Calamities. Who then can bear the Thought of being an Out-cast from his Presence, that is, from the Comforts of it, or of feeling it only in its Terrors? How pathetic is that Expostulation of Job, when, for the Trial of his Patience he was made to look upon himfelf in this deplorable Condition! Why haft thou fet me as a Mark against thee, so that I am become a Burden to myfelf? But Thirdly, how happy is the Condition of that intellectual Being, who is fensible of his Maker's Presence from the secret Effects of his Mercy and Loving kindnes total to analysis (see 50 tolors dis 152 to

THE Bleffed in Heaven behold him Face to Face. that is, are as fentible of his Prefence as we are of the Prefence of any Person whom we look upon with our Eyes. There is doubtless a Faculty in Spirits, by which they apprehend one another, as our Senses do material Objects; and there is no Question but our Souls, when they are disembodied, or placed in glo-rified Bodies, will by this Faculty, in whatever Part of Space they refide, be always fenfible of the Divine Presence. We, who have this Veil of Flesh standing between us and the World of Spirits, must be content to know that the Spirit of God is present with us. by the Effects which he produceth in us. Our outward Senses are too gross to apprehend him; we may however tafte and fee how gracious he is, by his Influence upon our Minds, by those virtuous Thoughts which he awakens in us, by those secret Comforts and Refreshments which he conveys into our Souls, and by those ravishing loys and inward Satisfactions which are perpetually springing up, and diffusing themselves among all the Thoughts of good Men. He is lodged in our very Effence, and is as a Soul within the Soul to irradiate its Understanding, rectify its Will, purify its Paffions, and enliven all the Powers of Man. How happy therefore is an intellectual Being, who, by Prayer and Meditation, by Virtue and good Works, opens this Communication between God and his own Soul! Tho' the whole Creation frowns upon him, and all Nature looks-black about him, he has his Light and Support within him, that are able to cheer his Mind, and bear him up in the midit of all those Horrors which encompass him. He knows that his Helper is at hand, and is always nearer to him than any thing elfe can be, which is capable of annoying or terrifying him. In the midst of Calumny or Contempt, he attends to that Being who whispers better things within his Soul, and whom he looks upon as his Defender, his Glory, and the Lifterup of his Head. In his deepest Solitude and Retirement he knows that he is in Company with the greatest of Beings; and perceives within himself such real Sensations of his Presence, as are more delightful than any thing that can be met with in the Conversation of hi Creatures.

Creatures. Even in the Hour of Death, he considers the Pains of his Diffolution to be nothing else but the breaking down of that Partition, which stands between his Soul, and the Sight of that Being, who is always pr fent with him, and is about to manifest itself to him is OR W

Fulness of Joy.

IF we would be thus happy, and thus fenfible of our Maker's Prefence, from the fecret Effects of his Mercy and Goodness, we must keep such a Watch over all our Thoughts, that, in the Language of the Scripture, his Soul may have Pleasure in us. We must take care not to grieve his holy Spirit, and endeavour to make the Meditations of our Hearts always acceptable in his Sight. that he may delight thus to refide and dwell in us. The Light of Nature could direct Seneca to this Doctrine, in a very remarkable Paffage among his Epiffles; Sacer inest in nobis spiritus bonorum malorumque custos, & observator, & quemadmodum nos illum trastamus, ita Fille nos. There is a holy Spirit refiding in us, who watches and observes both good and evil Men, and will treat us after the fame Manner that we treat him.' But I shall conclude this Discourse with those more emphasize tical Words in Divine Revelation. If a man love me, be will keep my Words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto bin, and make our Abode with bim.

DERESTA TO CAMERICAL

572. Monday, July 26.

-Quod medicorum est Promittunt medici - Hor. Ep. 1. 1. 2. v. 115.

Physicians only boast the healing Art.

Am the more pleased with these my Papers, fince I find they have encouraged feveral Men of Learning and Wit to become my Correspondents: I Yesterday received the following Essay against Quacks, which

Tindure'

I shall here communicate to my Readers for the Good of the Publick, begging the Writer's Pardon for those Additions and Retrenchments which I have made in it.

fion, that I have long fince ceased to wonder at the great Encouragement which the Practice of Physic finds among us. Well-conflituted Governments have always made the Profession of a Physician both honourable and advantageous. Homer's Machain and Virgil's Iapis were Men of Renown, Heroes in War, and made at least as much Havock among their Enemies as among their Friends. Those who have little of no Faith in the Abilities of a Quack will apply themselves to him, either because he is willing to sell health at a reasonable Profit, or because the Patient, like a drowning Man, catches at every Twig, and hopes for Relief from the most Ignorant, when the most able Physicians give him, none. Though Impudence and many Words are as necessary to these Itinerary Galeni as a laced Hat on a Merry Andrew, yet they would turn very little to the Advantage of the Owner, if there were not some inward Disposition in the ficle Man to savour the Pretensions of the Mountebank. Love of Life in the one, and of Money in the other, creates a good Correspondence between them.

one of this Tribe who takes it into his Protection, and on the Market Day harangues the good People of the Place with Aphorisms and Receipts. You may depend upon it, he comes not there for his own private Interest, but out of a particular Affection to the Town. I remember one of these public-spirited Artists at Hammer/mith, who told his Audience, That he had been born and bred there, and that having a special Regard for the Place of his Nativity, he was determined to make a Present of Five Shillings to as many as would accept of it. The whole Croud stood agape, and ready to take the Doctor at his Word: when putting his Hand into a long Bag, as every one was expecting his Crown-Piece, he drew out an Handful of little Packets, each of which he informed the Spectators was con-

Tincture:

fantly fold at Five Shillings and Six Pence, but that he would have the odd Five Shillings to every Inhabitant of that Place: The whole Allembly immediately closed with this generous Offer, and took off all his Physic, after the Doctor had made them youch for one another, that there were no Foreigners among them, but that they were all Hammer mith Men.

THERE is another Branch of Pretenders to this Art, who, without either Horse or Pickle Herring, lie fing in a Garret, and fend down Notice to the World of their extraordinary Parts and Abilities by printed Bills and Advertisements. These seem to have derived their Custom from an Eastern Nation which Herodotus speaks of, among whom it was a Law, that whenever any Cure was performed, both the Method of the Cure, and an Account of the Distemper, should be fixed in some Public Place; but as Customs will corrupt, these our Moderns provide themselves of Persons to attest of the Prescription. I have heard of a Porter, who forves as a Knight of the Post under one of these Operators, and, tho he was never fick in his Life, has been cured of all the Diseases in the Dispensary. These are the Men whose Sagacity has invented Elixirs of all forts, Pills and Lozenges, and take it as an Affront if you come to them before you are given over by every Body elle. Their Medicines are infallible, and never fail of Success, that is of enriching the Doctor, and setting the Patient effectually at Rest.

I lately dropt into a Coffee-house at Westminster, where I found the Room hung round with Ornaments of this Nature. There were Elixirs, Tinctures, the Anodyne Fotus, English Pills, Electuaries, and in short more Remedies than I believe there are Diseases. At the Sight of so many Inventions, I could not but imagine myself in a kind of Arsenal or Magazine, where store of Arms was reposited against any sudden Invasion. Should you be attack'd by the Enemy side ways, here was an infallible Piece of desensive Armour to cure the Pleurisy: Should a Distemper beat up your Head-Quarters, here you might purchase an impenetrable Helmet, or, in the Language of the Artist, a Cephalic

Tincture: If your main Body be affaulted, here are various Kinds of Armour in case of various Onfast. I began to congratulate the present Age upon the Happiness Men might reasonably hope for in Life, when Death was thus in a manner descated, and when Pain itself would be of so there a Duration, that it would but just forve to enhance the Value of Pleasure: While I was in these Thoughts, I unluckily called to mind a Story of an ingenious Gentleman of the last Age, who lying violently afflicted with the Gout, a Person came and offered his Service to cure him by a Method, which he affured him was infallible; the Servant who received the Message carried it up to his Master, who inquiring whether the Person came on Foot or in a Chariot: and being informed that he was on Foot: Go, fays he, fend the Kname about his Bufiness: Was his Method as infallible us be pretends, he would long before now bave been in bis Coach and Six. In like manner I concluded, that had all these Advertisers arrived to that Skill they Years successively to publish to the World the Place of their Abode, and the Virtues of their Medicines. One of these Gentlemen indeed pretends to an effectual Cure for Leannels: What Effects it may have upon those who have try'd it I cannot tell; but I am eredibly informed, that the Call for it has been fo great, that it has effectually cured the Doctor himself of that Diffemper. Could each of them produce to good an Inflance of the Success of his Medicines, they might foon persuade the World into an Opinion of them.

I observe that most of the Bills agree in one Expression, viz. that (with God's Bleffing) they perform such and such Oures: This Expression is certainly very proper and emphasical, for that is all they have for it. And if ever a Cure is performed on a Patient where they are concerned, they can claim no greater share in it than Virgil's Iapis in the curing of Eneas; the tried his Shill, was very assiduous about the Wound, and indeed was the only wishle Means that relieved the Hero; but the Poet assures us it was the particular Assistance of a Deity that speeded the Operation. An English Reader may see the whole Story in Mr. Doyler's Translation.

Prop'd

213 Prop don bie Lance then	benfive Here Bood . : 2205 Min T
I And blard, and face warmer	d the Mourning Crowd. sv
- The fam'd Phylician tuch	bis Rober around not or more
With study Blands; and the	frens to the Wand. 1 as V. Jan.
The tree to the second second	former bis Part, it said styr
This way and that fonceren	g the Bart, of to ad I in
And exercises all his Hear	my Art.
All foftning Simples, know	n of Sovereign Use, I state at
He proffes out, and pours th	eir noble Juice;
These first infused, to lenify	the Pains befalle venelous
He tugs with Pincers, but	be tugs in wain. al barneo
Then to the Patron of his A	les be prayed; and besults and
The Patron of his Art refe	the Mediage carribal side "
But morn the Gadlete Ma	ther, mould with Grief, and
And simil denies Die La	The state of the s
And piere a conto l'ing, baj	fens ber Relief. and and ans
A Dranco of Healing Ditt	any fee brought;
Which in the Cretan Fields	with Care fee fought
. Rough is the Stem, which	woolly Leaves furround ;
The Leaves with Flower.	the flowers mich Purals
THE REPORT OF THE PARTY S	word bloom wade to the have
Well known to wounded Go	att a fore Relief
5 To draw the painted Steel.	and leafe the Griefood A reads
This Venus brings in Claus	di tavolo destand brevesil.
The extrasted Liquor quith	Ambrofian Dews, 1911 10 and a Proper Poposes . Il-G	A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A
Tank air al Ministra	en fe fands biger sont orbe
Lemp ring the Mixture quit	b ber Heav'nly Hands:
Mus pours it in a Bowl ale	rady eroun'd
With fuce of med cinal	tierbs, prepard to bothe the
Elastin County in the very side of	this the of his filedicine
1 De Leech, unknowing of h	sperion Apt an other time Wall
Which aids the Gure, with	this foment the Parts
And in a Moment ceas'd the	raging Smart. seds
Stanch'd is the Blood, and	in the last on A I
The Steel, but fearcely touc	bed with and the
Mogies set and follows of	a a conta renaer cianas,
Moves up, and follows of	its own accord;
And Health and Vigour are	at once reftor daily
Inpis first perceiu d the clos	ing Mounds in the Little Trans
And first the Footsteps of a	God be found sould have the
JITMS. Atms   be ensee . th	a Smood and CE 111
Ana lena toe quilling ubief.	Transport Asta Was
J WH W NO TROTTELL VE BYR NO	LAITE OF CONTRACT LAND
Nor Art's Effett, but done	by Hands Diwines of class
	W
	Wednesday,

WHEN THE THE WAY WE WANTED

Nº 573 Wednesday, July 28.

Caftigata remordent. Juv. Sat. 2. v. 35.

Y Paper on the Club of Widows has brought me in feveral Letters; and among the rest, a long one from Mrs. President, as follows:

Smart S I R.

V/OU are pleased to be very merry, as you ima-I gine, with us Widows: And you feem to ground your Satire on our receiving Consolation so soon after the Death of our Dears, and the Number we are pleased to admit to our Companions; but you never reflect what Husbands we have buried, and how short a Sorrow the Loss of them was capable of occafioning. For my own part, Mrs. President as you call me, my first Husband I was marry'd to at Fourteen by my Uncle and Guardian (as I afterwards discovered) by way of Sale, for the third Part of my Fortune. This Fellow looked upon me as a mere Child, he might breed up after his own Fancy; if he kiffed my Chamber-Maid before my Face, I was supposed fo ignorant, how could I think there was any Hurt in it? When he came home Roaring Drunk at five in the Morning; 'twas the Custom of all Men that live in the World. I was not to see a Peny of Money, for, poor Thing, how could I manage it? He took a handsom Cousin of his into the House (as he faid) to be my House-keeper, and to govern my Servants; for how should I know how to rule a Family? and while she had what Money she pleased, which was but reasonable for the Trouble she was at for my Good, I was not to be so censorious as to dislike Pamiliarity and Kindness between near Relations. I Vol. VIII.

was too great a Coward to contend, but not fo ignorant a Child to be thus imposed upon. I referred his Contempt as I ought to do, and as most poor palfive blinded Wives do, 'till it pleafed Heaven to take away my Tyrant, who left me free Possession of my own Land, and a large Jointure. My Youth and Money brought me many Lovers, and feveral endeavoured to establish an Interest in my Heart while my Husband was in his last Sickness; the Honourable Edward Waitfort was one of the first who addressed to me, advised to it by a Cousin of his that was my intimate Friend, and knew to a Peny what I was worth. Mr. Waitfort is a very agreeable Man, and every Body would like him as well as he does himself. if they did not plainly see that his Esteem and Love is all taken up, and by fuch an Object, as 'tis impossible to get the better of. I mean himself. He made no doubt of marrying me within Four or Five Months. and began to proceed with fuch an affured eafy Air, that piqued my Pride not to banish him; quite contrary, out of pure Malice, I heard his first Declaration with fo much innocent Surprise, and blushed so prettily, I perceived it touched his very Heart, and he thought me the best-natured Silly poor thing on Earth. When a Man has fuch a Notion of a Woman, he loves her better than he thinks he does. I was overjoyed to be thus revenged on him, for defigning on my Fortune; and finding it was in my Power to make his Heart ake, I resolved to complete my Conquest, and entertained several other Pretenders. The first Impression of my undefigning Innocence was so frong in his Head, he attributed all my Followers to the inevitable Force of my Charms; and from feveral Blushes and fide Glances, concluded himself the Favourite; and when I used him like a Dog for my Diversion, he thought it was all Prudence and Fear. and pitied the Violence I did my own Inclinations to comply with my Friends, when I married Sir Nicholas · Fribble of Sixty Years of Age. You know, Sir, the · Case of Mrs. Medlar, I hope you would not have had me cry out my Eyes for such a Husband. I shed Tears enough for my Widowhood a Week after my Marriage, and when he was put in his Grave, reckoning he had been two Years dead, and myfelf a Widow of that Standing, I married three Weeks afterwards John Sturdy, Esq; his next Heir. I had indeed some Thoughts of taking Mr. Waitfort, but I found he could flay, and besides he thought it indecent to ask me to marry again, 'till my Year was out; so privately resolving him for my Fourth, I took Mr. Stundy for the present. Would you believe, Sir, Mr. Sturdy was just Five and Twenty, about Six Foot high, and the floutest Fox-hunter in the Country, and I believe I wished ten thousand times for my old Fribble again; he was following his Dogs all the Day, and all the Night keeping them up at Table with him and his Companions: however I think myself obliged to them for leading him a Chace in which he broke his Neck. Mr. Waitfort began his Addresses anew, and I verily believe I had married him now, but there was a young Officer in the Guards, that had debauched two or three of my Acquaintance, and I could not forbear being a little vain of his Courtship. Mr. Waitfort heard of it, and read me such an insolent Lecture upon the Conduct of Women, I married the Officer that very Day, out of pure Spite to him. Half an Hour after I was married I received a Penitential Letter from the Honourable Mr. Edward Waitfort, in which he begged Pardon for his Passion, as proceeding from the Violence of his Love: I triumphed when I read it, and could not help, out of the Pride of my Heart, shewing it to my new Spoule; and we were very merry together upon it. Alas! my Mirth lasted a short time; my young Husband was very much in Debt when I marry'd him, and his first Action afterwards was to fet up a gilt Chariot and Six in fine Trappings before and behind. I had married to hafully, I had not the Prudence to referve my Estate in my own Hands; my ready Money was lost in two Nights at the Groom-Porters; and my Diamond Necklace, which was stole I did not know how, I met in the Street upon Jenny Wheedle's Neck. My Plate vanished Piece by Piece, and I had been reduced to downright Pewter, if my Officer had not been deliciously killed in a Duel, by a Fellow that had cheated him of Five Hundred Pounds, and afterwards, at his own Request, satisfied him and me too, by running him through the Body. Mr. Waitfort was ttill in Love, and told me so again; and to prevent all Fears of ill Usage, he defir'd me to rolerve every thing in my own Hands: But now my Acquaintance began to wish me Joy of his Constancy, my Charms were declining, and I could not refift the Delight I took in shewing the young Flirts about Town, it was yet in my Power to give Pain to a Man of Serife. This and fome private Hopes he would hang himself, and what a Glory would it be for me, and how I should be envy'd, made me accept of being third Wife to my Lord Friday. I proposed from my Rank and his Estate, to live in all the Joys of Pride, but how was I mile taken? he was neither extravagant nor ill natured, nor debauched. I suffered however more with him than with all my others. He was splenetic: I was forced to fit whole Days hearkening to his imaginary Ails; it was impossible to tell what would please him; what he liked when the Sun shined, made him sick when it rained; he had no Distemper, but lived in constant Fear of them all: My good Genius dictated to me to bring him acquainted with Doctor Gruel; from that Day he was always contented, because he had Names for all his Complaints; the good Doctor furnished him with Reasons for all his Pains, and Prefcriptions for every Fancy that troubled him; in hot Weather he lived upon Juleps, and let Blood to prevent Fevers; when it grew cloudy he generally apprehended a Confumption; to shorten the History of this wretched Part of my Life, he ruined a good Confitution by endeavouring to mend it, and took fevera Medicines, which ended in taking the grand Reme dy, which cured both him and me of all our Unea finesses. After his Death, I did not expect to hear any more of Mr. Waitfort, I knew he had renounced me to all his Friends, and been very witty upon my Choice, which he affected to talk of with great Indifferency; I gave over thinking of him, being told that he was engaged with a pretty Woman and a great · Fo.tune;

Portune: it vexed me a little, but not enough to make me neglect the Advice of my Confin Wilbwell, that came to fee me the Day my Lord went into the Country with Ruffel; she told me experimentally, nothing out an unfaithful Lover and a dear Husband fo foon out of one's Head, as a new one; and, at the fame time, propos'd to me a Kinfman of hers; You understand enough of the World (faid she) to know Money is the most valuable Consideration; he is very rich, and I am fure cannot live long; he has a Cough that must carry him off soon. I knew afterwards she had given the felf same Character of me to him; but however I was fo much perfuaded by her, I haffned on the Match, for fear he should die before the time came; he had the same Fears, and was so pressing. I married him in a Fortnight, refolving to keep it private a Fortnight longer. During this Fortnight Mr. Waitfort came to make me a Visit; he told me he -had waited on me fooner, but had that Respect for me. he would not interrupt me in the first Day of my Affliction for my dead Lord; that as foon as he heard I was at Liberty to make another Choice, he had broke of a Match very advantageous for his Fortune just upon the Point of Conclusion, and was forty times more in Love with me than ever. I never received more Pleasure in my Life than from this Declaration, but I composed my Face to a grave Air. and faid the News of his Engagement had touched me to the Heart, that, in a rash jealous Fit, I had married a Man I could never have thought on if I had not loft all hopes of him. Good-natured Mr. Waitfors had like to have dropped down dead at hearing this, but went from me with such an Air as plainly shewed me he laid all the Blame upon himself, and hated those Friends that had advised him to the Fatal Application; he feemed as much touched by my Miffortune as his own, for he had not the least Doubt I was still passionately in love with him. The Truth of the Story is, my new Husband gave me Reason to repent I had not staid for him; he had married me for my Money, and I foon found he loved Money to Distraction; there was nothing he would not do to get it, nothing he would not fuffer to preserve it; the smallest Expence kept him awake whole Nights, and when he paid a Bill, 'twas with as many Sighs, and after as many Delays, as a Man that endures the Lofs. of a Limb. I heard nothing but Reproofs for Extravagancy whatever I did. I saw very well that he would have starved me, but for losing my Jointures; and he fuffered Agonies between the Grief of seeing me have so good a Stomach, and the Fear that, if he made me fast, it might prejudice my Health. I did not doubt he would have broke my Heart, if I did not break his. which was allowed by the Law of Self-defence. The Way was very easy. I resolved to spend as much Money as I could, and, before he was aware of the Stroke. appeared before him in a two thousand Pound Diamond' Necklace; he faid nothing, but went quietly to his · Chamber, and, as it is thought, composed himself with a Dose of Opium. I behaved myself so well upon the Occasion, that to this Day I believe he died of an Apoplexy. Mr. Waitfort was refolved not to be too late this time, and I heard from him in two Days. I am almost out of my Weed at this present Writing, and very doubtful whether I'll marry him or no. I do not think of a Seventh, for the ridiculous Reason you mention, but out of pure Morality that I think so much Conflancy should be rewarded, tho' I may not do it after all perhaps. I do not believe all the unreasonable Malice of Mankind can give a Pretence why I should have been constant to the Memory of any of the Deceased, or have spent much time in grieving for an insolent, infignificant, negligent, extravagant, splenetic, or covetous · Husband; my first insulted me, my second was nothing to me, my third disgusted me, the fourth would have ruined me, the fifth tormented me, and the fixth would · have starved me. If the other Ladies you name would thus give in their Husbands Pictures at length, you would fee they have had as little Reason as myself to lose their · Hours in weeping and wailing. of the stage in any new ideas of the said to and the ball of the religion to the property of the co and a company of the company of the world the company of

THE STATE OF THE S

Nº 574 Friday, July 300

Non possidentem multa vocaveris Rece Beatum; rectius occupat Namen Beati, qui Deorum Muneribus sapienter uti, Duranque callet pauperiem pati.

Hor. Od. 9.1. 4. V. 45

Believe not those that Lands posses,

And shining Heaps of useless Ore,

The only Lords of Happiness;

But rather those that know,

For what kind Fates bestow,

And have the Art to use the Store:

That have the generous Skill to bear

The hated Weight of Poverty.

CREECH.

about the great Secret. As this kind of Men (I mean those of them who are not professed Cheats) are over-run with Enthusiasm and Philosophy, it was very amusing to hear this religious Adept descanting on his pretended Discovery. He talked of the Secret as of a Spirit which lived within an Emerald, and converted every thing that was near it to the highest Bersection it is capable of. It gives a Lustre, says he, to the Sun, and Water to the Diamond. It irradiates every Metal, and enriches Lead with all the Properties of Gold. It heightens Smoke into Flame, Flame into Light, and Light into Glory. He further added, that a single Ray of it dissipates Pain, and Care, and Melancholy from the Person on whom it falls. In short, says he, its Presence naturally changes every Place into a kind of Heaven. After he had gone on for some Time in this unintelligible Cant, I found that he jumbled natural and moral Ideas together into the same

Discourse, and that his great Secret was nothing else but

THIS Virtue does indeed produce in some measure, all those Effects which the Alchymist usually ascribes to what he calls the Philosophers Stone; and is it does not bring Riches, it does the same thing, by banishing the Desire of them. If it cannot remove the Disquietudes arising out of a Man's Mind, Body, or Fortune, it makes him easy under them. It has indeed a kindly Instuence on the Soul of Man, in respect of every Being to whom he stands related. It extinguishes all Murmur, Repining, and Ingratitude towards that Being who has allotted him his Part to act in this World. It destroys all inordinate Ambition, and every Tendency to Corruption, with regard to the Community wherein he is placed. It gives Sweetness to his Conversation, and a perpetual Serenity to all his Thoughts.

AMONG the many Methods which might be made use of for the acquiring of this Virtue, I shall only mention the two following. First of all, A Man should always consider how much he has more than he wants; and Secondly, How much more unhappy he might be than he really is-

FIRST of all, A Man should always consider how much more he has than he wants. I am wonderfully pleased with the Reply which Aristippus made to one who condoled him upon the Loss of a Farm: Why, said he, I have three Farms still, and you have but one; so that I ought rather to be afficied for you than you for me. On the contrary, soolish Men are more apt to consider what they have lost than what they posses; and to fix their Eyes upon those who are richer than themselves, rather than on those who are under greater Difficulties. All the real Pleasures and Conveniences of Life lie in a narrow Compass; but it is the Humour of Mankind to be always looking forward, and straining after one who has got the Start of them in Wealth and Honour. For this Reason, as there are none can be properly called rich, who have not more than they want; there are few rich Men in any of the politer Nations but among the middle Sort of People, who keep their Wishes within their Fortunes, and have more Wealth than they know how to enjoy. Persons of a higher Ranks live in a kind of splendid Poverty, and are perpetually wanting, because, instead of acquiescing in the solid Pleasures of Life, they endeavour to outvy one another in Shadows and Appearances. Men of Sense have at all times beheld with a great deal of Mirth this filly Game that is playing over their Heads, and, by contracting their Defires, enjoy all that fecret Satisfaction which others are always in quest of. The Truth is, this ridiculous Chace after imaginary Pleasures cannot be fufficiently exposed, as it is the great Source of those Evils which generally undo a Nation. Let a Man's Estate be what it will, he is a poor Man if he does not live within it, and naturally fets himself to Sale to any one that can give him his Price. When Pittacus, after the Death of his Brother, who had left him a good Estate, was offered a great Sum of Money, by the King. of Lydia, he thanked him for his Kindness, but told him he had already more by Half than he knew what to do with. In short, Content is equivalent to Wealth, and Luxury to Poverty; or to give the Thought a more agreeable Turn, Content is natural Wealth, fays Socrases; to which I shall add, Luxury is artificial Powerty. I shall therefore recommend to the Consideration of those who are always aiming after superfluous and imaginary Enjoyments, and will not be at the Trouble of contracting their Defires, an excellent Saying of Bion the Philosopher; namely, That no Man bas so much Care, as he who endeavours after the most Happiness.

IN the second Place, Every one ought to resect how much more unhappy he might be than he really is. The former Consideration took in all those who are sufficiently provided with the Means to make themselves easy; this regards such as actually lie under some Pressure or Missortune: These may receive great Alleviation from such a Comparison as the unhappy Person may make between himself and others, or between the Missortune which he suffers, and greater Missortunes which might have befallen him.

I like the Story of the honest Dutebman, who, upon breaking his Leg by a Fall from the Mainmast, told the Standers by, It was a great Mercy that 'twas not his his Neck. To which, fince I am got into Quotations, give me leave to add the Saying of an old Philosopher, who, after having invited fome of his Friends to dine with him, was ruffled by his Wife that came into the Room in a Passion, and threw down the Table that stood before them; Every one, fays he, bas bis Calamity, and be is a bappy Man that has no greater than this. We find an Inflance to the same Purpose in the Life of Doctor Hammond, written by Bishop Fell. As this good Man was troubled with a Complication of Distempers, when he had the Gout upon him, he used to thank God that it was not the Stone; and when he had the Stone, that he had not both these Distempers on him at the fame time.

I cannot conclude this Essay without observing that there was never any System besides that of Christianity, which could effectually produce in the Mind of Man the Virtue I have been hitherto speaking of. In order to make us content with our present Condition, many of the present Philosophers tell us that our Discontent only hurts ourselves, without being able to make any Alteration in our Circumstances; others, that whatever Evil befals us is derived to us by a fatal Necessity, to which the Gods themselves are subject; while others very gravely tell the Man who is miserable, that it is necessary he should be so to keep up the Harmony of the Universe, and that the Scheme of Providence would be troubled and perverted were he otherwise. These, and the like Confiderations, rather filence than fatisfy a Man. They may flew him that his Discontent is unreasonable, but are by no means sufficient to relieve it. They rather give Despair than Consolation. In a word, a Man might reply to one of these Comforters, as Augustus did to his Friend who advised him not to grieve for the Death of a Person whom he loved, because his Grief could not fetch him again : It is for that very Reafon, faid the Emperor, that I grieve.

ON the contrary, Religion bears a more tender Regard to human Nature. It prescribes to a very miserable Manthe Means of bettering his Condition; nay, ithews him, that the bearing of his Afflictions as he ought to do will naturally end in the Removal of them: It makes him easy here, because it can make him happy hereafter.

UPON the whole, a contented Mind is the greatest Bleffing a Man can enjoy in this World; and if in the present Life his Happiness arises from the subduing of his Defires, it will arise in the next from the Gratification

《公司》

Monday, August 2.

Nec morti esse locum

No room is less Son D. F. Virg. Georg. 4. v. 226. No room is left for Death. DRYBEN.

LEWD young Fellow feeing an aged Hermit go by him barefoot, Father, fays he, you are in a very misenable Condition if there is not another World. True, Son, said the Hermit, but what is thy Condition if there is? Man is a Creature defigned for two different States of Being, or rather, for two different Lives. His first Life is short and transient; his fecond permanent and lafting. The Question we are all concerned in is this, In which of those two Lives is our chief Interest to make ourselves happy? Or in other Words, Whether we should endeavour to secure to ourselves the Pleasures and Gratifications of a Life which is uncertain and precarious, and at its utmost Length of a very inconfiderable Duration; or to secure to ourselves the Pleasures of a Life which is fixed and fottled, and will never end? Every Man, upon the first hearing of this Question, knows very well which Side of it he ought to close with. But however right we are in Theory, it is plain that in Practice we adhere to the wrong Side of the Question. We make Provisions 15.32 for this Life as the it were never to have an End, and for the other Life as the it were never to have a Be-

SHOULD a Spirit of Superior Rank, who is a Stranger to human Nature, accidentally alight upon the Earth, and take a Survey of its Inhabitants; what would his Notions of us be? Would not he think that we are a Species of Beings made for quite different Ends and Purpoles than what we really are? Must not he imagine that we were placed in this World to get Riches and Honours? Would not he think that it was our Duty to toil after Wealth, and Station, and Title? Nay, would not be believe we were forbidden Poverty by Threats of eternal Punishment, and enjoined to pursue our Pleasures under Pain of Damnation? He would certainly imagine that we were influenced by a Scheme of Duties quite opposite to those which are indeed prescribed to us. And truly, according to fuch an Imagination, he must conclude that we are a Species of the most obedient Creatures in the Universe: that we are constant to our Duty: and that we keep a fleddy Eye on the End for which we were fent hither.

BUT how great would be his Aftonishment, when he learnt that we were Beings not defigned to exist in this World above Threefcore and Ten Years; and that the greatest Part of this busy Species fall short even of that Age? How would he be loft in Horror and Admiration, when he should know that this Set of Creatures, who lay out all their Endeavours for this Life, which scarce deserves the Name of Existence, when, I say, he should know that this Set of Creatures are to exist to all Eternity in another Life, for which they make no Preparations? Nothing can be a greater Difgrace to Reason, than that Men who are persuaded of these two different States of Beings, should be perpetually employed in providing for a Life of Threefcore and Ten Years. and neglecting to make Provision for that, which after many Myriads of Years will be still new, and still beginning; especially when we consider that our Endeavours for making ourselves great, or rich, or honourable, or whatever else we place our Happiness in, may after all prove unfuccessful; whereas if we constantly and fincerely endeavour to make ourselves happy in the other Life, we are sure that our Endeavours will succeed, and that we shall not be disappointed of our Hope.

THE following Question is started by one of the Schoolmen. Supposing the whole Body of the Earth were a great Ball or Mass of the sinest Sand, and that a single Grain or Particle of this Sand should be annihilated every thousand Years. Supposing then that you had it in your Choice to be happy all the while this prodigious Mass of Sand was consuming by this slow Method sill there was not a Grain of it lest, on Condition you were to be miserable for ever after; or supposing that you might be happy for ever after, on Condition you would be miserable till the whole Mass of Sand were thus annihilated at the Rate of one Sand in a thousand Years: Which of these two Cases would you make your Choice?

IT must be confessed in this Case, so many Thousands of Years are to the Imagination as a kind of Eternity, the in reality they do not bear to great a Proportion to that Duration which is to follow them, as an Unite does to the greatest Number which you can put together in Figures, or as one of those Sands to the supposed Heap. Reason therefore tells us, without any Manner of Hesitation, which would be the better Part in this Choice. However, as I have before intimated, our Reason might in such a Case be so overset by the Imagination, as to dispose some Persons to fink under the Confideration of the great Length of the first Part of this Duration, and of the great Distance of that second Duration. which is to succeed it. The Mind, I say, might give itself up to that Happiness which is at hand, confidering that it is so very near, and that it would last so very long. But when the Choice we actually have before us is this. Whether we will choose to be happy for the space of only Threescore and Ten, nay, perhaps of only Twenty or Ten Years, I might fay of only a Day or an Hour, and miserable to all Eternity; or, on the contrary, miserable for this fhort Term of Years, and happy for a whole Eternity: What Words are sofficient to express that Folly and want of Confideration which in fuch a Cafe makes a wrong Choice?

I here

I here put the Case even at the worlty by suppose (what feldom happens) that a Courle of Virtue ma us miserable in this Life: But if we suppose tas it rally happens) that Virtue would make us more happy even in this Life than a contrary Course of Vice; how can we fufficiently admire the Stupidity or Madness of those Persons who are capable of making so absurd Choice ?

EVERY wife Man therefore will confider this Life only as it may conduce to the Happiness of the other, and chearfully facrifice the Pleasures of a few Years to thole of an Eternity.

Nº 576 Wednesday, August 4.

Neter in adversum ; nec me, qui cotera, vincit Impetus; & rapido contrarius evebor Orbi.
Ovid. Met. 1. 2. v. 72.

I feer against their Motions, nor am I Born back by all the Current of the Skya

NORIGEA, wanter would be the b

Remember a young Man of very lively Parts, and of a fprightly Turn in Conversation, who had only one Fault, which was an inordinate Defire of appearing fashionable. This ran him into many Amours, and confequently into many Diftempers. He never went to Bed till Two o'Clock in the Morning, because he would not be a queer Fellow, and was every now and then knocked down by a Constable, to fignalize his Vivaeity. He was initiated into half a Dozen Clubs before he was One and Twenty, and so improved in them his natural Gaiety of Temper, that you might frequently trace him to his Lodgings by a range of broken Windows, and other the like Monuments of Wit and Galantry. To be thert, after having fully established his Reputation of being a very agreeable Rake, he died of old Age at Five and Twenty. THERE

THERE is indeed nothing which betrays a M into fo many Errors and Inconveniences, as the Defin of not appearing fingular; for which Reason it is very necessary to form a right idea of Singularity, that we may know when it is laudable, and when it is vicious. In the first Place, every Man of Sense will agree with me, that Singularity is laudable, when, in Contradiction to a Multitude, it adheres to the Dictates of Confcience. Morality, and Honour. In these Cases we ought to confider, that it is not Custom, but Duty, which is the Rule of Action; and that we should be only so far foctable, as we are reasonable Creatures. Truth is never the less fo, for not being attended to : and it; is the Nature of Actions, not the Number of Actors, by which we ought to regulate our Behaviour. Singularity in Concerns of this kind is to be looked upon as heroic Bravery, in which a Man leaves the Species only as he foars above it. What greater Instance can there be of a weak and publishimous Temper, than for a Man to pass his whole Life in opposition to his own Sentiments? or not to dare to be what he thinks he ought to be? way! astronous a listo voice Sell sh

SINGULARITY, therefore, is only vicious when it makes Men act contrary to Reason, or when it puts them upon diftinguilhing themselves by Trifles. As for the first of these, who are fingular in any thing that is irreligious, immoral, or dishonourable, I believe every one will eafily give them up. I shall therefore speak of those only who are remarkable for their Singularity in things of no Importance, as in Drefs, Behaviour, Conversation, and all the little Intercourses of Life. In these Cases there is a certain Deference due to Custom; and notwithstanding there may be a Colour of Reason to deviate from the Multitude in some Particulars, a Man ought to facrifice his private Inclinations and Opinions to the Practice of the Public. It must be confessed that good Sense often makes a Humourist, but then it unqualifies him for being of any Moment in the World, and renders him ridiculous to Persons of a much inferior Understanding. The many required to constitute the state at the

I have heard of a Gentleman in the North of England, who was a remarkable Instance of this foolish Singularity. He had laid it down as a Rule within himself, to act in the most indifferent Parts of Life according to most abstracted Notions of Reason and Good without any Regard to Fashion or Example. This Humour broke out at first in many little Oddnesses; He had never any flated Hours for his Dinner, Supper or Sleep : because, said he, we ought to attend the Calls of Nature and not fet our Appetites to our Meals, but bring our Meals to our Appetites: In his Conversation with Country Gentlemen, he would not make use of a Phrase that was not frictly true: He never told any of them, that he was his humble Servant, but that he was his Wellwither : and would rather be thought a Malecontent. then drink the King's Health when he was not a dry. He would thrust his Head out of his Chamber-Window every Morning, and after having gaped for fresh Air about half an Hour, repeat fifty Verses as loud as he could bawl them for the Benefit of his Lungs; to which End he generally took them out of Homer; the Greek Tongue, especially in that Author, being more deep and fonorous, and more conducive to Expectoration, than any other. He had many other Particularities, for which he gave found and philosophical Reasons. As this Humour still grew upon him, he chose to wear a Turban instead of a Periwig; concluding very juftly, that a Bandage of clean Linen about his Head was much more wholforn, as well as cleanly, than the Caul of a Wig, which is foiled with frequent Perspirations, He afterwards judiciously observed, that the many Ligatures in our English Dress must naturally check the Circulation of the Blood; for which Reason, he made his Breeches and his Doublet of one continued Piece of Cloth, after the manner of the Hussars. In short, by following the pure Dictates of Reason, he at length departed so much from the rest of his Countrymen, and indeed from his whole Species, that his Friends would have clapped him into Bedlam, and have begged his Eftate; but the Judge being informed that he did no Harm, contented himself with iffuing out a Commission of Lunacy against him, and putting his Estate into the Hands of proper Guardians. Assert to the Children and a first of the second

a conjust distance of this feeting structure

THE Fate of this Philosopher puts me in mind of a Remark in Monfieur Fontenelle's Dialogues of the Dead. The Ambitious and the Covetous (fays he) are Madmen to all Intents and Purposes, as much as those who are shut up in dark Rooms; but they have the good Luck to have Numbers on their Side ; whereas the Frenzy of one who is given up for a Lunatic, is a Frenzy hors d'œuvre; that is, in other Words, fomething which is fingular in its Kind, and does not fall in with the Madness of a Multitude.

THE Subject of this Effay was occasioned by a Letter which I received not long fince, and which, for want of room at prefent, I shall insert in my next Paper.

the Voice, witten I think nereeable to the Sendine

Nº 577 Friday, August 6 1 11 than

Hoo tolerabile, fi non! Die e beliaten mant

This might be born with, if you did not rave.

HE Letter mentioned in my last Paper is as follows.

Day But 'my off, up 'm' wy deeply engaged in the second, X.L.S.

TOU have fo lately decried that Custom, too much in use amongst most People, of making themselves the Subjects of their Writings and Conversation, that I had some Difficulty to persuade myself to give you this I rouble, till I had considered that tho' I should speak in the first Person, yet I could not be justly charged with Vanity, fince I shall not add my Name; as also, because what I shall write will not, to say the best, redound to my Praise; but is only defigned to remove a Prejudice conceived against me, as I hope, with very little Foundation. My thort History is this. The history tab has a mine, for whom I have done fome fmall Services in Town, invited me to pass part of the Summer with him at his House in the Country. I accepted his Invitation, and found a very hearty Welcome. My Friend an honest plain Man, not being qualified to pass away his Time without the Reliefs of Bulinels, has grafted the Farmer upon the Gentleman, and brought himfelf to submit even to the servile Parts of that Employment, fuch as inspecting his Plough, and the like: This necessarily takes up some of his Hours every Day: and as I have no Relish for such Diverfions, I used at these Times to retire either to my Chamber, or a shady Walk near the House, and entertain myfelf with some agreeable Author. Now you m know, Mr. SPECTATOR, that when I read, el cially if it be Poetry, it is very usual with me, when I meet with any Passage or Expression which strikes me much, to pronounce it aloud, with that Tone of the Voice, which I think agreeable to the Sentiments there expressed; and to this I generally add some Mo-sion or Action of the Body. It was not long before I was observed by some of the Family in one of these heroic Fits, who thereupon received Impressions very much to my Disadvantage. This however I did not foon discover, nor should have done probably, had it not been for the following Accident. I had one Day shut myself, up in my Chamber, and was very deeply engaged in the Second Book of "Milton's Paradife Lift sh I walked to and fro with the Book in my Hand, and, to speak the Truth, P fear I made no little Noile; when presently coming to the following Lines; not last I take dulla contract and

I have lived for some Years last past altogether in London, till about a Month ago an Acquaintance of " mine.

With impetuous Recoil and jarring Sound,
The infernal Doors, and on their Hinges grate Harsh Thunder, Es.

Lin great Transport threw open the Door of my Chamber, and found the greatest Part of the Family standing on the Outside in a very great Consternation. I was in no less Consuson, and begged Part don don for having disturbed them; addressing myself particularly to comfort one of the Children, who received an unluckly Fall in this Action, while he was too intently surveying my Meditations through the Key-holes To be short, after this Adventure I easily observed that great Part of the Family, especially the Women and Children, looked upon me with some Apprehensions of Fear; and my Friend himself, tho' he still continues his Civilities to me, did not feem altogether easy: I took notice, that the Butler was never after this Accident ordered to leave the Bottle upon the Table after Dinner. Add to this, that I frequently overheard the Servants mention me by the Name of the crazed Gentleman, the Gentleman a little touched, the mad Londoner, and the like. This made me think it high time for me to shift my Quarters, which I resolved to do the first handsom Opportunity; and was confirmed in this Resolution by a young Lady in the Neighbourhood who frequently visited us, and who one Day. after having heard all the fine things I was able to fay, was pleased with a scornful Smile to bid me go to fleeps and sold to comment the

. THE first Minute I got to my Lodgings in Town I set Pen to Paper to desire your Opinion, whether, upon the Evidence before you, I am mad or not. I. can bring Certificates that I behave myfelf foberly before Company, and I hope there is at least fome Merit in withdrawing to be mad. Look you, Sir, I am contented to be efteemed a little touched, as they phrase it, but should be forry to be madder than my Neighbours; therefore, pray let me be as much in my Senses as you can afford. I know I could bring yourfelf as an Instance of a Man who has confessed talking to himself; but yours is a particular Case and cannot justify me, who have not kept Silence any Part of my Life. What if I shou'd own myself in-Love? You know Lovers are always allowed the Comfort of Soliloguy. - But I will fay no more upon this Subject, because I have long since observed, the ready Way to be thought Mad is to contend that you are not for; as we generally conclude that Man drunk, who takes pains to be thought fober. I will therefore leave myself to your Determination; but am the more defirous to be thought in my Senies, that it may be no Discredit to you when I affure you that I have always been very much the associated largers Tour Admirer. P. S. If I must be mad, I defire the young Lady may believe it is for ber. Mendan the some or maile

The bumble Petition of John a Nokes and John a Stiles. lette to larve the study opportune, I apply er Sheweth, is branched y company I say into a shake THAT your Petitioners have had Causes depending in Westminster-Hall above five hundred Years, and that we despair of ever feeing them brought to an Isine: That your Petitioners have not been involved in these Law Suits out of any litigious Temper of their own, but by the Instigation of contentious Perfons, that the young Lawyers in our Inns of Court are continually fetting us together by the Ears, and think they do us no Hurt, because they plead for us without a Fee; That many of the Gentlemen of the Robe have no other Clients in the World belides us two; That when they have nothing elfe to do, they make us Plaintiffs and Defendents, tho' they were never retained by any of us; That they traduce, condemn or acquit us, without any manner of Regard to our Reputations and good Names in the World. Your Petitioners therefore theing thereunto encouraged by the favourable Reception which you lately gave to our "Kinfman Blank) do humbly pray that you will put an end to the Controversies which have been so long depending between us your faid Petitioners, and that our Enmity may not endure from Generation to Generation; it being our Resolution to live hereafter as it becometh Men of peaceable Dispositions.

And your Petitioners (as in Duty bound) shall ever Str Pray, sect and exact Laterant, the blood at a mark The ready of the second of the district continued to the continue trace that the trace and the trace continued to the trace continued to

No 578 Monday, August 9.

Inque feras Noster — Ovid. Met. 1. 15. v. 167.

And lodges where it lights in Man or Beaft.

DRYDEN.

THERE has been very great Reason, on several Accounts for the learned World to endeavour at settling what it was that might be said to compose personal Identity.

Mr. LOCKE, after having premifed that the Word Person properly fignifies a thinking intelligent Being that has Reason and Reflexion, and can consider itself as itfelf; concludes That it is Consciousness alone, and not an Identity of Substance, which makes this personal Identity of Sameness. Had I the same Consciousness (says that Author) that I saw the Ark and Noah's Flood, as that I saw an Overslowing of the Thames last Winter; or as that I now write; I could no more doubt that I who write this now, that faw the Thames overflow last Winter, and that viewed the Flood at the general Deluge, was the fame Self, place that Self in what Substance you please, than that I who write this am the same Myelf now while I write (whether I confift of all the same Substance material or immaterial or no) that I was Yesterday; For as to this Point of being the same Self, it matters not whether this present Self be made up of the same or other Substances.

I was mightily pleased with a Story in some meafure applicable to this Piece of Philosophy, which I re d the other Day in the Persian Tales, as they are lately very well-translated by Mr. Philips; and with an Abaid meat whereof I shall here present my Readers.

I (hall

I shall only premise that these Stories are writ after the Eastern Manner, but somewhat more correct.

ceeded his Father Bin Ortoc, in the Kingdom of Moufel. He reigned over his faithful Subjects for some time, and lived in great Happiness with his beauteous Consort Queen Zemroude, when there appeared at his Court a young Dervis of so lively and entertaining a Turn of Wit, as won upon the Affections of every one he conversed with. His Reputation grew so fast every Day, that it at last raised a Curiosity in the Prince himself to see and talk with him. He did so, and far from finding that common Fame had flatter'd him, he was soon convinced that every thing he had heard of him fell short of the Truth.

* FADLALLAH immediately lost all manner of Relish for the Conversation of other Men; and as he was every Day more and more satisfied of the Abilities of this Stranger, offered him the first Posts in his Kingdom. The young Dervis, after having thanked him with a very singular Modesty, defired to be excused, as having made a Vow never to accept of any Employment, and preferring a free and independent State of Life to all other Conditions.

• THE King was infinitely charm'd with fo great an Example of Moderation; and tho' he could not get him to engage in a Life of Business, made him however his chief Companion and first Favourite.

AS they were one Day hunting together, and happened to be separated from the rest of the Company, the Dervis entertained Fadlallah with an Account of his Travels and Adventures. After having related to him several Curiosities which he had seen in the Indies, It was in this Place, says he, that I contrasted an Acquaintance with an old Brachman, who was skilled in the most bidden Powers of Nature: He died within my Arms, and with his parting Breath communicated to me one of the most valuable of his Secrets, on Condition I should never reveal it to any Man. The King immediately resecting on his young Fayourite's having resus'd the late Offers of Greatness he had made him, told him he prefumed it was the Power of making Gold. No, Sir, fays the Dervis, it is somewhat more wonderful than that; it is the Power of to animating a dead Body, by flinging my own Soul into it.

WHILE he was yet speaking a Doe came bounding by them, and the King, who had his Bow ready, that her through the Heart; telling the Dervis, that a fair Opportunity now offered for him to shew his Art. The young Man immediately left his own Body breathless on the Ground, while at the same instant that of the Doe was re-animated; the came to the King. fawned upon him, and after having play'd feveral wanton Tricks, fell again upon the Grass; at the fame Infant the Body of the Dervis recovered its Life. The King was infinitely pleased at so uncommon an Operation, and conjured his Friend by every thing that was facred to communicate it to him. The Dervis at first made some Scruple of violating his Promise to the dying Brachman; but told him at · last that he found he could conceal nothing from fo excellent a Prince; after having obliged him therefore by an Oath to Secrecy, he taught him to repeat two Cabaliffic Words, in pronouncing of which the whole Secret confifted. The King impatient to try the Experiment, immediately repeated them as he had been taught, and in an Instant found himself in the Body of the Doe. He had but little time to contemplate himself in this new Being; for the treacherous Derwis shooting his own Soul into the Royal Corps, and bending the Prince's own Bow against him, had laid him dead on the Spot, had not ' the King, who perceived his Intent, fled swiftly to the Woods.

. THE Dervis, now triumphant in his Villany, returned to Moufel, and filled the Throne and Bed of the THE POPULATION OF STREET unhappy Fadlallab.

THE first thing he took care of, in order to secure himself in the Possession of his new-acquired Kingdom, was to iffue out a Proclamation, ordering his Subjects to destroy all the Deer in the Realm. The King had perished among the rest, had he not avoided his Pursuers by re-animating the Body of a Nighting gale which he faw lie dead at the Foot of a Tree. In this new Shape he winged his Way in Safety to the Palace, where perching on a Tree which flood near the Queen's Apartment, he filled the whole Place with fo many melodious and melancholy. Notes as drew her to the Window. He had the Mortification to fee that, instead of being pitied, he only moved the Mirth of his Princels, and of a young Female Slave who was with her. He continued however to ferenade her every Morning, till at last the Queen, charmed with his Harmony, fent for the Bird-catchers, and ordered them to employ their utmost Skill to put that little Creature into her Possession. The King pleased with an · Opportunity of being once more near his beloved Confort, easily suffered himself to be taken; and when he was prefented to her, tho he shewed a Fearfulness to be touched by any of the other Ladies flew of his own Accord, and hid himfelf in the Queen's Bosom. Zemroude was highly pleased at the unexpeded Fondness of her new Favourite, and ordered him to be kept in an open Cage in her own Apartment. · He had there an Opportunity of making his Court to her every Morning, by a thousand little Actions, which his Shape allowed him. The Queen passed away whole Hours every Day in hearing and playing with him. Fadiallah could even have thought hime felf happy in this State of Life, had he not frequently endured the inexpressible Torment of seeing the Dervis enter the Apartment and carefs his Queen even in his · Presence.

THE Usurper, amidst his toying with the Princess, would often endeavour to ingratiate himself with her Nightingale; and while the enraged Fadialleb peck'd at him with his Bill, beat his Wings, and shewed all the Marks of an impotent Rage, it only afforded his Rival and the Queen new Matter for their Diver-

* fion:

* ZEMROUDE was likewise fond of a little Lap * Dog, which she kept in her Apartment, and which

* one Night happened to die.

THE King immediately found himself inclined to uit the shape of the Nightingale, and enliven this new Body. He did fo, and the next Morning Zemroude law her favourite Bird lie dead in the Gage. It is impossible to express her Grief on this Occasion, and when she called to mind all its little Actions, which even appeared to have somewhat in them like Reason. she was inconfolable for her Loss.

HER Women immediately sent for the Derwis to come and comfort her, who after having in vain reprefeated to her the Weakness of being grieved at such an Accident, touched at last by her repeated Complaints; Well, Madam, Tays he, I will exert the utmost of my Art to please you. Your Nightingale shall again review beheld him with a Look which easily shewed she did not believe him; when laying himself down on a Sofa, he that his Soul into the Nightingale, and Zemroude was amazed to fee her Bird revive.

THE King, who was a Spectator of all that passed, lying under the Shape of a Lap-Dog, in one Corner of the Room, immediately recovered his own Body, and running to the Cage with the utmost Indignation, twisted of the Neck of the false Nightingale.

* ZEMROUDE was more than ever amazed and concerned at this fecond Accident, 'till the King intreating her to hear him, related to her his whole Adventure.

THE Body of the Dervis which was found dead in the Wood, and his Edict for killing all the Deer, left her no Room to doubt of the Truth of it: But the Story adds. That out of an extreme Delicacy (peculiar to the Oriental Ladies) the was fo highly afflicted at the innocent Adultery in which the had for some time lived with the Dervis, that no Arguments even from Fadlallah himself could compose her Mind. She shortly after died with Grief, begging his Pardon with her last Breath for what the most rigid Justice could not have interpreted as a Crime.

THE King was so afflicted with her Death, that he left his Kingdom to one of his nearest Relations, and passed the rest of his Days in Solitude and Retirement.

Vol. VIII.

Wednesday,

Wednesday, August 11.

Odora canum vis. Virg. Æn. 4. v. 132. Sagacious Hounds. sachimmi asco

N the Reign of King Charles I, the Company of Stationers, into whose Hands the Printing of the Bible is committed by Patent, made a very remark; able Erratum or Blunder in one of their Editions: For instead of Thou shalt not commit Adultery, they printed off leveral thousands of Copies with Thousbalt commit Adultery. Archbishop Laud, to punish this their Negligence, laid a considerable Fine upon that Company in the Star-Chamber.

BY the Practice of the World, which prevails in this degenerate Age, I am afraid that very many young Profligates, of both Sexes, are possessed of this spurious Edition of the Bible, and observe the Commandment according to that faulty Reading.

ADULTERERS, in the first Ages of the Church, were excommunicated for ever, and unqualified all their Lives from bearing a Part in Christian Assemblies, notwithflanding they might feek it with Tears, and all the Appearances of the most unfeigned Repentance.

I might here mention fome ancient Laws among the Heathens which punished this Crime with Death; and others of the same Kind, which are now in Force among feveral Governments that have embraced the Reformed Religion. But because a Subject of this Nature may be too ferious for my ordinary Readers, who are very apt to throw by my Papers, when they are not enlivened with fomething that is diverting or uncommon; I shall here publish the Contents of a little Manuscript lately fallen into my Hands, and which pretends to great Antiquity, tho' by reason of some modern Phrases and other Particulars in it, I can by no means allow it to be genuine, but rather the Production of a modern Sophist.

IT is well known by the Learned, that there was a Temple upon Mount Esna dedicated to Vulcan, which was guarded by Dogs of so exquisite a Smell. (say the Historians) that they could discern whether the Persons who came thither were chaste or otherwise. They used to meet and fawn upon such as were Chaste, carefling them as the Friends of their Master Vulcan; but slew at those who were polluted, and never ceased barking at them till they had driven them from the Temple.

MY Manuscript gives the following Account of these Dogs, and was probably designed as a Comment upon this Story.

THESE Dogs were given to Vulcan by his Sifter Diana, the Goddets of Hunting and of Chastity, having bred them out of some of her Hounds, in which the had observed this natural Instinct and Sagacity. It is thought the did it in spite to Venus, who, upon her Return home, always found her Husband in a good or bad Humour, according to the Reception which she met with from his Dogs. They lived in the Temple feveral Years, but were such inappish Curs that they frighted away most of the Votaries. The Women of Sicily made a folemn Deputation to the Priest, by which they acquainted him, that they would not come up to the Temple with their annual Offerings unless he muzzled ' his Mastiffs, and at last compromised the Matter with him, that the Offering should always be brought by a ' Chorus of young Girls, who were none of them above feven Years old. It was wonderful (fays the Author) to fee how different the Treatment was which the Dogs gave to these little Misses, from that which they had shewn to their Mothers. It is said that the Prince of Syracuse, having married a young Lady, and being naturally of a jealous Temper, made such an Interest with the Priests of this Temple, that he procured a Whelp from them of this famous Breed. The young Puppy was very troublesom to the fair Lady at first. infomuch that the folicited her Husband to fend him away; but the good Man cut her short with the old Sicilian Proverb. Love me, Love my Dog. From which Time she liv'd very peaceably with both of them. The Ladies of Syracuse were very much annoyed with him, and several of very good Reputation refused to come to Court till he was discarded. There were indeed some of them that defied his Sagacity; but it was observed, the he did not actually bite them, he would growl at them most consoundedly. To return to the Dogs of the Temple: After they had lived here in great Repute for several Years, it so happened, that as one of the Priests who had been making a Charitable Visit to a Widow who lived on the Promontory of Lilybeum, return'd home pretty late in the Evening, the Dogs shew at him with so much Fury, that they would have worried him if his Brethren had not come in to his Assistance: Upon which, says my Author, the Dogs were all of them hanged, as having lost their original Instinct.

I cannot conclude this Paper without wishing, that we had some of this Breed of Dogs in Great-Britain, which would certainly do Justice, I should say Honour, to the Ladies of our Country, and shew the World the difference between Pagan Women and those who are instructed in sounder Principles of Virtue and Religion.

CACASOCKE COCKES TO SENSE OF THE SENSE OF TH

Nº 580 Friday, August 13.

Non metuam magni dixisse palatia Cæli.

Ovid. Met. 1. 1. v. 175.

This Place, the brightest Mansion of the Sky,
I'll call the Palace of the Deity. DRYDEN.

Confidered in my two last Letters that awful and tremendous Subject, the Ubiquity or Omnipre-sence of the Divine Being. I have shewn that he is equally present in all Places throughout the whole Extent of infinite Space. This Doctrine is so agree-sable to Reason, that we meet with it in the Writings ings of the enlightened Heathens, as I might shew at te, were it not already done by other Hands. But the' the Deity be thus effectielly prefent through all the Immensity of Space, there is one Part of it in which he discovers himself in a most transcendent and visible Glory. This is that Place which is marked out in Scripture under the different Appellations of Paradife, the third Heaven, the Throne of God, and the Habitation of his Glory. It is here where the glorified Body of our Saviour refides, and where all the celefial Hierarchies, and the innumerable Hosts of Angels, are represented as perpetually furrounding the Seat of God with Halle-lujable and Hymns of Praile. This is that Presence of God which some of the Divines call his Glorious, and others his Majestatic Prosence. He is indeed as essentially present in all other Places as in this; but it is here where he relides in a fenfible Magnificence, and in the midit of all those Splendors which can affect the Imaginution of created Beings. off or inon son N is ton IT is very remarkable that this Opinion of God Almighty's Presence in Heaven, whether discovered by the Light of Nature, or by a general Tradition from our first Parents, prevails among all the Nations of the World, whatfoever different Notions they entertain of the Godhead. If you look into Homer, that is, the most ancient of the Greek Writers, you fee the fupreme Power seated in the Heavens, and encompassed with inferior Deities, among whom the Mules are represented as finging incessantly about his Throne. Who does not here fee the main Strokes and Outlines of this great Truth we are speaking of? The same Doctrine is shadowed out in many other Heathen Authors, tho' at the same time, like several other revealed Truths, dashed and adulterated with a Mixture of Pables and human Inventions. But to pass over the Notions of the Greeks and Romans, those more en-Ightened Parts of the Pagan World, we find there is fcarce a People among the late discovered Nations who are not trained up in an Opinion, that Heaven is the Habitation of the Divinity whom they worAS in Solomon's Temple there was the Sanction Sanctions, in which a visible Glory appeared among the Figures of the Cherubims, and into which none but the High Priest himself was permitted to enter, after having made an Atonement for the Sins of the People; so if we consider the whole Creation as one great Temple, there is in it this Holy of Holies, into which the High-Priest of our Salvation entered, and took his Place among Angels and Archangels, after having made a Propitiation for the Sins of Mankind.

WITH how much Skill must the Throne of God be erected? With what glorious Defigns is that Habitation beautified, which is contrived and built by him who inspired Hiram with Wisdom ? How great must be the Majesty of that Place, where the whole Art of Creation has been employed, and where God has cholen to shew himself in the most magnificent manner? What must be the Architecture of Infinite Power under the Direction of Infinite Wisdom? A Spirit cannot but be transported after an inestable manner with the Sight of those Objects, which were made to affect him by that Being who knows the inward Frame of a Soul, and how to please and ravish it in all its most secret Powers and Faculties. It is to this Majestic Presence of God, we may apply those beautiful Expressions in holy Writ: Behold even to the Moon, and it shineth not; yea the Stars are not pure in his Sight. The Light of the Sun, and all the Glories of the World in which we live, are but as weak and fickly Glimmerings, or rather Darkness itself, in comparifon of thole Splendors which encompais the Throne of God.

As the Glory of this Place is transcendent beyond Imagination, so probably is the Extent of it. There is Light behind Light, and Glory within Glory. How far that Space may reach, in which God thus appears in perfect Majesty, we cannot possibly conceive. Tho it is not infinite, it may be indefinite; and tho not immeasurable in sitself, it may be so with regard to any created Eye or Imagination. If he has made these Lower Regions of Matter so inconceivably wide wide and magnificent for the Habitation of mortal and perishable Beings, how great may we suppose the Courts of his House to be, where he makes his Residence in a more especial Manner, and displays him-felf in the Fulness of his Glory, among an innumerable Company of Angels and Spirits of just Men made perfect to a series a same you

THIS is certain, that our Imaginations cannot be raifed too high, when we think on a Place where Omnipotence and Omniscience have so signally exerted themselves, because that they are able to produce a Scene infinitely more great and glorious than what we are able to imagine. It is not impossible but at the Confummation of all Things, thefe outward Apartints of Nature, which are now fuited to those Beings who inhabit them, may be taken in and added to that glorious Place of which I am hear speaking; and by that Means made a proper Habitation for Beings who are exempt from Mortality, and cleared of their Imperfections: For to the Scripture feems to intimate when it speaks of new Heavens and of a new Earth, wherein dwelleth Righteousness.

- I have only confidered this glorious Place with regard to the Sight and Imagination, though it is high-In probable that our other Senies may here likewife enjoy their highest Gratifications. There is nothing which more ravishes and transports the Soul, than Harmony; and we have great Reason to believe, from the Descriptions of this Place in holy Scripture, that this is one of the Entertainments of it. And if the Soul of Man can be so wonderfully affected with those Strains of Music, which human Art is capable of producing, how much more will it be raifed and elevated by thole, in which is exerted the whole Power of Harmony! The Senses are Faculties of the human-Soul, though they cannot be employed, during this our vital Union, without proper Inftruments in the Body. Why therefore should we exclude the Satisfaction of these Faculties, which we find by Experience are Inlets of igreat Pleafure to the Soul, from among those Entertainments which are to make up our Happinels thereafter? Why thould we suppose that our. E 4 tenoe, Hearing

Heating and Seeing will not be gratify'd with those Objects which are most agreeable to them, and which they cannot meet with in those lower Regions of Mature: Objects, subjet neight. Eye bath seen, nor Ear heard, nor can it enter into the Heart of Man to conceive? I know a Man in Christ (says St. Paul, speaking of himself) above fourteen Years ago (substitute in the Body, I cannot tell; or substitute out of the Body, I cannot tell: God knoweth) such a Man (substitute in the Body, or out of the Body, I cannot tell: God knoweth) bown that he must caught up into Paradise, and beard unspeakable Words, subjet it is not possible for a Man to utten. By this is meant that what he heard was so infinitely different from any thing which he had heard in this World, that it was impossible to express it in such Words, as might convey a Notion of it to his Hearers.

" I T is very natural for us to take Delight in Enquiries concerning any foreign Country, where we are fome time or other to make our Abode; and as we all hope to be admitted into this glorious Place, it is both a laudable and useful Curiofity to get what informations we can of it, while we make use of Revelation for our Guide. When these everlasting Doors shall be open to us, we may be fure that the Pleasures and Beauties of this Place will infinitely transcend our prefent Hopes and Expectations, and that the glorious Appearance of the Threne of God, will rife infinitely beyond whatever we are able to conceive of ital We might here entertain ourfelves with many other Speculations on this Subject, from those several Hints which we find of it in the Holy Scriptures; as whether there may not be different Manfions and Apartments of Glony to Beings of different Natures; whether as they excel one another in Perfection, they are not admitted nearer to the Throne of the Almighty, and enjoy greater Masnifestations of his Presence, whether there are not foleme Times and Occasions, when all the Multimde of Heaven celebrate the Prefence of their Makerin more extraordinary Forms of Praise and Adorations oas Adam, though he had continued in a State of Inno-The same cence.

holy the Sabbath Day, in a more particular Manner than lany other of the Seven. These, and the like Speculations, we may very innocently indulge, so long as we make see of them to impire us with a Defire of he coming Inhabitants of this delightful Place.

I have in this, and in two foregoing Letters, treated on the most ferious Subject that can employ the Mind of Man, the Omnipresence of the Deity; a Subject which, if possible, should never depart from our Meditations. We have considered the Divine Being, as he inhabits Infinitude, as he dwells among his Works, as he in present to the Mind of Man, and as he discovers himself in a more glorious Manner among the Regions of the Biest of Such a Consideration should be kept awake in us at all Times, and in all Places, and possible our Minds with a perpetual Awe and Reverence. It should be interwoven with all our Thoughts and Recreptions, and become one with the Consciousness of the own Being. It is not to be resteded on in the Coldness of Philosophy, but ought to fink us into the lowest Prostration before him, who is so assumingly Great, Wonderful, and Holy.

CHO MENTAL CONTROL CON

Nº 581 Monday, August 16.

Sant bona, funt quadom mediocrta; funt mata plura

Qua legis Mart. Epig. 17. 1. 1.

Some good, more bad, some neither one nor t'othen.

AM at present sitting with a Heap of Letters before me, which I have received under the Chiracter of Special one; I have Complaints from Lovers, Schemes from Projectors, Scandal from Ladies, Congratulations, Campliments, and Advice in abundance.

me I

E

I have

I have not been thus long an Author, to be infenfible of the natural Fondaels every Person own Productions; and I begin to think I treated my Correspondents a little too uncivilly in the ing them all together on a File, and letting them lie fo long unregarded. It shall therefore, for the future, think mylelf at least obliged to take some Notice of such Letters as I receive, and may possibly do it at the Bad of every Month end to the to see the organic and analy

IN the mean time, I intend my present Paper as a short Answer to most of those which have been already fentime. It is a magazither of selectional THE Public however is not to expect I should let them into all my Secrets; and though I appear abilitule to molt People, it is sufficient if I am understood by my particular Correspondents

M.Y. Well-wisher Van Nath is very arch, but not quite

he fo to appear in Print. PHILADELPHUS will, in a little time, fee his Query fully answered by a Treatise which is now in

Treas very improper at that time to comply with Greet, Wasieciah and flow, which was a colored

Tran L

MISS Kitty must excuse me.

THE Gentleman who fent me a Copy of Verles on his Mistres's Dancing, is I believe too thoroughly in Love to compole correctly.

I have too great a Respect for both the Universities to praise one at the Expence of the other.

10 M Nimble is a very honest Fellow, and I defire him to present my humble Service to his Cousin Fill Bumper.

I am obliged for the Letter upon Prejudice.

I may in due time animadvert on the Cale of Grace Grumble.

THE Petition of P. S. granted ...

THAT of Sarah Loveit, refujed. And a cast week

THE Papers of A. S. are returned.

I thank Aniftippur for his kind Invitations and Augusti

MY Friend at Woodflock is a bold Man, to undertake for all within Ten Miles of him, and addressed the day I am afraid the Entertainment of Top Turnover will y be relished by the good Cities of London and in those Freedoms he takes with the Ladies Stockings.

I am obliged to the ingenious Gentleman, who fent me an Ode on the Subject of the late SPECTATOR, and shall take particular Notice of his last Letter.

WHEN the Lady who wrote me a Letter, dated July the 20th, in relation to some Passages in a Lover, will be more particular in her Directions, I shall be so in

THE poor Gentleman, who fancies my Writings could reclaim an Husband who can abuse such a Wife as he describes, has I am afraid too great an Opinion of my Skill.

PHILANTHROPOS is, I dare fay, a very well-meaning Man, but a little too prolix in his Compolitions.

CONSTANTIUS himself must be the best Judgein the Affair he mentions.

THE Letter dated from Lincoln is received.

dated from Lincoln is received

RETHUS A and her Friend may hear farther CELIA is a little too hafty:

HARRIOT is a good Girl, but must not curefy to Bolks the does not know 214 to the state of the state of

I must ingenuously confess my Friend Samson Bent-shaff has quite puzzled me, and writ me a long Letter; which I cannot comprehend one Word of.

COLLIDAN must also explain what he means by his Drigelling.

I think it beneath my Speciatorial Dignity; to concern myfelf in the Affair of the boiled Dumpling.

I shall consult some Litterati on the Project sent me:

for the Discovery of the Longitude.

I know not how to conclude this Paper better, than by inferting a Couple of Letters which are really genuine, and which I look upon to be two of the smartest. Pieces I have received from my Correspondents of either Sex.

Brother

Weekshires.

Brother S. P. C. To Instruction of Lord Lines in HI DE you are furveying every Object the falls in your way, I am wholly taken upwill one. Had that Sage, who demanded what Beauty was lived to fee the dear Angel I love he would not have asked such a Question. Had another them her, he would himself have loved the Person in whom Heaven has made Virtue vilible; and were you you to be in her Company, you could never, with all your Loquacity, fay enough of her good Framour sense. I fend you the Outlines of a Picture, which can no more finish than I can sufficiently admire the dear Original as Dam dive animous of rooms of The

to the color of the med saffedienate Baptherarches also Confiantio Spec.

well-merajing filan, but a little on profits Good Mr. Pert,

SELECTION OF SECULOR SECULOR

Will allow you nothing till you refole me the following Question. Pray what's the Resion that while you only talk now upon Wederlays Pridays and Mondays, you presend to be a greater Tatler, than when you spoke every Day as you somethy used to do? If this be your plunging out of your Taciturnity, prayulet the Length of your Speeches compenfate for the Scarcenels of themoan son son soll chief and the property done is many tone of the state of the st

THE WAR THE TENTH STATE

North S

And has conte paraled the and write me a leng Letter vitate I carnot compete a leng Letter of cases of spiles of the Contraction Admirer. A Charles of

for the Dileavery of the Longitudes at the

if you will be long enough for Mr.

Amanda Lovelength on the Board ode-no isometric smol Halmon find. In

I know not bow to conclude this Pener better, 2010 by inferting a Couple will be which a real and mine, and which I look will be the true of the matter theresof have received from my Coursepondants of white

Wednesday,

of is need at an End. One Day makes Work for anothere, which Br. And the confidence we may come to that we are luve it usuased by follence we may Scribende Cucarebes - 1900 Sat. 7. v. 52.

The Curfe of Writing is an endless lieb.

property woo one I are in W to held in Challe to ent

HERE is a certain Diffemper, which is mentioned ed neither by Galen nor Hippurwes, nor to be thet with in the London Difpensatory. Twomass in the Motto of my Paper, terms is a Garowber; which is a hard Word for a Diffusive called in plain English, The Reb of Witten. This Catorbes is as Epidemical as the Samillo Pox, there being very few who are not seized with it for Pox, there being very lew who are not leized with it formetime or other in their Lives: There is howevery this Difference in these two Differences; that the first after having indisposed you for a time, access terms against whereas the Pam speaking of when it is once got into the Blood, seldom comes out of it. The Bringto Nation is very much assisted with this Malady, and the wery many Remedies have been applied to Persons infected with it, say of them have ever proved successful. Some have been cauterized with Satirus and Lampoons, but have received little or no Benefit from them; others have had their Heads faftened for an Hour together between a Cleft Board, which is made use of as a Cure for the Dream when it appears in its greatest Malignity . There is in deed one kind of this Malady which has been formetimes removed, like the Biting of a Thrantile; with the Sound of a mulical liftrument, which is commonly known by this kind under your Care, you may affore your left there is no other way of recovering him effectually; but by for-bidding him the ule of Pen, Int and Paper:

HUT to drop the Allegory before I have tired it out, there is no Species of Scribblers more offentive, and more incurable, than your Periodical Writers, whose Works return upon the Public on certain Days and at stated Times. We have not the Confolation in the Perufal of these Authors, which we find at the Reading of all others, (namely) that we are fure if we have but Patience we may come to the End of their Labours. I have often admired an humorous Saying of Diogenes, who reading a dull Author to feveral of his Friends, when every one began to be tired, finding he was almost come to a blank Leaf at the End of it, cried, Courage, Lads, I fee Land. On the contrary, our Progress through that kind of Writers I am now speaking of is never at an End. One Day makes Work for another, we do not know when to promise ourselves Rest.

Pridays

IT is a melancholy thing to confider, that the Art of Printing, which might be the greatest Blessing to Mankind, should prove detrimental to us, and that it should be made use of to scatter Prejudice and Ignorance through a People, instead of conveying to them Truth and Knowledge. I was lately reading a very whimfical Treatife, intitled, William Ramfay's Vindication of Aftrology. This profound Author, among many mystical Passages, has the following one: 1 The Absence of the Sun is not the Cause of Night, forasmuch as his Light is so great that it may illuminate the Earth all over at once as clear as broad

Day; but there are tenebrificous and dark Stars, by whose Influence Night is brought on, and which do ray all our Darkness and Obscurity upon the Earth, as the Sun does Light.

I consider Writers in the same View this sage Astrologer does the Heavenly Bodies. Some of them are Stars that scatter Light, as others do Darkness. I could mention several Authors who are tenebrificous Stars of the first Magnitude, and point out a Knot of Gentlemen, who have been dull in Confort, and may be looked upon as a dark Constellation. The Nation has been a great while benighted with several of these Antiluminaries. I suffered them to ray out their Darkness as long as I was able to endure it, till at length I came to a Resolution of rising upon them, and hope in a little time to drive them quite out of the British Hemisphere, and stalled to see a si ereite intercable, then your Periodical Writers, whole Works re-

Friday, August 20.

Ipse thymum pinosque ferens de montibus altis, Testa ferat late circum, cui talia cura : Ipfe labore manum duro terat; ipfe feraces Figat bumo plantas, & amicos irriget imbres. Virg. Georg. 4. v. 112.

With his own Hand, the Guardian of the Bees, For Slips of Pines, may search the Mountain Trees; And with wild Thyme and Saw ry plant the Plain, Till bis bard borny Fingers ake with Pain; And deck with fruitful Trees the Fields around, And with refreshing Waters dranch the Ground.

VERY Station of Life has Duties which are proper to it. Those who are determined by Choice to any particular kind of Bufiness, are indeed more happy than those who are determined by Necessity, but both are under an equal Obligation of fixing on Employments, which may be either useful to themselves or beneficial to others: No one of the Sons of Adam ought to think himself exempt from that Labour and Industry which were denounced to our first Parent, and in him to all his Posterity. Those to whom Birth or Fortune may seem to make fuch an Application unnecessary, ought to find out fome Calling or Profession for themselves, that they may not lie as a Burden on the Species, and be the only ufeless Part of the Creation.

MANY of our Country Gentlemen in their busy Hours apply themselves wholly to the Chace, or to some other Diversion which they find in the Fields and Woods. This gave occasion to one of our most eminent English Writers to represent every one of them as lying under a kind of Curse pronounced to them in the Words of Goliab. I will give thee to the Fowls of the Air, and to the Beafts in the Field, or and standard and anifold it as exist

Engloyment, and may therefore let blight

Towns .

THO' Exercises of this Kind, when indulged with Moderation, may have a good Influence both on the Mind and Body, the Country affords many other Amusements of a more noble Kind.

AMONG these I know none more delightful in itfelf, and beneficial to the Public, than that of P. L. AN T-ING. I could mention a Nobleman whose Fortune has placed him in several Parts of England, and who has always left these visible Marks behind him, which shew he has been there: He never hired a House in his Life, without leaving all about it the Seeds of Wealth, and bestowing Legacies on the Posterity of the Owner. Had all the Gentlemen of England made the fame Improvements apon their Estates, our whole Country would have been at this time as one great Garden. Nor ought fuch an Employment to be looked upon as too inglorious for Men of the highest Rank. There have been Heroes in this Art. as well as in others. We are told in particular of Cyrus the Great, that he planted all the Lesser Afia. There is indeed fomething truly magnificent in this kind of Amusement: It gives a nobler Air to several Parts of Nacore; it alls the Earth with a Variety of beautiful Seenes, and has fomething in it like Creation. For this Reason the Pleasure of one who plants is something like that of a Poet, who, as Ariffette observes, is more delighted with his Productions than any other Wester or Artift whatfoever. caldi recest i PLANTATIONS have one Advantage in them which is not to be found in most other Works, as they give a Pleasure of a more lasting Date, and continually improve in the Eye of the Planter. When you have smithed a Building or any other Undertaking of the like Nature, it immediately decays upon your Hands; you see it brought to its utmost Point of Persection, and from that time hastening to its Ruin. On the contrary, when you have smithed your Plantations, they are still arriving at greater Degrees of Persection as long as you live, and appear more delightful in every succeeding Year, than they did in the foregoing!

BUT I do not only recommend this Art to Men of Estates as a pleasing Amusement, but as it is a kind of virtuous Employment, and may therefore be inculcated by moral Motives; particularly from the Love which we ought to have for our Country, and the Regard which we ought to bear to our Posterity. As for the first, I need only mention what is frequently observed by others, that the Increase of Forest-Trees does by no means bear a Proportion to the Destruction of them, infomuch that in a few Ages the Nation may be at a loss to supply itself with Timber sufficient for the Fleets of England. I know when a Man talks of Posterity in Matters of this Nature, he is looked upon with an Eye of Ridicule by the cunning and selfish Part of Mankind. Most People are of the Humour of an old Fellow of a College. who, when he was pressed by the Society to come into fomething that might redound to the good of their Successors, grew very peevish; We are always doing, fays he, something for Posterity, but I would fain see Posterity do something for us.

BUT I think Men are inexcusable, who sail in a Duty of this Nature, since it is so easily discharged. When a Man considers that the putting a few Twigs into the Ground, is doing good to one who will make his Appearance in the World about Fifty Years hence, or that he is perhaps making one of his own Descendents easy or rich, by so inconsiderable an Expense, if he finds himself averse to it, he must conclude that he has a poor and base Heart, void of all generous Principles and Love to Mankind.

THERE is one Confideration, which may very much enforce what I have here faid. Many honest Minds that are naturally disposed to do good in the World, and become Beneficial to Mankind, complain within themselves that they have not Talents for it. This therefore is a good Office, which is suited to the meanest Capacities, and which may be performed by Multitudes, who have not Abilities sufficient to deserve well of their Country and to recommend themselves to their Posterity by any other Method. It is the Phrase of a Friend of mine, when any useful Country Neighbour dies, that you may trace him: which I look upon as a good Funeral Oration, at the Death of an honest Husbandman, who hath lest the Impressions of his Industry behind him, in the Place where he has lived.

UPON

UPON the foregoing Confiderations, I can scarce forbear representing the Subject of this Paper as a kind of Moral Virtue: Which, as I have already shewn, recommends itself likewise by the Pleasure that attends it. It must be confessed, that this is none of those turbulent Pleafures which is apt to gratify a Man in the Heats of Youth : but if it be not fo Tumultuous, it is more Lasting. thing can be more delightful than to entertain ourfelves with Prospects of our own making, and to walk under those Shades which our own Industry has raised. Amusements of this Nature compose the Mind, and lay at rest all those Passions which are uneasy to the Soul of Man, besides that they naturally engender good Thoughts, and dispose us to laudable Contemplations. Many of the old Philosophers passed away the greatest Parts of their Lives among their Gardens. Epicurus himself could not think fensual Pleasure attainable in any other Scene. Every Reader who is acquainted with Homer, Virgil, and Horace, the greatest Genius's of all Antiquity, knows very well with how much Rapture they have spoken on this Subject; and that Virgil in particular has written a whole Book on the Art of Planting.

THIS Art feems to have been more especially adapted to the Nature of Man in his Primæval State, when he had Life enough to see his Productions flourish in their utmost Beauty, and gradually decay with him. One who lived before the Flood might have seen a Wood of the tallest Oaks in the Acorn. But I only mention this Particular, in order to introduce, in my next Paper, a History which I have found among the Accounts of China, and which may be looked upon as an Antediluvian.

Novel.

Monday.

is a local Office service of the confidence of t

DEPOSITION OF THE PARTY OF THE N° 584 Monday, August 23.

Hic gelidi fontes, bic mollia prata, Lyceri, Hic Nemus, bic toto tecum consumerer avo. Virg. Ecl. 10. v. 42.

Come see what Pleasures in our Plains abound; The Woods, the Fountains, and the slow ry Ground: Here I cou'd live, and love, and die with only you.

DRYDEN.

III LP A was one of the 150 Daughters of Zilpah, of the Race of Cohu, by whom some of the Learned think is meant Cain. She was exceedingly beautiful, and when she was but a Girl of Threescore and ten Years of Age, received the Addresses of several who made Love to her. Among these were two Brothers, Harpath and Shalum. Harpath, being the First-born, was Master of that fruitful Region which lies at the Foot of Mount Tirzah, in the Southern Parts of China. Shalum (which is to say the Planter in the Chinese Language) possessed all the neighbouring Hills, and that great Range of Mountains which goes under the Name of Tirzah. Harpath was of a haughty contemptuous Spirit; Shalum was of a gentle Disposition, beloved both by God and Man.

IT is faid that among the Antediluvian Women, the Daughters of Cobu had their Minds wholly fet upon Riches; for which Reason the beautitul Hilpa preferr'd Harpath to Shalum, because of his numerous Flocks and Herds, that covered all the low Country which runs along the Foot of Mount Tirzah, and is watered by several Fountains and Streams breaking out of the Sides of that Mountain.

HARPATH made so quick a Dispatch of his Courtship, that he married Hilpa in the Hundredth Year of her Age; and being of an insolent Temper, laughed to Scorn his Brother Shalum for having pretended to the heautiful Hilpa, when he was Master of nothing but a long Chain of Rocks and Mountains. This so much provoked Shalum, that he is said to have cursed his Brother in the Bitterness of his Heart, and to have prayed that one of his Mountains might sall upon his Head if ever he came within the Shadow of it.

FROM this Time forward Harpath would never venture out of the Valleys, but came to an untimely End in the 250th Year of his Age, being drowned in a River as he attempted to cross it. This River is called to this Day from his Name who perished in it, the River Harpath, and, what is very remarkable, issues out of one of those Mountains which Shalum wished might fall upon his Brother, when he cursed him in the Bitterness of his Heart.

HILP A was in the rooth Year of her Age at the Death of her Husband, having brought him but 50 Children, before he was fnatched away, as has been already related. Many of the Antediluvians made Love to the young Widow, though no one was thought so likely to succeed in her Affections as her first Lover Shalum, who renewed his Court to her about ten Years after the Death of Harpath; for it was not thought decent in those Days that a Widow should be seen by a Man within ten Years after the Decease of her Husband.

SHALUM falling into a deep Melancholy, and resolving to take away that Objection which had been raised against him when he made his first Addresses to Hispa, began, immediately after her Marriage with Harpath, to plant all that mountainous Region which sell to his Lot in the Division of this Country. He knew how to adapt every Plant to its proper Soil, and is thought to have inherited many traditional Secrets of that Art from the first Man. This Employment turn'd at length to his Prosit as well as to his Amusement: His Mountains were in a few Years shaded with young Trees, that gradually shot up into Groves, Woods, and Forests, intermixed with Walks and Lawns, and Gardens; insomuch that the whole Region, from a maked and desolate Prospect, began now to look-like a second Paradise. The Pleasantness of the Place, and the agreeable Disposition of Shalum, who was reckoned one of the mildest and wifest of all who lived before the Flood, drew into it Multitudes of People, who were perpetually employed in the finking of Wells, the digging of Trenches, and the hollowing of Trees, for the better Distribution of Water through every Part of this spacious Plantation.

THE Habitations of Shalum looked every Year more beautiful in the Eyes of Hilpa, who, after the Space of 70 Autumns, was wonderfully pleased with the distant Prospect of Shahum's Hills, which were then covered with innumerable Tufts of Trees, and gloomy Scenes that gave a Magnificence to the Place, and converted it into one of the finest Landskips the Eye of Man could behold.

THE Chinese record a Letter which Shalum is said to have written to Hilpa, in the Eleventh Year of her Widowhood. I shall here translate it, without departing from that noble Simplicity of Sentiments, and Plainness of

Manners which appears in the Original. SHALUM was at this Time 180 Years old, and Hilpa 170.

Shalum, Mafter of Mount Tirzah, to Hilpa, Miftress of the Valleys.

In the 788th Year of the Creation.

7 HAT have I not suffered, O thou Daughter of Zilpab, fince thou gavest thyself away in "Marriage to my Rival? I grew weary of the Light of the Sun, and have ever fince been covering myfelf with Woods and Forests. These threescore and ten Years have I bewailed the Loss of thee on the Tops of Mount Tireah, and foothed my Melancholy among a thousand gloomy Shades of my own raising. My Dwellings are at present as the Garden of God; every Part of them is filled with Fruits, and Flowers, and Fountains. The whole Mountain is perfumed for thy Reception. Come up into it, O my Beloved, and · let us people this Spot of the new World with a beautiful Race of Mortals; let us multiply exceedingly among these delightful Shades, and fill every Quarter of them with Sons and Daughters. Remember, O thou Daughter of Zilpah, that the Age of Man is but a thousand Years; that Beauty is the Admiration but of a few Centuries. It flourishes as a Mountain Oak, or as a Cedar on the Top of Tirzah, which in three or four hundred Years will fade away, and never be thought of by Posterity, unless a young Wood springs from its Roots. Think well on this, and remember thy Neighbour in the Mountains.

HAVING here inferted this Letter, which I look upon as the only Antediluvian Billet-doux now extant, I shall in my next Paper give the Answer to it, and the Sequel of this Story.

BUTTELL CONTINUE REAL TOUR DELLE

Nº 585 Wednesday, August 25.

Ipsi lætitiå voces ad sidera jastant
Intonsi montes: ipsæ jam carmina rupes,
Ipsa sonant arbusta — Virg. Ecl. 5. v. 63.
The Mountain Tops unshorn, the Rocks rejoice;
The lowly Shrubs partake of human Voice.

DRYDEN

The Sequel of the Story of Shalum and Hilpa.

THE Letter inferted in my last had so good an Effect upon Hilpa, that she answered it in less than a Twelvemonth, after the following manner.

Hilpa, Mistress of the Valleys, to Shalum, Master of Mount Tirzah.

In the 789th Year of the Creation.

HAT have I to do with thee, O Shalum? Thou praisest Hilpa's Beauty, but art thou not secretly enamoured with the Verdure of her Meadows? Art thou not more affected with the Prospect of her green Valleys, than thou wouldest be with the Sight of her Person? The Lowings of my Herds, and the Bleatings of my Flocks, make a pleasant Echo in thy Mountains, and sound sweetly in thy Ears. What the I am delighted with the Wavings of thy Forests, and those Breezes of Persumes which slow from the Top of Tizzab: Are these like the Riches of the Valley?

I knew thee, O Shalum; thou art more wife and happy than any of the Sons of Men. Thy Dwellings are among the Cedars; thou searchest out the Diversity of Soils, thou understandest the Instuences of the Stars, and markest the Change of Seasons. Can a Woman appear lovely in the Eyes of such a one? Disquiet me not, O Shalum; let me alone, that I may enjoy those goodly Possessions which are fallen to my Lot. Win me not by thy enticing Words. May thy Trees increase and multiply; mayest thou add Wood to Wood, and Shade to Shade; but tempt not Hilpa to destroy thy Solitude, and make thy Retirement populous.

THE Chinese say, that a little time afterwards she accepted of a Treat in one of the neighbouring Hills to which Shalum had invited her. This Treat lasted for two Years, and is said to have cost Shalum sive hundred Antelopes, two thousand Ostriches, and a thousand Tun of Milk; but what most of all recommended it, was that Variety of delicious Fruits and Pot-herbs, in which no Person then living could any way equal Shalum.

HE treated her in the Bower which he had planted amidst the Wood of Nightingales. This Wood was made up of such Fruit-Trees and Plants as are most agreeable to the several Kinds of Singing-Birds; so that it had drawn into it all the Music of the Country, and was filled from one End of the Year to the other with the most agreable Consort in Season.

HE shewed her every Day some beautiful and surprising Scene in this new Region of Wood-lands; and as by this Means he had all the Opportunities he could wish for of opening his Mind to her, he succeeded so well, that upon her Departure she made him a kind of Pro-mile.

mise, and gave him her Word to return him a positive

Answer in less than Fifty Years.

SHE had not been long among her own People in the Valleys, when she received new Overtures, and at the same time a most splendid Visit from Mishpach, who was a mighty Man of old, and had built a great City, which he called after his own Name. House was made for at least a thousand Years, nay there were some that were leased out for three Lives; so that the Quantity of Stone and Timber confumed in this Building is scarce to be imagined by those who live in the present Age of the World. This great Man entertained her with the Voice of mufical Instruments which had been lately invented, and danced before her to the Sound of the Timbrel. He also presented her with several domestic Utenfils wrought in Brass and Iron, which had been newly found out for the Conveniency of Life. In the mean time Shalum grew very uneafy with himself, and was forely displeased at Hilpa for the Reception which she had given to Misspach, insomuch that he never wrote to her or spoke of her during a whole Revolution of Saturn; but finding that this Intercourse went no farther than a Visit, he again renewed his Addresses to her, who during his long Silence is faid very often to have cast a wishing Eye upon Mount Tirzab.

HER Mind continued wavering about twenty Years longer between Shalum and Milhpach; for the her Inclinations favoured the former, her Interest pleaded very powerfully for the other. While her Heart was in this unsettled Condition, the following Accident happened which determined her Choice. A high Tower of Wood that stood in the City of Milhpach having caught Fire by a Flash of Lightning, in a few Days reduced the whole Town to Ashes. Milhpach resolved to rebuild the Place whatever it should cost him; and having already destroyed all the Timber of the Country, he was forced to have recourse to Shalum, whose Forests were now two hundred Years old. He purchased these Woods with so many Herds of Cattle and Flocks of Sheep, and with such a vast Extent of Fields and Pastures, that Shalum was now grown more wealthy than Mish-pach;

Zilpach's Daughter, that she no longer resused him in Matriage. On the Day in which he brought her up into the Mountains he raised a most prodigious Pile of Cedar and of every sweet smelling Wood, which reached above 300 Cubits in height: He also cast into the Pile Bundles of Myrrh and Sheaves of Spikenard, enriching it with every spicy Shrub, and making it sat with the Gums of his Plantations. This was the Burnt-Offering which Shalum offered in the Day of his Espousals: The Smoke of it ascended up to Heaven, and filled the whole Country with Incense and Persume.

GE ALTONOMORPHONE TO SEE

Nº 586 Friday, August 27.

dent, Quæque agunt vigilantes, agitantque, ea cuique in sommo accidunt.

Cic. de Div.

The Things, which employ Mens waking Thoughts and Actions, recur to their Imaginations in Sleep.

By the last Post I received the following Letter which is built upon a Thought that is new, and very well carried on; for which Reasons I shall give it to the Public without Alteration, Addition, or Amendment.

SIR,

- IT was a good Piece of Advice which Pythagoras gave to his Scholars, That every Night before they slept they should examine what they had been doing that Day, and so discover what Actions were
- worthy of Pursuit to morrow, and what little Vices were to be prevented from slipping unawares into a Habit. If I might second the Philosopher's Advice,
  - Vo L. VIII. Scholar

Scholar rose, he should consider what he had been about that Night, and with the same Strictness, as if the Condition he has believed himself to be in. was real. Such a Scrutiny into the Actions of his Fancy must be of considerable Advantage, for this Reason, because the Circumstances which a Man ima-' gines himself in during Sleep, are generally such as intirely favour his Inclinations good or bad, and give ' him imaginary Opportunities of pursuing them to the utmost; so that his Temper will lie fairly open to his View, while he confiders how it is moved when free from those Constraints which the Accidents of real Life? ' put it under. Dreams are certainly the Refult of our waking Thoughts, and our daily Hopes and Fears are what give the Mind such nimble Relishes of Pleafure, and fuch severe Touches of Pain in its Midinight Rambles. A Man that murders his Enemy, or deserts his Friend in a Dream, had need to guard his Temper against Revenge and Ingratitude, and take heed that he be not tempted to do a vile thing in the Pursuit of false, or the Neglect of true Honour. For my Part, I seldom receive a Benefit, but in a Night or two's Time, I make most noble Returns for it; which tho' my Benefactor is not a whit the better for, yet it pleases me to think that it was from a Principle of Gratitude in me, that my Mind was susceptible of fuch generous Transport while I thought myself repaying the Kindness of my Friend: And I have often been ready to beg Pardon, instead of returning an Injury, after confidering, that when the Offender was in my Power I had carried my Resentments much too far.

'I think it has been observed in the Course of your Papers, how much one's Happiness or Misery may depend upon the Imagination: Of which Truth those strange Workings of Fancy in Sleep are no inconsiderable Instances; so that not only the Advantage a Man has of making Discoveries of himself, but a Regard to his own Ease or Disquiet, may induce him to accept of my Advice. Such as are willing to comply with it, I shall put into a way of doing it with Pleasure, by observing only one Maxim which I shall give them, viz.

To go to Bed with a Mind entirely free from Passion, and a Body clear of the least Intemperance.

THEY indeed who can fink into Sleep with their Thoughts less calm or innocent than they should be, do but plunge themselves into Scenes of Guilt and Misery; or they who are willing to purchase any Midnight Disquietudes for the Satisfaction of a full Meal, or a Skin full of Wine; these I have nothing to say to, as not knowing how to invite them to Reflexions full of Shame and Horror: But those that will observe this Rule, I promise them they shall awake into Health and Chearfulness, and be capable of recounting with Delight those glorious Moments, wherein the Mind has been indulging itself in such Luxury of Thought, such noble Hurry of Imagination. Suppose a Man's going supperless to Bed should introduce him to the Table of some great Prince or other, where he shall be entertained with the noblest Marks of Honour and Plenty, and do so much Business after, that he shall rise with as good a Stomach to his Breakfast as if he had fasted all Night long; or suppose he should see his dearest Friends remain all Night in great Distresses, which he could instantly have disengaged them from, could he have been content to have gone to Bed without t'other Bottle; Believe me, these Effects of Fancy are no contemptible Consequences of commanding or indulging one's Appetite.

I forbear recommending my Advice upon many other Accounts till I hear how you and your Readers relish what I have already faid; among whom if there be any that may pretend it is useless to them, because they never dream at all, there may be others perhaps, who do little else all day long. Were every one as sensible as I am of what happens to him in his Sleep, it would be no Dispute whether we pass so confiderable a Portion of our Time in the Condition of Stocks and Stones, or whether the Soul were not perpetually at Work upon the Principle of Thought. 'However, 'tis an honest Endeavour of mine to perfuade my Countrymen to reap fome Advantage from fo many unregarded Hours, and as such you will encourage it.

I shall conclude with giving you a Sketch or two of my Way of proceeding.

IF I have any Bufiness of consequence to do tomorrow, I am scarce dropt afleep to night but I am in the midst of it, and when awake I consider the whole Procession of the Affair, and get the Advantage of the next Day's Experience before the Sun has rifen at a Course only so that upon it.

THERE is scarce a great Post but what I have some Time or other been in a but my Behaviour while I was Master of a College, pleases me so well, that whenever there is a Province of that Nature vacant, I intend to step in as soon as I can.

I have done many. Things that would not pals Examination, when I have had the Art of Flying, or being invisible; for which Reason I am glad I am not possessed of those extraordinary Qualities.

LASTLY, Mr. SPECTATOR, I have been 2 great Correspondent of yours, and have read many of my Letters in your Paper which I never wrote you. If you have a mind I should really be so, I have got a Parcel of Visions and other Miscellanies in my Noctuary, which I shall send to enrich your Paper with on desistant en licente pour en loca una proper Occasions the ground at the wife of a work a major while and to ons es della est i brestan yene side que consembledes. Mental ella est i de la comb reselle velle classical.

world all and the an are they work

Oxford, Aug. 20. I am, &c.

John Shallow. A CONTROL ST WITH STATE OF A LINE AND STATE OF ACCUSE

Nº 587 Monday, August 30.

Intus, & in Cute novi. Pers. Sat. 3. v. 30.

from the Limme in which in

I know thee to thy Bottom; from within Thy shallow Centre, to the utmost Skin. DRY D.E N.

HO' the Author of the following Vision is unknown to me, I am apt to think it may be the Work of that ingenious Gentleman, who promifed me, in the last Paper, some Extracts out of his Noctuary.

and becaused against the cice of the Was the other Day reading the Life of Mahomet. Among many other Extravagances, I find it recorded of that Impostor, that in the fourth Year of his Age the Angel Gabriel caught him up, while he was among his Play-fellows, and carrying him afide, cut open his Breaft, plucked out his Heart, and wrung out of it that black drop of Blood, in which, say the Turkish Divines, is contained the Fomes Peccati, fo that he was free from Sin ever after. I immediately faid to myself, the this Story be a Fiction, a very good Moral may be drawn from it, would every Man but apply it to himself, and endeavour to squeeze out of his Heart whatever Sins or ill Qualities he finds in it.

WHILE my Mind was wholly taken up with this Contemplation, I infensibly fell into a most pleasing Slumber, when methought two Porters entered my Chamber, carrying a large Chest between them. After having fet it down in the middle of the Room they departed. I immediately endeavoured to open what was fent me, when a Shape, like that in which we paint our Angels, appeared before me, and forbad me. Inclosed, said he, are the Hearts of several of your Friends and Acquaintance; but before you can be qualified to fee and animadvert on the Failings of others, you must be pure yourself; whereupon he drew out his Incision Knife, cut me open, took out my Heart, and began to squeeze it. I was in a great Consusion, to see how many things, which I had always cherished as Virtues, issued out of my Heart on this occasion. In short, after it had been thorough squeezed, it looked like an empty Bladder, when the Phantom, breathing a fresh Particle of Divine Air into it, restored it safe to its former Repository; and having sewed me up, we began to examine the Chest.

· THE Hearts were all inclosed in transparent Phials, and preserved in Liquor which looked like Spirits of Wine. The first which I cast my Eye upon, I was afraid would have broke the Glass which con-' tained it. It shot up and down, with incredible Swift-' ness, thro' the Liquor in which it swam, and very frequently bounced against the Side of the Phial. The Fomes; or Spot in the Middle of it, was not large, but of a red fiery Colour, and feemed to be the Cause of these violent Agitations. That, says my Intructor, is the Heart of Tom Dread-Nought, who behaved him-' self well in the late Wars, but has for these Ten Years last past been aiming at some Post of Honour to no Purpose. He is lately retired into the Country, where quite choked up with Spleen and Choler, he rails at better Men than himself, and will be for ever uneasy, because it is impossible he should think his Merit sufficiently rewarded. The next Heart that I examined was remarkable for its Smallness; it lay still at the Bottom of the Phial, and I could hardly perceive that it beat at all. The Fomes was quite black, and had almost diffused itself over the whole Heart. This, fays my Interpreter, is the Heart of Dick Gloomy, who never thirsted after any thing but Money. Notwithstanding all his Endeavours, he is still poor. This has flung him into a most deplorable State of Melancholy and Despair. He is a Composition of Envy and Idleness, hates Mankind, but gives them their Revenge by being more uneasy to himself, than to any one elie. THE THE Phial I looked upon next contained a large fair Heart, which beat very strongly. The Fomes or Spot in it was exceeding small; but I could not help observing, that which way soever I turned the Phial it always appeared uppermost, and in the strongest Point of Light. The Heart you are examining, says my Companion, belongs to Will Worthy. He has, indeed, a most noble Soul, and is possessed of a thousand good Qualities. The Speck which you discover is Vanity.

HERE, says the Angel, is the Heart of Freelove, your intimate Friend. Freelove and I, said I, are at present very cold to one another, and I do not care for looking on the Heart of a Man, which I fear is overcast with Rancour. My Teacher commanded me to look upon it; I did so, and to my unspeakable Surprise, sound that a small swelling Spot, which I at first took to be Ill-Will towards me, was only Passon, and that upon my nearer Inspection it wholly disappeared; upon which the Phantom told me Freelove was one of the best-natured Men alive.

THIS, fays my Teacher, is a Female Heart of your Acquaintance. I found the Fomes in it of the largest Size, and of a hundred different Colours, which were still varying every Moment. Upon my asking to whom it belonged, I was informed that it was the Heart of Coquetilla.

I set it down, and drew out another, in which I took the Fomes at first Sight to be very small, but was amazed to find, that, as I looked stedfastly upon it, it grew still larger. It was the Heart of Melissa, a noted Prude who lives the next Door to me.

I show you this, says the Phantom, because it is indeed a Rarity, and you have the Happiness to know the Person to whom it belongs. He then put into my Hands a large Crystal Glass, that inclosed an Heart, in which, though I examined it with the utmost Nicety, I could not perceive any Blemish. I made no Scruple to affirm that it must be the Heart of Seraphina, and was glad, but not surprised, to find that it was so. She is indeed, continued my Guide, the Ornament, as well as the Envy, of her

Sex; at these last Words he pointed to the Hearts of feveral of her Female Acquaintance which lay in different Phials, and had very large Spots in them, all of a deep Blue You are not to wonder, fays he, that you fee no Spot in an Heart, whose Innocence has been · Proof against all the Corruptions of a depraved Age.

If it has any Blemish, it is too small to be discovered by Human Eyes of a -sale, and slow hall a

'I laid it down, and took up the Hearts of other Females, in all of which the Fomes ran in several Veins.

which were twifted together, and made a very perplexed

Figure: I asked the Meaning of it, and was told it represented Deceit: ob I bate , radioan one of blo

I should have been glad to have examined the Hearts of several of my Acquaintance, whom I knew to be par' ticularly addicted to Drinking, Gaming, Intriguing, &c. but my Interpreter told me, I must let that alone till another Opportunity, and flung down the Cover of the · Cheft with so much violence, as immediately awoke me.

the Fuantom fold me fire

Nº 588 Wednesday, September 1. 100

Dicitis, Omnis in Imbecillitate eft & Gratia, & Caritas.

You pretend that all Kindness and Benevolence is founded in Weakness.

A N may be confidered in two Views, as a Reafonable, and as a Sociable Being; capable of becoming himself either happy or miserable, and of contributing to the Happiness or Misery of his Fellow-Creatures. Suitably to this double Capacity, the Contriver of Human Nature hath wifely furnished it with two Principles of Action, Self-love and Benevolence; defigned one of them to render Man wakeful to his own personal Interest, the other to dispose him for giving his utmost Assistance to all engaged in the same Pursuit. This is such an Account of our Frame, so agreeable to Reason, so much for the Honour of our Maker, and the Credit of our Species, that it may appear fomewhat unaccountable what should induce Men to represent Human Nature as they do under Characters tof Disadvantage, or, having drawn it with a little and fordid Aspect, what Pleasure they can possibly take in such a Picture. Do they reslect that it is their own, and, if we would believe themselves, is not more odious than the Original? One of the first that talked in this lofty Strain of our Nature was Epicurus. Beneficence, would his Followers fay, is all founded in Weakness; and, whatever he pretended, the Kindness that passeth between Men and Men is by every Man directed to himself. This, it must be confessed, is of a piece with the rest of that hopeful Philofophy, which having patched Man up out of the four Blements, attributes his Being to Chance, and derives all his Actions from an unintelligible Declination of Atoms. And for these glorious Discoveries the Poet is beyond Measure transported in the Praises of his Hero, as if he must needs be fomething more than Man, only for an Endeavour to prove that Man is in nothing superior to Beasts. In this School was Mr. Hobbes instructed to speak after the same Manner, if he did not rather draw his Knowledge from an Observation of his own Temper; for he somewhere unluckily lays down this as a Rule. That from the Similitudes of Thoughts and Passions of one Man to the Thoughts and Passions of another, whosever looks into himself and considers what he doth when he thinks, hopes, fears, &c. and upon what Grounds; he shall hereby read and know what are the Thoughts and Passions of all other Men, upon the like Occafions.' Now we will allow Mr. Hobbes to know best how he was inclined: But in earnest, I should be heartily out of Conceit with myfelf, if I thought myfelf of this unamiable Temper, as he affirms, and should have as little Kindness for myself as for any Body in the World. Hitherto I always imagined that kind and benevolent Propensions were the Original Growth of the Heart of Man, and, however checked and overtopped by counter Inclinations that have fince forung up within us, have fill some Force in the worst of F 5 Tempers, Tempers, and a confiderable Influence on the best. And, methinks, it is a fair Step towards the Proof of this, that the most beneficent of all Beings is He who hath an absolute Fulness of Perfection in Himself, who gave Existence to the Universe, and so cannot be supposed to want that which He communicated, without diminishing from the Plenitude of his own Power and Happiness. The Philosophers before-mentioned have indeed done all that in them lay to invalidate this Argument; for placing the Gods in a State of the most elevated Bleffedness, they describe them as Selfish as we poor miserable Mortals can be, and shut them out from all Concern for Mankind, upon the Score of their having no Need of us. But if He that fitteth in the Heavens wants not us, we stand in continual Need of Him; and furely, next to the Survey of the immense-Treasures of his own Mind, the most exalted Pleasure He receives is from beholding Millions of Creatures. lately drawn out of the Gulph of Non-existence, rejoicing in the various Degrees of Being and Happiness imparted to them. And as this is the true, the glorious Character of the Deity, so in forming a reasonable Creature He would not, if possible, suffer his Image to pass out of his Hands unadorned with a Resemblance of Himself in this most lovely Part of his Nature. For what Complacency could a Mind, whose Love is as unbounded as his Knowledge, have in a Work so unlike Himself; a Creature that should be capable of knowing and conversing with a vast Circle of Objects, and love none but Himself? What Proportion would there be between the Head and the Heart of fuch a Creature, its Affections, and its Understanding? Or could a Society of such Creatures, with no other Bottom but Self-Love on which to maintain a Commerce, ever flourish ? Reason, 'tis certain, would oblige every Man to purfue the general Happiness, as the Means to procure and establish his own; and yet if, besides this Consideration, there were not a natural Instinct, prompting Men. to defire the Welfare and Satisfaction of others, Self-Love, in Defiance of the Admonitions of Reason, would quickly run all Things into a State of War and Confusion. As nearly interested as the Soul is in the Fate of the Body, our provident Creator faw it necessary, by the constant Returns of Hunger and Thirst, those importunate Appetites, to put it in mind of its Charge; knowing, that if we should eat and drink no oftner than cold abstracted Speculation should put us upon these Exercises, and then leave it to Reason to prescribe the Quantity, we should soon refine ourselves out of this bodily Life. And indeed, 'tis obvious to remark, that we follow nothing heartily, unless carried to it by Inclinations which anticipate our Reason, and, like a Bias, draw the Mind strongly towards it. In order, therefore, to establish a perpetual Intercourse of Benefits amongst Mankind, their Maker would not fail to give them this generous Prepoffession of Benevolence, if, as I have said, it were posfible. And from whence can we go about to argue its Impossibility ? Is it inconsistent with Self-Love? Are their Motions contrary? No more than the diurnal Rotation of the Earth is opposed to its Annual; or its Motion round its own Centre, which might be improved as an Illustration of Self-Love, to that which whirls it about the common Centre of the World, answering to universal Benevolence. Is the Force of Self-Love abated, or its Interest prejudiced by Benevolence? So far from it, that Benevolence, though a distinct Principle, is extremely serviceable to Self-Love, and then doth most Service when 'tis least design'd.

BUT to descend from Reason to Matter of Fact; the Pity which arises on Sight of Persons in Distress. and the Satisfaction of Mind which is the Consequence of having removed them into a happier State, are inflead of a thousand Arguments to prove such a thing as a difinterested Benevolence. Did Pity proceed from a Reflexion we make upon our Liableness to the same ill Accidents we see befal others, it were nothing to the present Purpose; but this is assigning an artificial Cause of a natural Passion, and can by no Means be admitted as a tolerable Account of it, because Children and Persons most Thoughtless about their own Condition, and incapable of entering into the Prospects of Futurity, feel the most violent Touches of Compasfion. And then as to that charming Delight which immediately follows the giving Joy to another, or relieving. Vieving his Sorrow, and is, when the Objects are numerous, and the Kindness of Importance, really inexpreffible, what can this be owing to but a Consciousness of a Man's having done fomething praise-worthy, and expressive of a great Soul? Whereas, if in all this he only facrificed to Vanity and Self-Love, as there would be nothing brave in Actions that make the most shining Appearance, fo Nature would not have rewarded them with this divine Pleasure; nor could the Commendations, which a Person receives for Benefits done upon felfish Views, be at all more satisfactory, than when he is applauded for what he doth without Design; because in both Cases the Ends of Self-Love are equally answered. The Conscience of approving ones self a Benefactor to Mankind is the noblest Recompence for being fo; doubtless it is, and the most interested cannot propose any thing so much to their own Advantage; notwithstanding which, the Inclination is nevertheless unselfish. The Pleasure which attends the Gratification of our Hunger and Thirst, is not, the Cause of these Appetites; they are previous to any fuch Profeect; and so likewise is the Desire of doing Good; with this Difference, that being feated in the intellectual Part, this last, though antecedent to Reason, may yet be improved and regulated by it, and, I will add, is no otherwife a Virtue than as it is fo.

THUS have I contended for the Dignity of that Nazure I have the Honour to partake of, and, after all the Evidence produced, think I have a Right to conclude. against the Motto of this Paper, that there is such a thing as Generofity in the World. Though if I were under a Mistake in this, I should say as Cicero in Relation to the Immortality of the Soul, I willingly err, and should believe it very much for the Interest of Mankind to lie under the same Delusion. For the contrary Notion naturally tends to dispirit the Mind, and finks it into a Meanness fatal to the God-like Zeal of doing good: As on the other hand, it teaches People to be Ungrateful, by possessing them with a Persuasion concerning their Benefactors. that they have no Regard to them in the Benefits they bestow. Now he that banishes Gratitude from among Men, by so doing stops up the Stream of Beneficence.

For though iff conferring Kindnesses, a truly generous Man doth not aim at a Return, yet he looks to the Qualities of the Person obliged, and as nothing renders a Person more unworthy of a Benesit, than his being without all Resentment of it, he will not be extremely forward to oblige such a Man.

THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE

Nº 589 Friday, September 3.

The Impious Ax he plies; loud Strokes resound; 'Till drag'd with Ropes, and fell'd with many a Wound,
The loosen'd Tree comes rushing to the Ground.

bictori, by several Candes in this Line

SIR,

Am so great an Admirer of Trees, that the Spot of Ground I have chosen to build a small Seat upon, in the Country, is almost in the midst of a large Wood. I was obliged, much against my Will, to cut down several Trees, that I might have any such thing as a Walk in my Gardens; but then I have taken care to leave the Space, between every Walk, as much a Wood as I found it. The Moment you turn either to the Right or Lest, you are in a Forest, where Nature presents you with a much more beautiful Scene than could have been raised by Art.

You Oaks in my Gardens of four hundred Years standing, and a Knot of Elms that might shelter a Troop of · Horse from the Rain.

ferve feveral prodigal young Heirs in the Neighbourhood, felling down the most glorious Monuments of their Ancestors Industry, and running, in a Day, the · Product of Ages.

Planting, which put me upon looking into my Books to give you fome Account of the Veneration the Ancients had for Trees. There is an old Tradition, that Abraham planted a Cypres, a Pine, and a Cedar, and that these three incorporated into one Tree, which was cut down for the Building of the Temple of Solomon.

ISIDORUS, who lived in the Reign of Constantius, affures us, that he saw, even in his Time, that famous Oak in the Plains of Mambré, under which Abraham is reported to have dwelt, and adds, that the People looked upon it with a great Veneration, and preserved it as a facred Tree.

THE Heathens still went farther, and regarded it as the highest Piece of Sacrilege to injure certain. Trees which they took to be protected by some Deity. The Story of Eristethon, the Grove at Dodona, and that at Delphi, are all Instances of this Kind.

IF we confider the Machine in Virgil, so much blamed by several Critics in this Light, we shall hardly think it too violent.

* A N E AS, when he built his Fleet in order to fail for Italy, was obliged to cut down the Grove on Mount Ida, which however he durst not do till he had obtain ed leave from Cybele, to whom it was dedicated.
The Goddess could not but think herself obliged to protect these Ships, which were made of consecrated Timber, after a very extraordinary Manner, and therefore desired Jupiter, that they might not be obnoxious to the Power of Waves or Winds. Jupiter would not grant this, but promised her, that as many as came safe to Italy should be transformed into Goddesses of the Sea; which the Poet tells us was accordingly executed.

And now at length the number'd Hours were come, Prefix'd by Fate's irrevocable Doom, When the great Mother of the Gods was free To fave her Ships, and finish Jove's Decree. First, from the Quarter of the Morn, there spring A Light that sign'd the Heavens, and shot along:
Then from a Cloud, fring'd round with Golden Fires,
Were Timbrels heard, and Berecynthian Quires:
And last a Voice, with more than Mortal Sounds,
Both Hosts in Arms oppos'd with equal Horror wounds.

O Trojan Race, your needless Aid forbear;
And know my Ships are my peculiar Care.
With greater Ease the bold Rutulian may,
With hissing Brands, attempt to burn the Sea,
Than singe my sacred Pines. But you, my Charge,
Loos'd from your crooked Anchors lanch at large,
Exalted each a Nymph: Forsake the Sand,
And swim the Seas, at Cybele's Command.
No sooner had the Goddess ceas'd to speak,
When lo, th' obedient Ships their Haulsers break;
And strange to tell, like Dolphins in the Main,
They plunge their Prows, and dive, and spring again:
As many beauteous Maids the Billows sweep,
As rode before tall Vessels on the Deep.

Dryden's Virg.

THE common Opinion concerning the Nymphs, whom the Ancients called Hamadryads, is more to the Honour of Trees than any thing yet mentioned. It was thought the Fate of these Nymphs had so near a Dependence on some Trees, more especially Oaks, that they lived and died together. For this Reason they were extremely grateful to such Persons who preserved those Trees with which their Being subsisted. Apollonius tells us a very remarkable Story to this Purpose, with which I shall conclude my Letter.

A certain Man, called Rhacus, observing an old. Oak ready to fall, and being moved with a fort of Compassion towards the Tree, ordered his Servants to pour in fresh Earth at the Roots of it, and set it upright. The Hamadryad or Nymph, who must necessarily have perished with the Tree, appeared to him the next Day, and after having returned him her Thanks, told him, she was ready to grant whatever Dipder's Wirg.

he should ask. As she was extremely Beautiful. Rhæcus defired he might be entertained as her Lover. The Hamadryad, not much displeased with the Request, promis'd to give him a Meeting, but commanded him for fome Days to abstain from the Embraces of all other Women, adding that she would fend a Bee to him, to let him know when he was to be happy. Rhacus was, it seems, too much addicted to Gaming, and happened to be in a Run of ill Luck when the faithful Bee came buzzing about him: fo that inflead of minding his kind Invitation, he had like to have killed him for his Pains. The Hamadryad was fo provoked at her own Disappointment, and the ill Usage of her Messenger, that she deprived Rhæcus of the Use of his Limbs. However, says the Story, he was not fo much a Cripple, but he made a fhift to cut down the Tree, and consequently to fell his · Mistress. Merang bedare at Mails ree an over the

At rolle before bell Villette could whee,

For your in small threat to the Rolls of it smallet is a new your contract to a record of the smallest contract to the contract to the small threat the contract to the smallest contract to the smallest contract to the smallest contract to the smallest contract to the small to the several to the small to the several to the small to the several to the Alter M. 2012 Million Concern Commission III T.

Realign, many voting Auchgre contrasts the prefent Tiere WARREST SHOW

Nº 590 Monday, September 60 114

- Assiduo labuntur tempora motu Non Jecus ac flumen. Neque enim confiftere flumen, Nec levis bora potest: sed ut unda impellitur unda, Urgeturque prior venienti, urgetque priorem, Tempora fic fugiunt pariter, pariterque sequentur; Et nova funt semper. Nam quod fuit ante, relictum eft; Fitque quod haud fuerat : momentaque cuncta novantur. Ovid. Met. 1. 15. v. 179.

E'en Times are in perpetual Flux, and run, Like Rivers from their Fountains, rolling on. For Time, no more than Streams, is at a Stay; The flying Hour is even on her Way: And as the Fountain still supplies her Store;
The Wave behind impels the Wave before; Thus in successive Course the Minutes run, Still moving, ever new: For former things Are laid afide, like abdicated Kings; And ev'ry Moment alters what is done, And innovates some Act, till then unknown.

of or bearing large it toolen con DRX DEN.

ldes of the oring park. This there have is a fatory not or The following Discourse comes from the same Hand with the Essays upon Infinitude.

E consider infinite Space as an Expansion with-out a Circumference: We consider Eternity, or infinite Duration, as a Line that has nelther a Beginning hor an End. In our Speculations of infinite Space, we confider that particular Place in which we exist, as a kind of Centre to the whole Expanfion. In our Speculations of Eternity, we confider the Time which is present to us as the Middle, which divides the whole Line into two equal Parts. For this 718 1 Reason. Reason, many witty Authors compare the present Time to an Ishmus or narrow Neck of Land that rises in the midst of an Ocean, immeasurably diffused on either Side

PHILOSOPHY, and indeed common Sense, naturally throws Eternity under two Divisions; which we may call in English, that Eternity which is past, and that Eternity which is to come. The learned Terms of Æternitas à Parte ante, and Æternitas à Parte post, may be more amusing to the Reader, but can have no other idea affixed to them than what is conveyed to us by those Words, an Eternity that is past, and an Eternity that is to come. Each of these Extremities is bounded at the one Extreme; or, in other Words, the former has an End, and the latter a Beginning.

LET us first of all consider that Eternity which is past, reserving that which is to come for the Subject of another Paper. The Nature of this Eternity is utterly inconceivable by the Mind of Man: Our Reason demonstrates to us that it bas been, but at the same time can frame no Idea of it, but what is big with Absurdity and Contradiction. We can have no other Conception of any Duration which is past, than that all of it was once prefent; and whatever was once present, is at some certain Distance from us, and whatever is at any certain Distance from us, be the Distance never so remote, cannot be Eternity. The very Notion of any Duration's being past, implies that it was once present; for the Idea of being once present, is actually included in the Idea of its being past. This therefore is a Depth not to be founded by Human Understanding. We are fure that there has been an Eternity, and yet contradict ourselves when we measure this Eternity by any Notion which we can frame of it.

IF we go to the bottom of this Matter, we shall find that the Difficulties we meet with in our Conceptions of Eternity proceed from this single Reason, That we can have no other Idea of any kind of Duration, than that by which we ourselves, and all other created Beings do exist; which is, a successive Duration made up of past, present, and to come. There is nothing which exists after this Manner, all the Parts

Parts of whose Existence were not once actually present. and confequently may be reached by a certain Number of Years applied to it. We may ascend as high as we please, and employ our Being to that Eternity which is to come, in adding Millions of Years to Millions of Years, and we can never come up to any Fountain-Head of Duration, to any Beginning in Eternity: But at the same time we are sure, that whatever was once present does lie within the reach of Numbers, though perhaps we can never be able to put enough of them together for that Purpose. We may as well say, that any thing may be actually present in any Part of infinite Space, which does not lie at a certain Distance from us. as that any Part of infinite Duration was once actually present, and does not also lie at some determined Distance from us. The Distance in both Cases may be immeasurable and indefinite as to our Faculties, but our Reason tells us that it cannot be so in itself. Here therefore is that Difficulty which Human Understanding is not capable of furmounting. We are fure that fomething must have existed from Eternity, and are at the fame time unable to conceive, that any thing which exists, according to our Notion of Existence, can have existed from Eternity. formation of Boaren.

IT is hard for a Reader, who has not rolled this Thought in his own Mind, to follow in fuch an abstracted Speculation; but I have been the longer on it, because I think it is a demonstrative Argument of the Being and Eternity of a God: And though there are many other Demonstrations which lead us to this great Truth, I do not think we ought to lay aside any Proofs in this Matter, which the Light of Reason has suggested to us, especially when it is such a one as has been urged by Men famous for their Penetration and Force of Understanding, and which appears altogether conclusive to those who will be at the pains to examine it.

HAVING thus confidered that Eternity which is past, according to the best Idea we can frame of it, I shall now draw up those several Articles on this Subject, which are dictated to us by the Light of Reason, and which may be looked upon as the Creed of a Philosopher in this great Point.

FIRST.

FIRST, It is certain that no Being could have made itself; for if so, it must have acted before it was, which is a Contradiction.

SECONDLY, That therefore fome Being must have existed from all Eternity.

of created Beings, or according to any Notions which we have of Existence, could not have existed from Eter-mity.

FOURTHLY, That this eternal Being must therefore be the great Author of Nature, The Ancient of Days, who, being at an infinite Distance in his Perfections from all finite and created Beings, exists in a quite different manner from them, and in a manner of which they can have no Idea.

I know that several of the Schoolmen, who would not be thought ignorant of any thing, have pretended to explain the Manner of God's Existence, by telling us, That he comprehends infinite Duration in every Moment; That Eternity is with him a Punctum stans, a fixed Point; or which is as good Sense, an infinite Instant; That nothing, with reference to his Existence, is either past or to come: To which the ingenious Mr. Cowoley alludes in his Description of Heaven.

Nothing is there to come, and nothing past, But an eternal NOW does always last.

FOR my own part, I look upon these Propositions as Words that have no Ideas annexed to them; and think Men had better own their Ignorance, than advance Doctrines by which they mean nothing, and which, indeed, are felf-contradictory. We cannot be too modelt in our Disquisitions, when we meditate on Him, who is environed with so much Glory and Perfection, who is the Source of Being, the Fountain of all that Existence which we and his whole Creation derive from him. Let us therefore with the utmost Humility acknowledge, that as some Being must necessarily have existed from Eternity, fo this Being does exist after an incomprehenfible manner, fince it is impossible for a Being to have existed from Eternity after our Manner or Notions of Existence. Revelation confirms these natural Dictates of Reason in the Accounts which it gives us of the Divine Existence, where it tells us, that he is the same Yesterday, To day, and for Ever; that he is the Alpha and Omega. the Beginning and the Ending; that a thousand Years are with him as one Day, and one Day as a Thousand Years; by which, and the like Expressions, we are taught. that his Existence, with relation to Time or Duration, is infinitely different from the Existence of any of his Creatures, and confequently that it is impossible for us to frame a fact sates any adequate Conceptions of it.

IN the first Revelation which he makes of his own Being, he intitles himself, I am that I am; and when Moses desires to know what Name he shall give him in his Embassy to Pharash, he bids him say that I am bath fent you. Our great Creator, by this Revelation of himfelf, does in a manner exclude every thing elfe from a real Existence, and distinguishes himself from his Creatures, as the only Being which truly and really exists. The ancient Platonic Notion which was drawn from Speculations of Eternity, wonderfully agrees with this Revelation which God hath made of himself. There is nothing, fay they, which in reality exists, whose Existence, as we call it, is pieced up of past, present, and to come. Such a flitting and fuccessive Existence is rather a Shadow of Existence, and something which is like it, than Existence itself. He only properly exists whose Existence is intirely present; that is, in other Words, who exists in the most perfect manner, and in such a manner as we have no Idea of.

I shall conclude this Speculation with one useful Inference. How can we fufficiently proftrate ourselves and fall down before our Maker, when we confider that ineffable Goodness and Wisdom which contrived this Existence for finite Natures? What must be the Overflowings of that Good-will, which prompted our Creator to adapt Existence to Beings, in whom it is not necessary? Especially when we consider that he himfelf was before in the complete Possession of Existence and of Happiness, and in the full Enjoyment of Eter-What Man can think of himself as called out and separated from nothing, of his being made a conscious, a reasonable and a happy Creature, in short, of being

being taken in as a Sharer of Existence, and a kind of Partner in Eternity, without being swallowed up in Wonder, in Praise, in Adoration! It is indeed a Thought too big for the Mind of Man, and rather to be entertained in the Secrecy of Devotion, and in the Silence of the Soul, than to be expressed by Words. The Supreme Being has not given us Powers or Faculties sufficient to extol and magnify such unutterable Goodness.

IT is however some Comfort to us, that we shall be always doing what we shall be never able to do, and that a Work which cannot be finished, will however be the Work of an Eternity.

Nº 591 Wednesday, September 8.

- Tenerorum lusor amorum.
Ovid. Trift. Eleg. 3. l. 3. v. 73.

Love the foft Subject of his sportive Muse.

Have just received a Letter from a Gentleman, who tells me he has observed, with no small Concern, that my Papers have of late been very barren in relation to Love; a Subject which, when agreeably handled, can scarce fail of being well received by both Sexes.

IF my Invention therefore should be almost exhausted on this Head, he offers to serve under me in the Quality of a Love-Casusta for which he conceives himself to be throughly qualified, having made this Passion his principal Study, and observed it in all its different Shapes and Appearances, from the Fisteenth to the Forty-sifth Year of his Age.

HE assures me with an Air of Considence, which I hope proceeds from his real Abilities, that he does not doubt of giving Judgment to the Satisfaction of the Parties concerned, on the most nice and intricate Cases which can happen in an Amour; as,

HOW great the Contraction of the Fingers must be before it amounts to a Squeeze by the Hand.

WHAT

WHAT can be properly termed an absolute Denial from a Maid, and what from a Widow.

WHAT Advances a Lover may presume to make, after having received a Pat upon his Shoulder from his Mistress's Fan.

WHETHER a Lady, at the first Interview, may allow an Humble Servant to kiss her Hand.

HOW far it may be permitted to carefs the Maid in order to succeed with the Mistress.

WHAT Constructions a Man may put upon a Smile, and in what Cases a Frown goes for nothing.

ON what Occasions a sheepish Look may do Service, &c.

AS a farther Proof of his Skill, he has also sent me several Maxims in Love, which he assures me are the Result of a long and profound Reslexion, some of which I think myself obliged to communicate to the Public, not remembering to have seen them before in any Author.

'THERE are more Calamities in the World, arifing from Love than from Hatred.

LOVE is the Daughter of Idleness, but the Mother of Disquietude.

"MEN of grave Natures (says Sir Francis Bacon) are the most constant; for the same Reason Men should be more constant than Women.

'THE Gay Part of Mankind is most amorous, the Serious most loving.

A Coquette often loses her Reputation, while she pre-ferves her Virtue.

- A Prude often preserves her Reputation when she has lost her Virtue.
- LOVE refines a Man's Behaviour, but makes a Woman's ridiculous.
- LOVE is generally accompanied with Good-will in the Young, Interest in the Middle-aged, and a Pasfion too gross to name in the Old.

THE Endeavours to revive a decaying Passion generally extinguish the Remains of it.

A Woman who from being a Slattern becomes overneat, or from being over-neat becomes a Slattern, is most certainly in Love. I shall make use of this Gentleman's Skill, as I see Occasion; and since I am got upon the Subject of Love, shall conclude this Paper with a Copy of Verses which were lately sent me by an unknown Hand, as I look upon them to be above the ordinary Run of Sonneteers.

THE Author tells me they were written in one of his despairing Fits; and I find entertains some Hope that his Mistress may pity such a Passion as he has described, before the knows that the is herfelf Corinna.

Onceal, fond Man, conceal the mighty Smart, Nor tell Corinna she has fir'd thy Heart. In vain would'st thou complain, in vain pretend To ask a Pity which she must not lend. She's too much thy Superior to comply, And too too fair to let thy Passion die. Languish in secret, and with dumb Surprise Drink the refiftles Glances of her Eyes. At awful Distance entertain thy Grief, Be fill in Pain, but never ask Relief. Ne'er tempt her Scorn of thy consuming State; Be any way undone, but fly her Hate. Thou must submit to see thy Charmer bless Some bappier Youth that shall admire her less; Who in that lovely Form, that Heav'nly Mind, Shall miss ten thousand Beauties thou could'st find, Who with low Fancy shall approach her Charms, While half enjoy'd she sinks into his Arms. She knows not, must not know, thy nobler Fire, Whom she, and whom the Muses do inspire; Her Image only Shall thy Breaft employ, And fill thy captiv'd Soul with Shades of Joy; Direct thy Dreams by Night, thy Thoughts by Day; And never, never, from thy Bosom stray. e er ger op he de id the Old.

* marelle everyonde the Resident in ...

** A State of the state of th

L. c. midayours to resilve a decaying Palion ear.

translated thinks in Loren

No 592 Friday, September 10.

___ Studium fine divite Vena.

Hor. Ars Poet. v. 409.

Art without a Vein. Roscom Mon.

Look upon the Play-house as a World within itself. They have lately furnished the Middle Region of it with a new Set of Meteors, in order to give the Sublime to many modern Tragedies. I was there last Winter at the first Rehearfal of the new Thunder, which is much more deep and fonorous than any hitherto made use of. They have a Salmoneus behind the Scenes who plays it off with great Success. Their Lightnings are made to flash more briskly than heretofore; their Clouds are also better furbelow'd, and more voluminous; not to mention a violent Storm locked up in a great Cheft, that is defign'd for the Tempest. They are also provided with above a Dozen Showers of Snow. which, as I am informed, are the Plays of many unfuccessful Poets artificially cut and shreaded for that Use. Mr. Rymer's Edgar is to fall in Snow at the next acting of King Lear, in order to heighten, or rather to alleviate. the Distress of that unfortunate Prince; and to ferve by way of Decoration to a Piece which that great Critic has written against.

I do not indeed wonder that the Actors should be fuch professed Enemies to those among our Nation who are commonly known by the Name of Critics, fince it is a Rule among these Gentlemen to fall upon a Play. not because it is ill written, but because it takes. Several of them lay it down as a Maxim, That whatever Dramatic Performance has a long Run, most of Ne. eeffity be good for nothing; as though the first Precept in Poetry were not to please. Whether this Rule holds good or not, I shall leave to the Determination of those who are better Judges than myself; If it does, I am sure it tends very much to the Honour of those Gentlemen who have established it; sew of their Pieces having been disgraced by a Run of three Days, and most of them being so exquisitely written, That the Town would never give them more than one Night's hearing.

Vol. VIII.

I have a great Esteem for a true Critic, such as Ariftotle and Longinus among the Greeks, Horace and Quintilian among the Romans, Boileau and Dacier among the French. But it is our Misfortune, that some who fet up for professed Critics among us are so stupid, that! they do not know how to put ten Words together with Elegance or common Propriety, and withal fo illiterate, that they have no Taste of the learned Languages, and therefore criticife upon old Authors only at second hand. They judge of them by what others have written, and not by any Notions they have of the Authors themselves. The Words Unity, Action, Sentiment, and Diction, pronounced with an Air of Authority, give them a Figure among unlearned Readers. who are apt to believe they are very deep, because they are unintelligible. The ancient Critics are full of the Praises of their Contemporaries; they discover Beauties which escaped the Observation of the Vulgar, and very often find out Reasons for palliating and excusing such little Slips and Overfights as were committed in the Writings of eminent Authors. On the contrary, most of the Smatterers in Criticism who appear among us, make it their Bufiness to vilify and depreciate every new Production that gains Applause, to descry imagimary Blemishes, and to prove by far-fetch'd Arguments. that what pass for Beauties in any celebrated Piece are Faults and Errors. In short, the Writings of these Critics compar'd with those of the Ancients, are like the Works of the Sophists compared with those of the old Philosophers.

ENVY and Cavil are the natural Fruits of Laziness and Ignorance; which was probably the Reason, that in the Heathen Mythology Momus is said to be the Son of Nox and Somnus, of Darkness and Sleep. Idle Men, who have not been at the pains to accomplish or distinguish themselves, are very apt to detract from others:

others; as ignorant Men are very subject to decry those Beauties in a celebrated Work which they have not Eyes to discover. Many of our Sons of Momus, who dignify themselves by the Name of Critics, are the genuine Descendents of these two illustrious Ancestors. They are often led into those numerous Absurdities, in which they daily instruct the People, by not considering that, First, There is sometimes a greater Judgment shewn in deviating from the Rules of Art, than in adhering to them; and, 2dly, That there is more Beauty in the Works of a great Genius who is ignorant of all the Rules of Art, than in the Works of a little Genius, who not only knows, but scrupulously observes them.

FIRST, We may often take notice of Men who are perfectly acquainted with all the Rules of good Writing. and notwithstanding choose to depart from them on extraordinary Occasions. I could give Instances out of all the Tragic Writers of Antiquity who have shewn their Judgment in this Particular; and purposely receded from an established Rule of the Drama, when it has made way for a much higher Beauty than the Observation of such a Rule would have been. Those who have surveyed the noblest Pieces of Architecture and Statuary both ancient and modern, know very well that there are frequent Deviations from Art in the Works of the greatest Masters. which have produced a much nobler Effect than a more accurate and exact way of Proceeding could have done. This often arises from what the Italians call the Gusto Grande in these Arts, which is what we call the Sublime in Writing.

IN the next Place, our Critics do not feem fenfible that there is more Beauty in the Works of a great Genius who is ignorant of the Rules of Art, than in those of a little Genius who knows and observes them. It is of these Men of Genius that Terence speaks, in opposition to the little artificial Cavillers of his Time;

Quorum emulari exoptat negligentiam A Potius, quam istorum obscuram diligentiam.

Whose Negligence he wou'd rather imitate, than these Mens obscure Diligence.

G 2

A Critic

A Canic

A Critic may have the same Consolation in the ill Successo of his Play, as Dr. South tells us a Physician has at the Death of a Patient, that he was killed foundum artem. Our inimitable Shakespear is a Stumbling-block to the whole Tribe of these rigid Chities. Who would not rather read one of his Plays, where there is not a fingle Rule of the Stage observed, than any Production of a modern Critic, where there is not any one of them violated! Shake pear was indeed born with all the Seeds of Poetry, and may be compared to the Stone in Pan but's Ring. which, as Pliny tolls us, had the Figure of Apollo and the Nine Muses in the Veins of it, produced by the spontanes ous Hand of Nature, without any Help from Are.

CHARLE CONTRACTOR

Nº 593 Monday, September 13.

Quale per incertam Lunam fub luce maligna Est iter in Sylvis Virg. Æn. 6. v. 270.

Thus wander Travellers in Woods by Night. By the Moon's doubtful, and malignant Light.

DRYDEN.

Y dreaming Correspondent, Mr. Shadow, has fent me a fecond Letter, with feveral curious Observations on Dreams in general, and the Method to render Sleep improving: An Extract of his Letter will not, I presume, be disagreeable to my Readers.

- CINCE we have for little Time to spare, that none of it may be loft, I fee no Reason why
- we should neglect to examine those imaginary Scenes
- we are presented with in Sleep, only because they have a less Reality in them than our waking Medita-
- tions. A Traveller would bring his Judgment in Question, who should despise the Directions of his
- Map for want of real Roads in it, because here
- flands a Dot instead of a Town, or a Copber instead of a City, and it mult be a long Day's Journey to travel through two or three Inches. Fancy in Dreams gives as much such another Landskip of Life as that does of Countries, and though its Appearances may seem strangely jumbled together, we may often observe such Braces and Poetsteps of noble Thoughts, as, if carefully pursued, might lead us into a proper Path of Action. There is so much Raptime and Ectally in our fancied Bliss, and something so dismal and shocking in our fancied Misery, that though the Inactivity of the Body has given Occasion for calling Sleep the Image of Death, the Briskness of the Fancy affords us a strong latination of something within us that can never die.

I have wendered, that Alexander the Great, who came into the World fufficiently decemt of by his Parents, and had himself a tolerable knack at dreaming, should often fay, that Sleep was one thing which made him forfible he wor Morral. I who have not fuch Fields of Action in the Day-time to divert my Attention from this Matter, plainty perceive, that in those Operations of the Wind, while the Body is at reft, there is a certain Valuels of Conception very fuitable to the Capacity, and demonstrative of the Force of that Divine Part in our Composition which will last for ever. Neither do I much doubt but had we a true Account of the Wonders the Hero last mentioned performed in his Sleep, his conquering this little Globe would hardly be worth mentioning. I may affirm, without Vanity, that when I compare feveral Actions in Quintus Curtius with some others oin my own Nochury, I appear the greater Hero of the two bedeen the Vinen Witch toccededows of the

I shall close this Subject with observing, that while we are awake we are at Liberty to fix our Thoughts on what we please, but in Sleep we have not the Command of them. The Ideas which strike the Fancy, arise in us without our Choice, either from the Occurrences of the Day past, the Temper we lie down in, or it may be the Direction of some superior Being.

I T is certain the Imagination may be so differently affected in Sleep, that our Actions of the Day might be either rewarded or punished with a little Age of Happiness or Misery. St. Austin was of Opinion, that is in Paradise there was the same Vicissitude of sleeping and waking as in the present World, the Dreams of its Inhabitants would be very happy.

AND so far at present our Dreams are in our Power, that they are generally conformable to our waking Thoughts, so that it is not impossible to convey ourselves to a Consort of Music, the Conversation of distant Friends, or any other Entertainment which has been before lodged in the Mind.

MY Readers, by applying these Hints, will find the Necessity of making a good Day of it, if they heartily wish themselves a good Night.

I have often confider'd Marcia's Prayer, and Lucius's Account of Cato, in this Light.

Marc. O yeimmortal Powers, that guard the Just,
Watch round his Couch, and soften his Repose,
Banish his Sorrows, and becalm his Soul
With easy Dreams; remember all his Virtues,
And shew Mankind that Goodness is your Care.
Luc. Sweet are the Slumbers of the wirtuous Man?
O Marcia, I have seen thy God-like Father;
Some Pow'r invisible supports his Soul,
And hears it up in all its wonted Greatness.
A kind refreshing Sleep is fallen upon him:
I saw him stretch'd at Ease, his Fancy lost
In pleasing Dreams; as I drew near his Couch,
He smil'd, and cry'd, Cæsar, thou canse not hurt me.

Mr. Shadow acquaints me in a Possscript, that he has no manner of Title to the Vision which succeeded his first Letter; but adds, that as the Gentleman who wrote it dreams very sensibly, he shall be glad to meet him some Night or other, under the great Elm Tree, by which Virgil has given us a fine Metaphorical Image of Sleep, in order to turn over a few of the Leaves together, and oblige the Public with an Account of the Dreams that lie under them.

Nº 594 Wednesday, September 15.

Nº 594

Absentem qui rodit amicum; Qui non defendit alio culpante; solutos Qui captat risus bominum, famamque dicacis; Fingere qui non visa potest; commissa tacere Qui nequit; bic niger est: bunc tu, Romane, caveto. Hor. Sat. 4. l. 1. v. 81.

He that shall nail against thy absent Friends, Or bears them scandalised, and not defends; Sports with their Fame, and speaks whate'er be can, And only to be thought a witty Man; Tells Tales, and brings bis Friend in disefteem: That Man's a Knave; befure beware of bim.

ERE all the Vexations of Life put together, we should find that a great Part of them proceed from those Calumnies and Reproaches which we spread abroad concerning one another.

THERE is scarce a Man living who is not, in some Degree, guilty of this Offence; tho', at the same time, however we treat one another, it must be confessed, that we all confent in speaking ill of the Persons who are notorious for this Practice. It generally takes its Rife either from an Ill-will to Mankind, a private Inclination to make ourselves esteemed, an Ostentation of Wit, a Vanity of being thought in the Secrets of the World, or from a Defire of gratifying any of these Dispositions of Mind in those Persons with whom we converse.

THE Publisher of Scandal is more or less odious to Mankind, and criminal in himself, as he is influenced by any one or more of the foregoing Motives. But whatever may be the Occasion of spreading these false Reports, he ought to consider, that the Effect of them is equally prejudicial and pernicious to the Person at whom they are aimed. The Injury is the same, tho' the Principle from whence it proceeds may be different.

AS every one looks upon himself with too much Indulgence, when he passes a Judgment on his own Thoughts or Actions, and as very few will be thought guilty of this abominable Proceeding, which is so universally practised, and, at the same time, so universally blamed. I shall lay down three Rules by which I would have a Man examine and search into his own Heart, before he stands acquitted to himself of that evil Disposition of Mind which I am here mentioning.

First of all, LET him consider whether he does not take Delight in hearing the Faults of others.

Secondly, WHETHER he is not too apt to believe fuch little blackening Accounts, and more inclined to be credulous on the uncharitable than on the good natured Side.

Thirdly, WHETHER he is not ready to forest and propagate such Reports as tend to the Disreputation of another.

THESE are the feveral Steps by which this Vice proceeds, and grows up into Slander and Defamation.

IN the first Place, A Man who takes Delight in hearing the Faults of others, shows sofficiently that he has a true Relish of Scandal, and consequently the Seeds of this Vice within him. If his Mind is gratified with hearing the Reproaches which are cast on others, he will find the same Pleasure in relating them, and be the more apt to do it, as he will naturally imagine every one he converses with is delighted in the same manner with himself. A Man should endeavour therefore to wear out of his Mind this criminal Curiosity, which is perpetually heighten'd and inflamed by listening to such stories as tend to the Disreputation of others.

IN the fecond Place. A Man should consult his own Heart, whether he be not apt to believe such little blackening Accounts, and more inclined to be credulous on the uncharitable, than on the good natured Side.

SUCH a Credulity is very vicious in itself, and generally arises from a Man's Consciousness of his own secret Corruptions. It is a pretty Saying of Thales, Falshood is just as far distant from Truth, as the Ears are from the Eye. By which he would intimate, that a wise Man should not easily give Credit to the Reports of Actions Actions which he has not seen. I shall, under this Head. mention two or three remarkable Rules to be observed by the Members of the celebrated Abbey de la Trappe, as they are published in a little French Book.

THE Fathers are there ordered, never to give an Ear to any Accounts of base or criminal Actions; to turn off all fuch Difcourfe if possible; but in case they hear any thing of this Nature fo well attefted that they cannot difbelieve it, they are then to suppose, that the criminal Action may have proceeded from a good Intention in him. who is guilty of it. This is, perhaps, carrying Charity to an Extravagance, but it is certainly much more laudable, than to suppose, as the ill-natured part of the World does, that indifferent, and even good Actions, proceed from bad Principles and wrong Intentions.

IN the third Place, A Man should examine his Heart. whether he does not find in it a fecret Inclination to propagate fuch Reports, as tend to the Difreputation of ano-

WHEN the Difease of the Mind, which I have hithereo been speaking of, arises to this Degree of Malionito the different its felf in its world Symptom, and is in danper of becoming incurable. I need not therefore infilt much the Guilt in this Particular, which every one cannot but disperove, who is not void of Humanity, or even common Diferetion. I shall only add, that whatever Pleafare any Man may take in spreading Whispers of this Nature, he will find an infinitely greater Satisfaction in conquering the Temptation he is under, by letting the Secret die within his own Breaft. couldn't a Simile in coc-Word, which is res. to con-and Impress which after the Jenies. . There is not now

G 5

cold a range aved being This I have known a line or and and had produce the designable to the foreign Triday,

WHERE SELECTED WESTERS

Nº 595 Friday, September 17.

Serpentes avibus geminentur, tigribus agni.

Hor. Ars Poet. v. 12.

Nature, and the common Laws of Sense,

Forbids to reconcile Antipathies;

Or make a Snake engender with a Dove,

And hungry Tigers court the tender Lambs.

Roscommon,

I F ordinary Authors would condescend to write as they think, they would at least be allow'd the Praise of being intelligible. But they really take pains to be ridiculous; and, by the studied Ornaments of Stile, perfectly disguise the little Sense they aim at. There is a Grievance of this Sort in the Commonwealth of Letters, which I have for some time resolved to redress, and accordingly I have set this Day apart for Justice. What I mean is the Mixture of inconsistent Metaphors, which is a Fault but too esten found in learned Writers, but in all the unlearned without Exception.

IN order to set this Matter in a clear Light to every Reader, I shall in the first Place observe, that a Metaphor is a Simile in one Word, which serves to convey the Thoughts of the Mind under Resemblances and Images which affect the Senses. There is not any thing in the World, which may not be compared to several Things, if considered in several distinct Lights; or, in other Words, the same thing may be expressed by different Metaphors. But the Mischief is, that an unskilful Author shall run these Metaphors so absurdly into one another, that there shall be no Simile, no agreeable Picture, no apt Resemblance, but Consuson, Obscurity, and Noise. Thus I have known a Hero compared to a Thunderbolt, a Lion, and the Sea; all and each of them proper Metaphors for Impetuolity, Courage, and Force. But by bad Management it hath fo happened, that the Thunderbolt hath overflowed its Banks; the Lion hath been darted through the Skies, and the Billows have rolled out of the Libyan Defert.

THE Absurdity in this Instance is obvious. And yet every time that clashing Metaphors are put together, this Fault is committed more or less. It hath already been faid, that Metaphors are Images of things which affect the Senses. An Image, therefore, taken from what acts upon the Sight, cannot, without Violence, be applied to the Hearing; and so of the rest. It is no less an-Impropriety to make any Being in Nature or Art to do things in its Metaphorical State, which it could not do in its Original. I shall illustrate what I have said by an Inflance which I have read more than once in Controversial Writers. The heavy Lashes, saith a celebrated Author, that have dropp'd from your Pen, &c. I suppose this Gentleman having frequently heard of Gall dropping from a Pen, and being lashed in a Satire, he was resolved to have them both at any Rate, and so uttered this complete Piece of Nonsense. It will more effectually discover the Absurdity of these monstrous Unions, if we will suppose these Metaphors or Images actually painted. Imagine then a Hand holding a Pen, and several Lashes of Whip-cord falling from it, and you have the true Reprefentation of this fort of Eloquence. I believe, by this very Rule, a Reader may be able to judge of the Union of all Metaphors whatfoever, and determine which are Homogeneous, and which Heterogeneous: or to speak more plainly, which are Confistent, and which Inconfistent.

THERE is yet one Evil more which I must take notice of, and that is the running of Metaphors into tedious Allegories; which, though an Error on the better Hand, causes Consustion as much as the other. This becomes abominable, when the Lustre of one Word leads a Writer out of his Road, and makes him wander from his Subject for a Page together. I remember a young Fellow, of this Turn, who having said by Chance that his Mistress had a World of Charms, thereupon took occasion to consider her as one possessed of Frigid and Forrid Zones, and pursued her from the one Poleto the other.

upon

I shall conclude this Paper with a Letter written in that enormous Stile, which I hope my Reader hath by this time set his Heart against. The Epistle hath heretosore received great Applause; but after what hath been said, let any Man commend it is he dare.

Sil R, daider danier la appendi

FTER the many heavy Lastes that have fallen from your Pen, you may justly expect in return all the Load that my Ink can lay upon your Shoulders. ' You have Quartered all the foul Language upon me, that could be raked out of the Air of Bitling seate, without knowing who I am, or whether I deterve to be Cupped and Saarified at this rate. I tell you once for all, turn your Eyes where you please, you shall never Smell me out. Do you think that the Panics, which you fow about the Parith, will ever build a Monument to your Glory? No, Sir, you may Fight these Battles as long as you will, but when you come to Balance the Account you will find that you have been Fishing in troubled Waters, and that an Ignis future hath bewildered you, and that indeed you have built ' upon a landy Foundation, and brought your Hogs to a fair Market.

I am, S I R,

in deal from the state of Tours, &c.

TO ANGERTO POPULATION OF THE PROPERTY OF THE P

N° 596 Monday, September 20.

Mothe meum levibus Cor oft violabile Telis.

Ovid. Bo. 15. v. 79.

Cupid's light Darts my tender Bosom moroe.

Pors.

THE Case of my Correspondent, who sends me the following Letter, has somewhat in it so very whimsical, that I know not how to entertain my Readers better than by laying it before them.

SIR.

Am fully convinced that there is not upon Earth a more impertinent Creature than an importunate Lover: We are daily complaining of the Severity of our Fate, to People who are wholly unconcerned in it; and hourly improving a Passion, which we would persuade the World is the Torment of our Lives. Notwithstanding this Restexion, Sir, I cannot forbear acquainting you with my own Case. You must know then, Sir, that even from my Childhood, the most prevailing Inclination I could perceive in myfelf, was a strong Desire to be in Favour with the Fair Sex. I am at present in the one and twentieth Year of my Age, and should have made choice of a She Bedfellow many Years fince, had not my Father who has a pretty good Estate of his own getting, and passes in the World for a prudent Man, been pleased to lay it down as a Maxim, That nothing fpoils a young Fellow's Fortune fo much as marrying early; and that no Man ought to think of Wedlock till fix and twenty. Knowing his Sentiments upon this Head, I thought it in vain to apply myfelf to Women of Condition, who expect Settlements; so that all my Amours have hitherto been with Ladies who had no Fortunes: But I know not how to give you so good an Idea of me, as by laying before you the History of my Life. * I can

I can very well remember, that at my Schoolmistres's, whenever we broke up, I was always for joining myself with the Miss who Lay in, and was constantly one of the first to make a Party in the Play of "Husband and Wife. This Passion for being well with the Females still increased as I advanced in Years. At the Dancing-School I contracted fo many Quarrels by firuggling with my Fellow-Scholars for the Partner T liked best, that upon a Ball-Night, before our Mothers made their Appearance, I was usually up to the Nose in Blood. My Father, like a discreet Man, soon removed me from this Stage of Softness to a School of Discipline, where I learnt Latin and Greek. I underwent several Severities in this Place, 'till it was thought convenient to fend me to the University; though, to confels the Truth, I should not have arrived so early at that Seat of Learning, but from the Discovery of an Intrigue between me and my Master's House-Keeper; upon whom I had employed my Rhetoric fo effectually. that, though she was a very elderly Lady, I had almost brought her to confent to marry me. Upon my Arrival at Oxford, I found Logic fo dry, that, instead of giving Attention to the Dead, I foon fell to addressing the Living. My first Amour was with a pretty Girl whom I shall call Parthenope: Her Mother fold Ale by the Town-Wall. Being often caught there by the Proctor, I was forced at last, that my Mistress's Reputation might receive no Blemish, to confess my Addresses were honourable. Upon this I was immediately fent home; but Parthenope soon after marrying a Shoemaker, I was again suffered to return. My next Affair was with my Taylor's Daughter, who deferted me for the fake of a young Barber. Upon my complaining to one of my particular Friends of this Misfortune, the cruel Wag made a mere Jest of my Calamity, and asked me with a Smile, Where the Needle should turn but to the Pole? After this I was deeply in love with a Milliner, and at last with my Bed-maker, upon which. ' I was fent away, or, in the University Phrase, Rusticated for ever.

"UPON my coming home, I fettled to my Studies fo heartily, and contracted fo great a Refervedness by being kept from the Company I most affected, that my Father thought he might venture me at the Temple.

WITHIN a Week after my Arrival I began to shine again, and became enamour'd with a mighty pretty Creature, who had every thing but Money to recommend her. Having frequent Opportunities of uttering all the foft things which an Heart formed for Love could inspire me with, I soon gained her Consent to treat of Marriage; but unfortunately for us all, in the Absence of my Charmer I usually talked the same Language to her elder Sifter, who is also very pretty. Now, I affure you, Mr. SPECTATOR, this did not proceed from any real Affection I had conceived for her; but being a perfect Stranger to the Conversation of Men, and strongly addicted to associate with the Women, I knew no other Language but that of Love. I should however be very much obliged to you, if you could free me from the Perplexity I am at prefent in. I have fent Word to my old Gentleman in the Country. that I am desperately in Love with the younger Sister; and her Father who knew no better, poor Man, acquainted him by the same Post, that I had for some time made my Addresses to the Elder. Upon this old Telly fends me up Word, that he has heard fo much of my Exploits, that he intends immediately to order me to the South-Sea. Sir, I have occasionally talked so much of dying, that I begin to think there is not much in it; and if the old Squire perfits in his Defign, I do hereby give him notice that I am providing myself with proper Instruments for the Destruction of Despairing Lovers; let him therefore look to it, and confider that by his Obstinacy he may himself lose the Son of his Strength, the World an hopeful Lawyer, my Mistress a passionate Lover, and you, Mr. SPEC-TATOR,

Saisbard was appetunitely apprehensed for fronting a floris erid and trademand our the Risk, and is a Middle Temple, Your constant Admirer,

Sept. 18. 01 Louis of Jeremy Lovemore.

のである。

Nº 597 Wednesday, September 22.

Mens fine Pondere ludit.

The Mind uncumber'd plays.

Having frequent Quadratic

OINCE I received my Friend Shadow's Letter, feveral of my Correspondents have been pleased to fend me an Account how they have been employed in Sleep, and what notable Adventures they have been engaged in during that Moonshine in the Brain. I shall lay before my Readers an Abridgement of some few of their Extravagances, in hopes that they will in Time accustom themselves to dream a little more to the purpose.

ONE, who files himself Gladie, complains heavily that his Fair One charges him with Inconfiancy, and does not use him with half the Kindness which the Sincerity of his Passion may demand; the said Gladio having by Valour and Stratagem put to Death Tyrants, Enchanters, Monsters, Knights, &c. without Number, and exposed himfelf to all manner of Dangers for her Sake and Safety. He defires in his Postcript to know, whether, from a confant Success in them, he may not promise himself to suc-

ANOTHER who is very prelix in his Narrative writes me Word, that having fent a Venture beyond Sea, he took occasion one Night to fanty himself gone along with it, and grown on a sudden the richest Man in all the Indies. Having been there about a Year or two, a Gust of Wind that forced open his Casement, blew him over to his native Country again, where awaking at fix o'Clock, and the Change of the Air not agreeing with him, he turned to his Left Side in order to a second Voyage; but ere he could get on Shipboard; was unfortunately apprehended for stealing a Horse, try'd and condemn'd for the Fact, and in a fair way of being executed, if some body stepping hastily into his Chamber had not brought him a Reprieve. This fellow too wants Mr. Shadow's Advice, who, I dare fay, would hid him be content to rife after his first Nap, and learn to be fatisfied as soon as Nature is.

THE next is a public-spirited Gentleman, who tells me, That on the Second of September at Night the whole City was on Fine, and would certainly have been reduced to Ashes again by this Time, if he had not flown over it with the New River on his Back, and happily extinguished the Flames before they had prevailed too far. He would be informed whether he has not a Right to petition the Lord Mayor and Aldermen for a Reward.

That the Writer being resolved to try his Fortune, had fatted all that Day; and that he might be sure of dreaming upon something at Night, procured an handson Slice of Bride Cake, which he placed very conveniently under this Pillow. In the Morning his Memory happen'd to fait him, and he could recollect nothing but an odd Fancy that he had eaten his Cake; which being found upon Search reduced to a few Crums, he is resolved to semember more of his Dreams another l'ime, believing from this that there may possibly be somewhat of Truth in them.

I have received numerous Complaints from feveral delicious Dreamers, defiring me to invent some Method of Mencing those noisy Slaves, whose Occupations lead them to take their early Rounds about the. City in a Morning, doing a deal of Mischieft; and working thrange Confusion in the Affairs of its Inhabitants. Several Monarchs have done me the Honour to goquaint me, how often they have been shook from their respective Thrones by the rattling of a Coach or the rumbling of a Wheelbarrow. And many private Gentlemen, I find, have been bawl'd out of wait Estates by Fellows not worth Three-pence. A fair Lady was just upon the Point of being married to a young, handfom, rich, ingenious Nobleman, when an impentiment Tinker patting by forbid the Banns; and an hopeful Youth, who had been newly advanced to great Honour and Preferment, was forced by a neighbouring Cobler to refign all for an old Song. It has been represented to me, that those inconsiderable Rascals do nothing but go about dissolving of Marriages, and spoiling of Fortunes, impoverishing rich and ruining great People, interrupting Beauties in the midst of their Conquests, and Generals in the Course of their Victories. A boisterous Peripatetic hardly goes through a Street without waking half a Dozen Kings and Princes to open their Shops or clean Shoes, frequently transforming Sceptres into Paring-Shovels, and Proclamations into Bills. I have by me a Letter from a young Statesman, who in five or fix Hours came to be Emperor of Europe, after which he made War upon the Great Turk, routed him Horse and Foot, and was crowned Lord of the Universe in Constantinople: The Conclusion of all his Succesfes is, that on the 12th Inflant, about Seven in the Morning, his Imperial Majesty was deposed by a Chimney-Sweeper.

O'N the other hand, I have Epistolary Testimonies of Gratitude from many miserable People, who owe to this clamorous Tribe frequent Deliverances from great Missortunes. A Small-coal-Man, by waking of one of these distressed Gentlemen, saved him from ten Years Imprisonment. An honest Watchman bidding a loud Good-morrow to another, freed him from the Malice of many potent Enemies, and brought all their Designs against him to nothing. A certain Valetudinarian confesses he has often been cured of a fore Throat by the Hoarseness of a Carman, and relieved from a Fit of the Gout by the Sound of old Shoes. A noisy Puppy, that plagued a sober Gentleman all Night-long with his Impertinence, was silenced by a Cinder-Wench with a Word speaking.

INSTEAD therefore of suppressing this Order of Mortals, I would propose it to my Readers to make the best Advantage of their Morning Salutations. A famous Macedonian Prince, for sear of forgetting himself in the midst of his good Fortune, had a Youth to wait on him every Morning, and bid him remember that he was a Man. A Citizen who is waked by one of these Criers, may regard him as a kind of Remembrancer, come to admonish him that it is time to return to the

Circum-

Circumstances he has overlooked all the Night time, to leave off fancying himself what he is not, and prepare to act suitably to the Condition he is really placed in.

PEOPLE may dream on as long as they please, but I shall take no Notice of any imaginary Adventures, that do not happen while the Sun is on this side the Horizon. For which Reason I stifle Fritilla's Dream at Church last Sunday, who, while the rest of the Audience were enjoying the Benest of an excellent Discourse, was losing her Money and Jewels to a Gentleman at Play, till after a strange Run of ill Luck she was reduced to pawn three lovely pretty Children for her last Stake. When she had thrown them away, her Companion went off, discovering himself by his usual Tokens, a cloven Foot and a strong Smell of Brimstone; which last proved a Bottle of Spirits, which a good old Lady applied to her Nose, to put her in a Condition of hearing the Preacher's third Head concerning Time.

IF a Man has no mind to pass abruptly from his imagined to his real Circumstances, he may employ himself a while in that new kind of Observation which my Onirocritical Correspondent has directed him to make of himself. Pursuing the Imagination through all its Extravagancies, whether in Sleeping or Waking, is no improper Method of correcting and bringing it to act in Subordinacy to Reason, so as to be delighted only with such Objects as will affect it with Pleasure, when it is never so cool and sedate.

every infloatife with infigid Mich. and term isterioral which subjects with infigid Mich 1 for the opt of Landshot Stocked moon of the Philadelphia and the Property for

The control of the control winds more teleparating and the control of the control

-oas so of the confidence of the cost of t

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPERTY OF

N° 598 Friday, September 24.

Jamne ogitur landas, quod de sapientibus alter Ridebut, quoties à limine moverat unum Protuleratque pedem: stebat contrarius alter? Iuv. Sat. 10. v. 28.

Will ye not now the Pair of Sages praise, Who the same End pursu'd by several Ways? One pity'd, one contemn'd the woful Times; One laugh'd at Folkies, one lamented Crimes.

DRYDEN.

ANKIND may be divided into the Merry and the Serious, who, both of them, make a very good Figure in the Species, to long as they been their respective thumours from degenerating into the neighbouring Extreme; their being a natural Tendency in the one to a metancholy Morofeness under the other to a familiar Levity.

THE merry Part of the World are very amiable, while they diffuse a Chearfusness through Conversation at proper Seasons and on proper Occasions, but, on the contrary, a great Grievance to Society, when they intect every Discourse with insipid Mirth, and turn into Ridicule such Subjects as are not suited to it. For though Laughter is looked upon by the Philosophers as the Property of Reason, the Excess of it has been always considered as the Mark of Folly.

ON the other ide, Seriousness has its Beauty while it is attended with Chearfulness and Humanity, and does not come in unseasonably to pall the Good humour of those with whom we converse.

THESE two Sets of Men, notwithstanding they each of them shine in their respective Characters, are apt to bear a natural Aversion and Antipathy to one another.

WHAT

WHAT is more usual, than to hear Men of serious Tempers and authere Morals, enlarging upon the Vanities and Follies of the young and gay Part of the Species; while they look with a kind of Horror upon fuch Pomps and Divertions as are innocent in themfelves, and only culpable when they draw the Mind too much?

I could not but smile upon reading a Passage in the Account which Mr. Baxter gives of his own Life, wherein he represents it as a great Bleffing, that in his Youth he very narrowly escaped getting a Place at Court.

ed in the Weild; not, he IT must indeed be confessed that Levity of Temper takes a Man off his Guard, and opens a Pass to his Soul for any Temptation that allaults it. It favours all the Approaches of Vice, and weakens all the Refistance of Virtue. For which Reason a renowned Statesman in Queen Elizabeth's Days, after having retir'd from Court and public Business, in order to give himself up to the Duties of Religion; when any of his old Friends wed to visit him, had still this Word of Advice in his Mouth. Be ferious on all the lattered Live branches sound like

AN eminent Italian Author of this Cast of Mind. speaking of the great Advantage of a serious and composed Temper, wishes very gravely, that for the Benefit of Mankind he had Tropbonius's Cave in his Rolleffion: which, fays he would contribute more to the Reformation of Manners than all the Work houses and Bridewalk in Europe tonib say tol bearings toned bas and van to

W E have a very particular Description of this Cave in Paulanias, who tells us, that it was made in the Form of a huge Oven, and had many particular Circumstances, which disposed the Person who was in it to be more penfive and thoughtful than ordinary; infomuch that no Man was ever observed to laught all his Life. after who had once made his Entry into this Cave. It was usual in shole Times, when many one carried a more than cordinary Gloominess in his Features, to tell him that he looked like one just come out of Trophonias Cave. A Trail only Girot strawers a go liver laute V

ON the other hand, Writers of a more merry Complexion have been no less severe on the opposite orive

Party; and have had one Advantage above them, that they have attacked them with more Turns of Wit and Humour?

AFTER all, if a Man's Temper were at his own Disposal, I think he would not choose to be of either of these Parties; since the most perfect Character is that which is formed out of both of them. A Man would neither choose to be a Hermit nor a Bussion: Human Nature is not so miserable, as that we should be always melancholy; nor so happy, as that we should be always merry. In a word, a Man should not live as if there was no God in the World; nor, at the same time, as if there were no Men in it.

THE THE PARTY OF T

Nº 599 Monday, September 27.

Luctus, ubique pawer— Virg. An. 2. v. 369.

All Parts resound with Tumults, Plaints, and Fears.

DRYDEN.

realing of the pront havantee of a Lange. a

T has been my Custom, as I grow old, to allow myfelf in some little Indulgences which I never took in my Youth. Among others is that of an Afternoon's Nap, which I fell into in the Fifty-fifth Year of my Age, and have continued for the three Years last past. By this means I enjoy a double Morning, and rife twice a day fresh to my Speculations. It happens very luckily for me, that fome of my Dreams have proved instructive to my Countrymen, so that I may be faid to fleep, as well as to wake, for the Good of the Public. I was Yesterday meditating on the Account with which I have already entertained my Readers concerning the Cave of Tropbonius. I was no sooner fallen into my usual Slumber, but I dreamt that this Cave was put into my Possession, and that I gave public Notice of its Virtue, inviting every one to it, who had a mind to be a serious Man for the remaining Part of his Life. Great Multitudes immediately reforted to me. The first who who made the Experiment was a Merry-Andrew, who was put into my Hands by a neighbouring Justice of Peace, in order to reclaim him from that profligate kind of Life. Poor Pickle-herring had not taken above one Turn in it. when he came out of the Cave, like a Hermit from his Cell, with a penitential Look, and a most rueful Countenance. I then put in a young laughing Fop, and, watching for his Return, asked him, with a Smile, how he liked the Place? He replied, Prithee, Friend, be not impertinent; and stalked by me as grave as a Judge. A Citizen then defired me to give free Ingress and Egress to his Wife, who was dressed in the gayest coloured Ribbons I have ever feen. She went in with a Flirt of her Fan and a smirking Countenance, but came out with the Severity of a Vestal, and throwing from her several Female Gewgaws, told me with a Sigh that she resolved to go into deep Mourning, and to wear Black all the rest of her Life. As I had had many Coquettes recommended to me by their Parents, their Husbands, and their Lovers, I let them in all at once, defiring them to divert themselves together as well as they could. Upon their emerging again into Daylight, you would have fancied my Cave to have been a Nunnery, and that you had feen a folemn Processionof Religious marching out, one behind another, in the most profound Silence and the most exemplary Decency. As I was very much delighted with fo edifying a Sight, there came towards me a great Company; of Males and Females laughing, finging and dancing, in fuch a manner, that I could hear them a great whilebefore I faw them. Upon my asking their Leader. what brought them thither? they told me all at once, that they were French Protestants lately arrived in Great-Britain, and that finding themselves of too gay a Humour for my Country, they applied themselves to me in order to compose them for British Conversation. I told them, that to oblige them I would foon spoil their, Mirth; upon which I admitted a whole Shole of them, who, after having taken a Survey of the Place, came out in very good Order, and with Looks entirely Englist. I afterwards put in a Dutch Man, who had a great Fancy to see the Kelder, as he called it, but I ration in himself and made any manner of Alteration in himself

A Comedian who had gained great Reputation in Parts of Humour, told me, that he had a mighty mind to act Alexander the Great, and fancied that he flould fuceed very well in it, if he could firike two or three laughing Fentures out of his Face: He tried the Experiment, but contracted to very folid a Look by it, that I am afraid he will be fit for no Part hereafter but a Fimon of Athens.

or a Mute in the Faneral.

I then clapt up an empty fantaftie Citizen, in order to qualify him for an Alderman. He was focceded by a young Rake of the Meddle Temple, who was brought to me by his Grandmother; but to her great Sorrow and Surprife, he came out a Quaker. Seeing myself furrounded with a Body of Free-thinkers, and Scoffers at Religion, who were making themselves merry at the fober Looks and thoughtful Brows of those who had been in the Cave: I thrust them all in, one after another. and locked the Door upon them. Upon my opening it. they all looked, as if they had been frighted out of their Wits, and were marching away with Ropes in their Plands to a Wood that was within Sight of the Place. I found they were not able to bear themselves in their first serious Thoughts; but knowing these would quickly bring them to a better Frame of Mind, I gave them into the Custody of their Friends 'till that happy Change was wrought in them.

THE last that was brought to me was a young Woman, who at the first Sight of my short Face fell into an immoderate Fit of Laughter, and was forced to hold her Sides all the while her Mother was speaking to me. Upon this I interrupted the old Lady, and taking her Daughter by the Hand, Madam, said I, be pleased to retire into my Closet, while your Mother tells me your Case. I then put her into the Mouth of the Cave, when the Mother, after having begg'd Pardon for the Girl's Rudeness, told me, that she often treated her Father and the gravest of her Relations in the same manner; that she would sit giggling and laughing with her Companions from one End of a Tragedy to the other; nay, that she would sometimes burst out in the Middle of a Sermon, and fet the whole Congregation a staring at her. The Mother was going on, when the young Lady came out of the Cave to us with a composed Countenance, and a low Curtly. She was a Girl of fuch exuberant Mirth, that her Visit to Tropbonius only reduced her to a more than ordinary Decency of Behaviour, and made a very pretty Prude of her. After having performed innumerable Cures, I looked about me with great Satisfaction, and faw all my Patients walking by themselves in a very pensive and musing Posture, so that the whole Place feem'd covered with Philosophers. I was at length refolv'd to go into the Cave myfelf, and fee what it was that had produced such wonderful Effects upon the Company; but as I was stooping at the Entrance, the Door being something low, I gave such a Nod in my Chair, that I awaked. After having recovered myfelf from my first Startle, I was very well pleas'd at the Accident which had befallen me, as not knowing but a little Stay in the Place might have spoiled my Spectators.

DNO-XELEKOMANOM KOKO

Nº 600 Wednesday, September 29.

Solemque suum, sua sidera norunt. Virg. Æn. 6. v. 641:

Stars of their own, and their own Suns they know.

DRYDEN.

I Have always taken a particular Pleasure in examining the Opinions which Men of different Religions, different Ages, and different Countries, have entertained concerning the Immortality of the Soul, and the State of Happiness which they promise themselves in another World. For whatever Prejudices and Errors Human Nature lies under, we find that either Reason, or Tradition from our first Parents, has discovered to all People something in these great Points which bears Analogy to Truth, and to the Doctrines opened to us Voy. VIII:

by Divine Revelation. I was lately discoursing on this Subject with a learned Person, who has been very much Conversant among the Inhabitants of the more Western Parts of Afric. Upon his conversing with several in that Country, he tells me that their Notion of Heaven or of a future State of Happiness is this, That every thing we there wish for will immediately present itself to us. We find, fay they, our Souls are of fuch a Nature that they require Variety, and are not capable of being always delighted with the same Objects. The Supreme Being, therefore, in compliance with this Tafte of Happiness which he has planted in the Soul of Man. will raise up from time to time, say they, every Gratification which it is in the Humour to be pleased with. If we wish to be in Groves or Bowers, among running Streams or Falls of Water, we shall immediately find ourselves in the midst of such a Scene as we defire. If we would be entertained with Music and the Melody of Sounds, the Confort arises upon our Wish, and the whole Region about us is filled with Harmony. In thort, every Defire will be followed by Fruition, and whatever a Man's Inclination directs him to will be present with him. Nor is it material whether the Supreme Power creates in Conformity to our Wishes, or whether he only produces such a Change in our Imagination, as makes us believe ourselves Conversant among those Scenes which delight us. Our Happiness will be the same, whether it proceed from external Objects, or from the Impressions of the Deity upon our own private Pancies. This is the Account which I have received from my learned Friend. Notwithstanding this System of Belief be in general very chimerical and vifionary, there is fomething fublime in its manner of confidering the Influence of a Divine Being on a Human Soul. It has also, like most other Opinions of the Heathen World upon these important Points, it has, I fay, its Foundation in Truth, as it supposes the Souls of good Men after this Life to be in a State of perfect Happiness, that in this State there will be no barren Hopes, nor fruitless Wishes, and that we shall enjoy every thing we can defire. But the particular Circumstance which I am most pleas'd with in this Scheme, and which arifes from a just Reflexion upon Haman Nature, is that Variety of Pleasures which it supposes the Souls of good Men will be pofferfed of in another World. This I think highly probable, from the Dictates both of Reason and Revelation. The Soul confists of many Baculties, as the Understanding, and the Will. with all the Senfes both outward and inward; or to freak more Philosophically, the Soul can exert herfelf in many different Ways of Action. She can understand. will, imagine, see, and hear, love, and discourse, and apply herfelf to many other the like Exercises of diffewent Kinds and Natures a but what is more to be confidered, the Soul is capable of receiving a most exquisite Pleasure and Satisfaction from the Exercise of any of thefe its Powers, when they are gratified with their proper Objects; the can be intirely happy by the Satiffaction of the Memory, the Sight, the Hearing, or any other Mode of Perception. Every Faculty is as a dif-- tinco Paste in the Mind, and hath Objects accommodated to its proper Relish. Doctor Tilletfan somewhere fays that he will not prefume tondetermine in what confifts the Happiness of the Blest, because God Almighty is capable of making the Soul happy by ten thousand different Ways. Belides those several Avenues to Pleafure which the Soul is endowed with in this Life : it is not impossible, according to the Opinions of many emiment Divines, but there may be new Faculties in the Souls of good Wen made perfect, as well as new Senfes in their glorified Bodies. This we are fure of, that there will be new Objects offer'd to call those Faculties which a te effential to usland and appearance and and oblige

WE are likewise to take notice: that every particular Raculty is capable of being employed on a very great Variety of Objects. The Understanding, for Example, and be happy in the Contemplation of Moral, Natural, Mathematical, and other kinds of Truth. The Memory likewise may turn itself to an infinite Multitude of Objects, especially when the Soul shall have pass'd through the Space of many Millions of Years, and shall restell with Pleasure on the Days of Eternity. Every other Faculty may be considered in the same Extent.

WE cannot question but that the Happiness of a Soul will be adequate to its Nature, and that it is not endowed with any Faculties which are to lie useless and unemployed. The Happiness is to be the Happiness of the whole Man, and we may eafily conceive to ourfelves the Happiness of the Soul, while any one of its Faculties is in the Fruition of its chief Good. The Happiness may be of a more exalted Nature in Proportion as the Faculty employ'd is fo; but as the whole Soul acts in the Exertion of any of its particular Powers, the whole Soul is happy in the Pleasure which arises from any of its particular Acts. For notwithstanding, as has been before hinted, and as it has been taken notice of by one of the greatest modern Philosophers, we divide the Soul into several Powers and Faculties, there is no such Divifion in the Soul itself, fince it is the whole Soul that remembers, understands, wills, or imagines, Our manner of confidering the Memory, Understanding, Will, Imagination, and the like Faculties, is for the better enabling us to express ourselves in such abstracted Subjects of Speculation, not that there is any such Division in the Soul itself. Chance the Best for shadening someth

SEEING then that the Soul has many different Faculties, or, in other Words, many different Ways of acting; that it can be intenfely pleas'd, or made happy by all these different Faculties, or Ways of acting; that it may be endow'd with feveral latent Faculties, which it is not at present in a Condition to exert; that we cannot believe the Soul is endow'd with any Faculty which is of no Use to it; that whenever any one of these Faculties is transcendently pleased, the Soul is in a · State of Happiness; and in the last Place, confidering that the Happiness of another World is to be the Happiness of the whole Man; who can question but that there is an infinite Variety in those Pleasures we are speaking of; and that this Fulness of Joy will be made up of all those Pleasures which the Nature of the Soul, is capable of receiving? I love sale sold if gaining to

WE shall be the more confirmed in this Doctrine, if we observe the Nature of Variety, with regard to the Mind of Man. The Soul does not care to be always in the same bent. The Faculties relieve one another by Turns, and receive an additional Pleasure from the Novelty of those Objects about which they are conversant.

REVELATION likewife very much confirms this Notion, under the different Views which it gives us of our future Happinels. In the Description of the Throne of God, it represents to us all those Objects which are able to gratify the Senses and Imagination: In very many Places it intimates to us all the Happiness which the Understanding can possibly receive in that State, where all Things shall be revealed to us, and we shall know, even as we are known; the Raptures of Devotion, of Divine Love, the Pleasure of conversing with our Bleffed Saviour, with an innumerable Host of Angels, and with the Spirits of Just Men made perfect, are likewise revealed to us in several Parts of the Holy Writings. There are also mentioned those Hierarchies or Governments, in which the Blest shall be ranged one above another, and in which we may be fure a great Part of our Happinels will likewise consist; for it will not be there as in this World, where every one is aiming at Power and Superiority; but, on the contrary, every one will find that Station the most proper for him in which he is placed, and will probably think that he could not have been so happy in any other Station. These; and many other Particulars, are marked in Divine Revelation, as the several Ingredients of our Happiness in Heaven, which all imply tuch a Variety of Joys, and fuch a Gratification of the Soul in all its different Faculties, as I have been here mentioning.

SOME of the Rabbins tell us, that the Cherubims are a Set of Angels who know most, and the Seraphims a Set of Angels who love most. Whether this Distinction be not altogether imaginary, I shall not here examine; but it is highly probable, that among the Spirits of good Men, there may be some who will be more pleated with the Employment of one Faculty than of another, and this perhaps according to those innocent and virtuous Habits or Inclinations which have here taken the deepest Root.

I might here apply this Consideration to the Spirits of wicked Men, with relation to the Pain which they small fuffer in every one of their Faculties, and the respective Miseries which shall be appropriated to each Faculty in particular. But leaving this to the Reflexion of my Readers, I shall conclude, with observing how we ought to be thankful to our great Creator, and rejoice in the Being which he has bestowed upon us, for having made the Soul susceptible of Pleasure by so many different Ways. We see by what a Variety of Passages Joy and Gladness may enter into the Thoughts of Man; how. wonderfully a Human Spirit is framed, to imbibe its proper Satisfactions, and take the Goodness of its Creator. We may therefore look into ourselves with Rapture and Amazement, and cannot fufficiently express our Gratitude to him, who has encompassed us with such a Profufion of Bleffings, and opened in us fo many Capacities of enjoying them.

H 3

THERE cannot be a stronger Argument that God has designed us for a State of suture Happiness, and for that Heaven which he has revealed to us, than that he has thus naturally qualified the Soul for it, and made it a Being capable of receiving so much Bliss. He would never have made such Faculties in vain, and have endowed us with Powers that were not to be exerted on such Objects as are suited to them. It is very manifest, by the inward Frame and Constitution of our Minds, that he has adapted them to an infinite Variety of Pleasures and Gratisfications, which are not to be met with in this Life. We should therefore at all times take care that we do not disappoint this his gracious Purpose and Intention towards us, and make those Faculties which he formed as so many Qualifications for Happiness and Rewards, to be the wide it was to be to be trackersting the store exist.

Instruments of Pain and Punishment.

STEED STANSON S

Nº 601 Friday, October 1.

Man is naturally a beneficent Creature.

Antonin, Lib. 9.

THE following Essay comes from an Hand which has entertained my Readers once before.

TOTWITHSTANDING a narrow contracted Temper be that which obtains most in the World, we must not therefore conclude this to be the genuine Characteristic of Mankind; because there are some who delight in nothing so much as in doing Good, and receive more of their Happiness at second hand, or by rebound from others, than by direct and immediate Sensation. Now though these Heroic Souls are but few. and to appearance fo far advanced above the grovelling Multitude, as if they were of another Order of Beings, yet in reality their Nature is the fame, moved by the fame Springs, and endowed with all the same effential Qualities, only cleared, refined, and cultivated. Water is the same sluid Body in Winter and in Summer; when it stands stiffned in Ice, as when it flows along in genthe Streams, gladdening a thousand Fields in its Progress. 'Tis,a Property of the Heart of Man to be diffufive: Its kind Wishes spread abroad over the Face of the Creation; and if there be those, as we may observe too many of them, who are all wrapt up in their own dear felves, without any visible Concern for their Species, let us suppose that their Good nature is frozen, and by the prevailing Force of some contrary Quality restrained in its Operation. I shall therefore endeavour to assign some of the principal Checks upon this generous Propenfion of the Human Soul, which will enable us to judge whether, and by what Method, this most useful Principle may be unfettered, and restored to its native Freedom of Exercise.

THE first and leading Cause is an unhappy Complexion of Body. The Heathens, ignorant of the true Source of Moral Evil, generally charged it on the Obliquity of Matter, which, being eternal and independent, was incapable of Change in any of its Properties, even by the Almighty Mind, who, when he came to fashion it in a World of Beings, must take it as he found it. This Notion, as most others of theirs, is a Composition of Truth and Error. That Matter is eternal, that, from the first Union of a Soul to it, it perverted its Inclinations, and that the ill Influence it hath upon the Mind is not to be corrected by God himself. are all very great Errors, occasioned by a Truth as evident, that the Capacities and Dispositions of the Soul depend, to a great degree, on the bodily Temper. As there are some Fools, others are Knaves, by Conftitution; and particularly, it may be faid of many, that they are born with an illiberal Cast of Mind; the Matter that composes them is tenacious as Birdlime, and a kind of Cramp draws their Hands and their Hearts together, that they never care to open them, unless to grasp at more. 'Tis a melancholy Lot this; but attended with one Advantage above theirs, to whom it would be as painful to forbear good Offices, as it is to these Men to perform them; that whereas Perfons naturally Beneficent often mistake Instinct for Virtue, by reason of the Difficulty of distinguishing when one rules them and when the other, Men of the opposite Character may be more certain of the Motive that predominates in every Action. If they cannot confer a Benefit with that Ease and Frankness which are necessary to give it a Grace in the Eye of the World, in requital, the real Merit of what they do is enhanc'd by the Opposition they furmount in doing it. The Strength of their Virtue is feen in rising against the Weight of Nature, and every time they have the Resolution to discharge their Duty, they make a Sacrifice of Inclination to Conscience, which is always too grateful to let its Followers go without fuitable Marks of its Approbation. Perhaps the entire Cure of this ill Quality is no more poffible, than of some Distempers that descend by Inheritance. However, a great deal may be done by a Course of Beneficence obstinately persisted in; this, if any thing, being a likely way of establishing a moral Habit, which shall be somewhat of a Counterpoise to the Force of Mechanism. Only it must be remembred, that we do not intermit, upon any Pretence whatfoever, the Custom of doing Good, in regard, if there be the least Cessation, Nature will watch the Opportunity to return, and in a short time to recover the Ground it was fo long in quitting: For there is this Difference between mental Habits, and fuch as have their Foundation in the Body; that these last are in their Nature more forcible and violent, and, to gain upon us, need only not to be opposed; whereas the former must be continually reinforced with fresh Supplies, or they will languish and die away. And this suggests the Reason why good Habits, in general, require longer time for their Settlement than bad; and yet are fooner displaced; the Reason is, that vicious Habits (as Drunkenness for Instance) produce a Change in the Body, which the others not doing, must be maintained the same way they are acquired, by the mere Dint of Industry, Resolution, and Vigilance.

ANOTHER Thing which suspends the Operations of Benevolence, is the Love of the World; proceeding from a false Notion Men have taken up, that an abundance of the World is an essential Ingredient into the Happiness of Life. Worldly Things are of fuch a Quality as to leffen upon dividing, so that the more Partners there are, the less must fall to every Man's private Share. The Consequence of this is, that they look upon one another with an evil Eye, each imagining all the rest to be embarked in an Interest, that cannot take place but to his Prejudice, Hence are those eager Competitions for Wealth or Power; hence one Man's Success becomes another's Disappointment; and like Pretenders to the same Mistress, they can seldom have common Charity for their Rivals. Not that they are naturally disposed to quarrel and fall out, but 'tis natural for a Man to prefer himself to all others, and to secure his own Interest first. If that which Menesteem their Happiness were, like the Light, the same sufficient and unconfined Good, whether Ten Thousand enjoy the Benefit of it, or but One, we should see Mens Good-will, and kind Endeavours, would be as universal.

Homo qui Erranti comiter monstrat Viam, Quast Lumen de suo Lumine accendat, facit, Nibilominus ipst luceat, cum illi accenderit.

'To direct a Wanderer in the right way, is to light another Man's Candle by one's own, which loses none of its Light by what the other gains.'

But, unluckily, Mankind agree in making choice of Objects, which inevitably engage them in perpetual Differences. Learn therefore, like a wife Man, the true Estimate of Things. Desire not more of the World than is necessary to accommodate you in passing through it; look upon every thing beyond, not as useless only, but burdensom. Place not your Quiet in Things which you cannot have without putting others befide them, and thereby making them your Enemies, and which, when attain'd, will give you more Trouble to keep, than Satisfaction in the Enjoyment. Virtue is a Good of a nobler kind; it grows by Communication, and fo little resembles earthly Riches, that the more Hands it is lodged in, the greater is every Man's particular Stock. So, by propagating and mingling their Fires, not only all the Lights of a Branch together cast a more extensive Brightness, but each fingle Light burns with a stronger Flame. And laftly, take this along with you, that if Wealth be an Instrument of Pleasure, the greatest Pleafure it can put into your Power, is that of doing Good. 'Tis worth confidering, that the Organs of Sense act within a narrow Compass, and the Appetites will soon fay they have enough: Which of the two therefore is the happier Man? He, who confining all his Regard to the Gratification of his own Appetites, is capable but of short Fits of Pleasure? Or the Man, who reckoning himself a Sharer in the Satisfactions of others, especially those which come to them by his Means, enlarges the Sphere of his Happineis. THE

THE last Enemy to Benevolence I shall mention is Uneafiness of any Kind. A guilty, or a discontented Mind, a Mind ruffled by ill Fortune, discontented by its own Passions, soured by Neglect, or fretting at Disappointments, hath not leifure to attend to the Necessity or Reasonableness of a Kindness desired, nor a Taste for those Pleasures which wait on Beneficence, which demand a calm and unpolluted Heart to relish them. The most miserable of all Beings is the most envious; as, on the other hand, the most communicative is the happiest. And if you are in fearch of the Seat of perfect Love and Friendship, you will not find it till you come to the Region of the Bleffed, where Happiness, like a refreshing Stream, flows from Heart to Heart in an endless Circulation, and is preferv'd fweet and untainted by the Motion. 'Tis old Advice, if you have a Favour to request of any one, to observe the softest times of Address, when the Soul, in a flush of Good-humour, takes a pleasure to shew itself pleased. Persons conscious of their own Integrity, satisffied with themselves, and their Condition, and full of Confidence in a Supreme Being, and the Hope of Immortality, survey all about them with a Flow of Good-will. As Trees which like their Soil, they shoot out in Expressions of Kindness, and bend beneath their own precious Load, to the Hand of the Gatherer. Now if the Mind be not thus easy, 'tis an infallible Sign that it is not in its natural State: Place the Mind in its right Posture, it will immediately discover its innate Propension to Beneficence.

Monday,

CONTRACTOR OF THE PROPERTY OF

Nº 602 Monday, October 4.

- Facit hoc illos Hyacinthos.

Tuv. Sat. 6. v. 110.

This makes them Hyacinths.

THE following Letter comes from a Gentleman, who, I find, is very diligent in making his Observations, which I think too material not to be communicated to the Public.

SIR,

IN order to execute the Office of Love-Casuist to Great Britain, with which I take myself to be invest· ed by your Paper of September 8, I shall make some.

· farther Observations upon the two Sexes in general, beginning with that which always ought to have the upper Hand. After having observed with much

Curiofity the Accomplishments which are apt to captivate female Hearts, I find that there is no Person .

' so irresistible as one who is a Man of Importance, provided it be in Matters of no Consequence. One who makes himself talked of, though it be for the particular Cock of his Hat, or for prating aloud in the Boxes at a Play, is in a fair way of being a Favourite.

I have known a young Fellow make his Fortune by 'knocking down a Contlable; and may venture to fay, tho' it may feem a Paradox, that many a Fair One has died by a Duel in which both the Combatants have

" furvived.

ABOUT three Winters ago I took notice of a young Lady at the Theatre, who conceived a Passion for a notorious Rake that headed a Party of Cat-

' calls; and am credibly informed, that the Emperor of the Mohocks married a rich Widow within three weeks after having rendered himself formidable in Weeks after having rendered himself formidable in the Cities of London and Westminster. Scouring and breaking of Windows have done frequent Execution upon · Hunt.

upon the Sex. But there is no Set of these Male Charmers who make their way more fuccessfully, than those who have gained themselves a Name for Intrigue, and have ruined the greatest Number of Reputations.

There is a strange Curiosity in the semale World to be. acquainted with the dear Man who has been loved by others, and to know what it is that makes him for agreeable. His Reputation does more than half his Business. Every one that is ambitious of being a Woman of Fashion, looks out for Opportunities of being in his Company; fo that to use the old Proverb, When his Name is up he may lie a bed.

' I was very fensible of the great Advantage of being a Man of Importance upon these Occasions on • the Day of the King's Entry, when I was feated in a Balcony behind a Cluster of very pretty Country Ladies, who had one of these showy Gentlemen in the midst of them. The first Trick I caught him at was bowing to several Persons of Quality whom he ' did not know, nay, he had the Impudence to hem. at a Blue Garter who had a finer Equipage than ordinary, and feemed a little concerned at the Impertie nent Huzzas of the Mob, that hindred his Friend from taking notice of him. There was indeed one " who pull'd off his Hat to him, and upon the Ladies e asking who it was, he told them, it was a Foreign · Minister that he had been very merry with the Night before; whereas in truth, it was the City Common-

'HE was never at a loss when he was asked any Perfon's Name, tho' he feldom knew any one under a Peer. He found Dukes and Earls among the Aldermen, very good-natured Fellows among the Privy-Counfellors, with two or three agreeable old Rakes among the Bi-hops and Judges. 'IN short, I collected from his whole Discourse, that he was acquainted with every Body, and knew no Body. ' At the same time, I am mistaken if he did not that Day

" make more Advances in the Affections of his Mistress, who fat near him, than he could have done in half a Year's Courtship.

OVID has finely touched this Method of making

Love, which I shall here give my Reader in Mr. Dry-

Page the Eleventh.

Thus Love in Theatres did first improve, And Theatres are fill the Scene of Love : Nor Shun the Chariots, and the Courser's Race; The Circus is no inconvenient Place. Nor Need is there of talking on the Hand, Nor Nods, nor Signs, which Lovers understand; But boldly next the Fair your Seat provide, Close as you can to bers, and Side by Side: Pleas'd or unpleas'd, no Matter; crouding sit; For so the Laws of public Shows permit. Then find Occasion to begin Discourse, Enquire whose Chariot this, and whose that Horse; To what soever Side she is inclin'd, Suit all your Inclinations to ber Mind: Like what she likes, from thence your Court begin, And whom she favours, wish that he may win.

Again, Page the Sixteenth.

O when will come the Day by Heav'n defign'd, When thou, the best and fairest of Mankind, Drawn by white Horses, shalt in Triumph ride, With conquer'd Slaves attending on thy Side; Slaves, that no longer can be Safe in flight. O glorious Object! O surprising Sight! O Day of public Joy, too good to end in Night! On such a Day, if thou, and next to thee Some Beauty fits, the Spectacle to see; If she enquire the Names of conquer'd Kings, Of Mountains, Rivers, and their hidden Springs; Answer to all thou knowest; and, if Need be, Of things unknown seem to speak knowingly: This is Euphrates, crown'd with Reeds; and there Flows the swift Tigris, with his Sea-green Hair. Invent new Names of Things unknown before; Call this Armenia, that, the Caspian Shore: Call this a Mede, and that a Parthian Youth; Talk probably: no Matter for the Truth.

Nº 603 Wednesday, October 6.

Ducite ab Urbe Domum, mea Carmina, ducite Daphnim.
Virg. Ecl. 8. v. 68.

My lingring Daphnis to my longing Arms.

DRYDEN.

THE following Copy of Verses comes from one of my Correspondents, and has something in it so Original, that I do not much doubt but it will divert my Readers.

T

When Phebe went with me wherever I went;
Ten thousand sweet Pleasures I felt in my Breast:
Sure never fond Shepherd like Colin was blest!
But now she is gone, and has left me behind,
What a marwellous Change on a sudden I find?
When things were as fine as could possibly be,
I thought 'twas the Spring; but alas! it was she.

H.

With such a Companion, to tend a few Sheep,
To rise up and play, or to lie down and sleep:
I was so good-humour'd, so chearful and gay,
My Heart was as light as a Feather all Day.
But now I so cross and so peevish am grown;
So strangely uneasy as ever was known.
My Fair One is gone, and my Joys are all drown'd,
And my Heart — I am sure it weighs more than a Pound.

III.

The Fountain that wont to run sweetly along, And dance to soft Murmurs the Pebbles among;

Thos

Thou know'ft, little Cupid, if Phebe was there, 'Twas Pleasure to look at, 'twas Music to bear: But now she is absent, I walk by its Side, And still as it murmurs do nothing but chide; Must you be so chearful, while I go in Pain? Peace there with your Bubbling, and hear me complain.

IV.

When my Lambkins around me would oftentimes play,
And when Phebe and I were as joyful as they,
How pleasant their Sporting, how happy their Time,
When Spring, Love and Beauty were all in their Prime?
But now in their Frolics when by me they pass,
I fling at their Fleeces an handful of Grass;
Be still then, I cry, for it makes me quite mad,
To see you so merry, while I am so sad.

V.

My Dog I was ever swell pleased to see Come wagging his Tail to my Fair One and me; And Phebe was pleas'd too, and to my Dog said, Come hither, poor Fellow; and patted his Head. But now, when he's fawning, I with a sour Look Cry Sirrah; and give him a Blow with my Crook: And Ill give him another; for why should not Tray Be as dull as his Master, when Phebe's away?

VI.

When walking with Phebe, what Sights have I seen? How fair was the Flow'r, how fresh was the Green? What a lovely Appearance the Trees and the Shade, The Corn-fields and Hedges, and ev'ry thing made? But now she has left me, tho' all are still there, They none of 'em now so delightful appear: 'Twas nought but the Magic, I find, of her Eyes, Made so many beautiful Prospects arise.

VII.

Sweet Music went with us both all the Wood thro', The Lark, Linnet, Throstle, and Nightingale too;

Winds

Winds over us whisper'd, Flocks by us did bleat, And chirp went the Grashopper under our Feet. But now she is absent, the still they sing on, The Woods are but lonely, the Melody's gone: Her Voice in the Consort, as now I have found, Gave every thing else its agreeable Sound.

VIII

Rose, what is become of thy delicate Hue?

And where is the Violet's beautiful Blue?

Does ought of its Sweetness the Blossom beguile?

That Meadow, those Daisies, why do they not smile?

Ah! Rivals, I see what it was that you drest,

And made yourselves fine for; a Place in her Breast:

You put on your Colours to pleasure her Eye,

To be pluckt by her Hand, on her Bosom to die.

IX.

How slowly Time creeps, till my Phebe return?
While amidst the soft Zephyr's cool Breezes I burn;
Methinks if I knew whereabouts he would tread,
I could breathe on his Wings, and "twould melt down the Lead.
Fly swifter, ye Minutes, bring hither my Dear,
And rest yo much longer for't when she is here.
Ab Colin! old Time is full of Delay,
Nor will budge one Foot faster for all thou canst say.

X.

Will no pitying Pow'r that bears me complain,
Or cure my Disquiet, or soften my Pain?
To be cur'd, thou must, Colin, thy Passion remove;
But what Swain is so filly to live without Love?
No, Deity, bid the dear Nymph to return,
For ne'er was poor Shepherd so sadly forlorn.
Ah! What shall I do? I shall die with Despair;
Take heed, all ye Swains, how ye love One so fair.

CHACOFARMANIA TOLKAS

Nº 604 Friday, October 8.

Ab, do not strive too much to know,
My dear Leuconoe,
What the kind Gods design to do
With me and thee.

CREECH.

THE Desire of knowing suture Events, is one of the strongest Inclinations in the Mind of Man. Indeed an Ability of foreseeing probable Accidents is what, in the Language of Men, is called Wisdom and Prudence: But, not satisfied with the Light that Reason holds out, Mankind hath endeavoured to penetrate more compendiously into Futurity. Magic, Oracles, Omens, lucky Hours, and the various Arts of Superstition owe their Rise to this powerful Cause. As this Principle is sounded in Self-Love, every Man is sure to be solicitous in the first Place about his own Fortune, the Course of his Life, and the Time and Manner of his Death.

IF we consider that we are free Agents, we shall discover the Absurdity of such Enquiries. One of our Actions, which we might have performed or neglected, is the Cause of another that succeeds it, and so the whole Chain of Life is link'd together. Pain, Poverty, or Insamy, are the natural Product of vicious and imprudent Acts; as the contrary Blessings are of good ones; so that we cannot suppose our Lot to be determined without Impiety. A great Enhancement of Pleasure arises from its being unexpected; and Pain is doubled by being foreseen. Upon all these, and several other Accounts, we ought to rest satisfied in this Portion bestowed on us; to adore the Hand that hath sitted fitted every Thing to our Nature, and hath not more display'd his Goodness in our Knowledge than in our Ignorance.

Enquiries into future Events, prevail more or less, in proportion to the Improvement of liberal Arts and useful Knowledge in the several Parts of the World. Accordingly we find, that magical Incantations remain in Lapland; in the more remote Parts of Scotland they have their second Sight, and several of our own Countrymen have seen abundance of Fairies. In Asia this Credulity is strong; and the greatest Part of refined Learning there consists in the Knowledge of Amulets, Talismans, occult Numbers, and the like.

WHEN I was at Grand Caire, I fell into the Acquaintance of a good-natured Mussulman, who promised me many good Offices, which he designed to do me when he became the Prime Minister, which was a Fortune bestowed on his Imagination by a Doctor very deep in the curious Sciences. At his repeated Solicitations I went to learn my Destiny of this wonderful Sage For a small Sum I had his Promise, but was desired to wait in a dark Apartment till he had run thro' the preparatory Ceremonies. Having a strong Propensity, even then, to Dreaming, I took a Nap upon the Sofa where I was placed, and had the following Vision, the Particulars whereof I picked up the other Day among my Papers.

I found myself in an unbounded Plain, where methought the whole World, in several Habits and with different Tongues, was assembled. The Multitude glided swiftly along, and I found in myself a strong Inclination to mingle in the Train. My Eyes quickly singled out some of the most splendid Figures. Several in rich Castans and glittering Turbans bustled through the Throng, and trampled over the Bodies of those they threw down; till to my great Surprise I found that the great Pace they went only hastned them to a Scassfold or a Bowstring. Many beautiful Damsels on the other Side moved forward with great Gaiety; some danced till they sell all along; and others painted their Faces 'till they lost their Noses. A

Tribe

Tribe of Creatures with bufy Looks falling into a Fit of Laughter at the Misfortunes of the unhappy Ladies, I turn'd my Eyes upon them. They were each of them filling his Pockets with Gold and Jewels, and when there. was no Room left for more, these Wretches looking round with Fear and Horror, pined away before my Face with con on in agastwork Famine and Discontent.

THIS Prospect of human Misery Aruck me dumb for fome Miles. Then it was that, to disburden my Mind, I took Pen and Ink, and did every Thing that hath fince happen'd under my Office of SPECTATOR, While I was employing myfelf for the Good of Mankind, I was furpris'd to meet with very unfuitable Returns from my Fellow-Creatures. Never was poor. Author fo befet with Pamphleteers, who sometimes marched directly against me, but oftner shot at me from strong Bulwarks, or rose up suddenly in Ambush. They were of all Characters and Capacities, some with Enfigns of Dignity, and others in Liveries; but what most surpris'd me, was to see two or three in black Gowns among my Enemies. It was no small Trouble to me, fometimes to have a Man come up to me with an angry Face, and reproach me for having lampooned him, when I had never feen or heard of him in my Life. With the Ladies it was otherwise: Many became my Enemies for not being particularly pointed out; as there were others who resented the Satire which they imagined I had directed against them. My great Comfort was in the Company of half a Dozen Friends, who, I found fince, were the Club which I have so often mentioned in my Papers. I laughed often at Sir Roger in my Sleep, and was the more diverted with Will Honeycomb's Galantries, (when we afterwards became acquainted) because I had foreseen his Marriage with a Farmer's Daughter. The Regret which arose in my Mind upon the Death of my Companions, my Anxieties for the Public, and the many Calamities still fleeting bef re my Eyes, made me repent my Curiofity; when the Magician entered the Room, and awakened me, by telling me (when it was too late) that he was just going to begin. mails flor yads like your rieds bosular

N. B. I have only deliver'd the Prophesy of that Part of my Life which is past, it being inconvenient to divulge the second Part 'till a more proper Opportunity.

CONTRACTOR OF THE STATE OF THE

Nº 605 Monday, October 11.

Exuerint sylvestrem animum; cultuque frequenti, In quascunque voces artes, baud tarda sequentur. Virg. Georg. 2. v. 54.

Their Wildness lose, and quitting Nature's Part, Obey the Rules and Discipline of Art.

DRYDEN.

HAVING perused the following Letter, and finding it to run upon the Subject of Love, I referred it to the Learned Casuist, whom I have retained in my Service for Speculations of that Kind. He return'd it to me next Morning with his Report annexed to it, with both of which I shall here present my Reader.

Mr. SPECTATOR, 2 4 . State of . Title all fel

Person in your Service in quality of Love Ca [Juist], I apply myself to you, under a very great Dif ficulty, that hath for some Months perplexed me. I have a couple of humble Servants, one of which I have no Aversion to; the other I think of very kind ly. The first hath the Reputation of a Man of good Sense, and is one of those People that your Sex are apt to value. My Spark is reckoned a Coxcomb among the Men, but is a Favourite of the Ladies. If I marry the Man of Worth, as they call him, I shall oblige my Parents and improve my Fortune; but with my dear Beau I promise myself Happiness, altho not a Jointure. Now I would ask you, whether I mould coulent to lead my Life with a Man that I have only no Objection to, or with him against whom ' all Objections to me appear frivolous. I am determined to follow the Cafuift's Advice, and I dare fay he will not put me upon fo ferious a thing as Matrimony.

contrary to my Inclination.

I am, &c. 700

Fanny Fickle.

P. S. I forgot to tell you, that the pretty Gentleman is the most complaisant Creature in the World, and is always of my Mind, but the other, forfooth, fancies he has as much Wit as myself, slights my Lap-dog, and hath the Insolence to contradict me when he thinks I am not in the Right. About half an Hour ago, he maintained to my Face, that a Patch always implies a · Pimple.

AS I look upon it to be my Duty rather to fide with the Parents than the Daughter, I shall propose some Confiderations to my Gentle Querift, which may incline her to comply with those, under whose Direction the is: And at the same time convince her, that it is not impossible but she may, in time, have a true Affection for him who is, at present, indifferent to her; Or, to use the old Family Maxim, that, If the marries first, Love will come after.

THE only Objection, that the feems to infinuate against the Gentleman proposed to her, is his want of Complaisance, which, I perceive, she is very willing to return. Now, I can discover from this very Circumstance, that she and her Lover, whatever they may think of it, are very good Friends in their Hearts. It is difficult to determine, whether Love delights more in giving Pleasure or Pain. Let Mils Fickle ask he own Heart, if she doth not take a secret Pride in making this Man of good Sense look very filly. Hath she ever been better pleas'd, than when her Behaviour hath made her Lover ready to hang himself? Or doth the ever rejoice more, than when the thinks the hath driven him to the very Brink of a purling Stream? Let her confider, at the same time, that it is not impossible but her Lover may have discovered her Tricks, and hath a mind to give her as good as the brings. I remember a handlom young Baggage that treated a hopeful Greek of my Acquaintance, just come from Oxford, as if he had been a Barbarian. The first Week, after The had fixed him, the took a Pinch of Snuff out of his Rival's Box, and apparently touched the Etiemy's little Finger. She became a profest Enemy to the Arts and Sciences, and scarce ever wrote a Letter to him without wilfully mispelling his Name. The young Scholar, to be even with her, railed at Coquettes as foon as he had got the Word; and did not want Parts to turn into Ridicule her Men of Wit and Pleasure of the Town. After having irritated one another for the Space of five Months, the made an Affiguation with him fourfcore Miles from London. But as he was very well acquainted with her Pranks, he took a Journey the quite contrary Way. Accordingly they met, quarrel'd, and in a few Days were married. Their former Hostilities are now the Subject of their Mirth, being content at present with that Part of Love only, which bestows

WOMEN, who have been married fome time, not having it in their Heads to draw after them a numerous Train of Followers, find their Satisfaction in the Poffeffion of one Man's Heart. I know very well, that Ladies in their Bloom defire to be excused in this Particular. But when Time hath worn out their natural Vanity and taught them Discretion, their Fondness settles on its proper Object. And it is probable for this Reason, that among Husbands, you will find more that are fond of Women beyond their Prime, than of those who are actually in the Insolence of Beauty. My Reader will apply the fame Observation to the other Sex

I need not infift upon the Necessity of their pursuing one common Interest, and their united Care for their Children, but finall only observe, by the way, that married Persons are both more warm in their Love, and more hearty in their Hatred, than any others whatsoever.
Mutual Favours and Obligations which may be supposed to be greater here than in any other State, naturally beget an Intense Affection in generous Minds. As, on the contrary, Persons who have bestowed such Favours, have a particular Bitterness in their Resentments, when they think themselves ill-treated by those of whom they have deserved so much.

BESIDES, Miss Fickle may consider, that as there are often many Faults conceal'd before Marriage, so there are sometimes many Virtues unobserv'd.

TO this we may add the great Efficacy of Custom, and constant Conversation, to produce a mutual Friendship and Benevolence in two Persons. It is a nice Reflexion, which I have heard a Friend of mine make, that you may be fure a Woman loves a Man, when the uses his Expressions, tells his Stories, or imitates his Manner. This gives a fecret Delight; for Imitation is a kind of artless Flattery, and mightily favours the powerful Principle of Self love. It is certain, that married Persons, who are possest with a mutual Esteem, not only catch the Air and way of Talk from one another, but fall into the same Traces of thinking and liking. Nay, some have carried the Remark so far as to affert, that the Features of Man and Wife grow, in time, to resemble one another. Let my fair Correspondent therefore consider, that the Gentleman recommended will have a good deal of her own Face in two or three Years; which she must not expect from the Beau, who is too full of his dear felf to Copy after another. I dare appeal to her own Judgment, if that Person will not be the handsomest, that is the most like herfelf.

WE have a remarkable Instance to our present Purpose in the History of King Edgar, which I shall here relate, and leave it with my fair Correspondent to be applied to herself.

THIS great Monarch, who is so samous in British Story, se'l in Love, as he made his Progress through his Kingdom, with a certain Duke's Daughter, who lived near Winchester, and was the most celebrated Beauty of the Age. His Importunities and the Violence of his Passion were so great, that the Mother of the young Lady promised him to bring her Daughter to his Bed the next Night, though in her Heart she abhorr'd so infamous an Office. It was no fooner dark than she convey'd into his Room a young Maid of no disagreeable Figure, who was one of her Attendants, and did not want Address to improve the Opportunity for the Advancement of her Fortune. She made fo good use of her Time, that when she offered to rise a little before Day, the King could by no means think of parting with her. So that finding herself under a Necessity of discovering who she was, she did it in so handsom a Manner, that his Majesty was exceeding gracious to her, and took her ever after under his Protection: insomuch that our Chronicles tell us he carried her along with him, made her his first Minister of State, and continued true to her alone, 'till his Marriage with the beautiful Elfrida.

Nº 606. Wednesday, October 13.

-longum cantu solata laborem Arguto Conjux percurrit pectine telas. Virg. Georg. 1. v. 294.

Mean time at home The good Wife finging plies the various Loom.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

Have a couple of Neices under my Direction, who fo often run gadding abroad, that I don't know where to have them. Their Dress, their Tea, and their Visits take up all their Time, and they go to Bed as tired with doing nothing, as I am after quilting a whole Under-Petticoat. The only time they are not idle, is while they read your SPECTA-TORS; which being dedicated to the Interests of Virtue, I defire you to recommend the long neglected Art of Needle-Work. Those Hours which in this Vol. VIII.

* Age are thrown away in Dress, Play, Visits and the like, were employ'd, in my time, in writing out like, were employ'd, in my time, in writing out Receipts, or working Beds, Chairs, and Hangings for the Family. For my part, I have ply'd my Needle these sifty Years, and by my good Will would never have it out of my Hand. It grieves my Heart to fee a couple of proud idle Flirts sipping their Tea, for a whole Afternoon, in a Room hung round with the Industry of their Great-Grandmother. Pray, Sir, take the laudable Mystery of Embroidery into your serious Consideration, and as you have a great deal of the Virtue of the last Age in you, continue your Endeavours to reform the present. I am, &c.

IN Obedience to the Commands of my venerable Correspondent, I have duly weigh'd this important Subject, and promise my self, from the Arguments here laid down; that all the sine Ladies of England will be ready, as soon as their Mourning is over, to appear covered with the Work of their own Hands.

WHAT a delightful Entertainment must it be to the Fair Sex, whom their native Modesty and the Tenderness of Men towards them, exempts from Public Business, to pass their Hours in imitating Fruits and Flowers, and transplanting all the Beauties of Nature into their own Dress, or raising a new Creation in their Closets and Apartments. How pleasing is the Amusement of walking among the Shades and Groves planted by themselves, in surveying Heroes slain by their Needle, or little Cupids which they have brought into the World without Pain!

THIS is, methinks, the most proper way wherein a Lady can shew a fine Genius, and I cannot forbear wishing, that several Writers of that Sex had chosen to apply themselves rather to Tapestry than Rhime. Your Pastoral Poetesses may vent their Fancy in Rural Landskips, and place despairing Shepherds under silken Willows, or drown them in a Stream of Mohair. The Heroic Writers may work up Battles as successfully, and inslame them with Gold or stain them with Crimfon. Even those who have only a Turn to a Song or an Epigram, may put many valuable Stitches into a Purse, and croud a thousand Graces into a pair of Garters.

IF I may, without breach of good Manners, imagine that any pretty Creature is void of Genius, and would perform her Part herein but very aukwardly, I must nevertheless insist upon her working, if it be only to keep her out of Harm's way.

ANOTHER Argument for busying good Women in Works of Fancy, is, because it takes them off from Scandal, the usual Attendant of Tea-tables, and all other unactive Scenes of Life. While they are forming their Birds and Beasts, their Neighbours will be allowed to be the Fathers of their own Children: And Whig and Tory will be but seldom mentioned, where the great Dispute is, whether Blue or Red is the more proper Colour. How much greater Glory would Sophronia do the General, if she would choose rather to work the Battle of Blenheim in Tapestry, than signalize herself with so much Vehemence against those who are French. men in their Hearts.

A third Reason that I shall mention, is the Profit that is brought to the Family where these pretty Arts are encouraged. It is manifest that this Way of Life not only keeps fair Ladies from running out into Expences, but is at the same time an actual Improvement. How memorable would that Matron be, who shall have it Inscribed upon her Monument, 'That she wrought out the whole Bible in Tapestry, and died in a good old Age, after having covered three hundred Yards of Wall in the Mansion-House.

THE Premises being consider'd, I humbly submit the following Proposals to all Mothers in Great-Britain.

I. THAT no young Virgin whatsoever be allow'd to receive the Addresses of her first Lover, but in a Suit of her own Embroidering.

II. THAT before every fresh Servant, she be oblig'd to appear with a new Stomacher at the least.

III. THAT no one be actually married, till she hath the child bed Pillows, &c. ready stitched, as likewise the Mantle for the Boy quite finished.

THESE Laws, if I mistake not, would essectually restore the decay'd Art of Needle-work, and make the Virgins of Great Britain exceedingly Nimble-singer'd in their Business.

THERE is a memorable Custom of the Grecian Ladies in this particular, preserv'd in Homer, which I hope will have a very good Effect with my Country women. A Widow, in ancient Times, could not, without Indecency, receive a second Husband, till she had woven a Shroud for her deceased Lord, or the next of Kin to him. Accordingly, the chaste Penelope, having, as she thought, lost Ulysses at Sea, she employed her Time in preparing a Winding sheet for Laertes, the Father of her Husband. The Story of her Web being very samous, and yet not sufficiently known in its several Circumstances, I shall give it to my Reader, as Homer makes one of her Wooers relate it.

· Sweet Hope she gave to every Youth apart, With well taught Looks, and a deceitful Heart: A Web she wove of many a stender Twine, Of curious Texture, and perplext Defign; My Youths, she cry'd, my Lord but newly dead, Forbear a while to court my widow'd Bed, 'Till I have wow'n, as solemn Vows require, This Web, a Shroud for poor Ulysses' Sire. His Limbs, when Fate the Hero's Soul demands, Shall claim this Labour of his Daughter's Hands: Lest all the Dames of Greece my Name despise, While the great King without a Covering lies. Thus she. Nor did my Friends mistrust the Guile, All Day she sped the long laborious Toil: But when the burning Lamps supply'd the Sun, Each Night unravell'd what the Day begun. Three live-long Summers did the Fraud prevail; The Fourth her Maidens told th' amazing Tale. These Eyes beheld, as close I took my Stand, The backward Labours of her faithless Hand: "Till watch'd at length, and press'd on every Side, Her Task she ended, and commenc'd a Bride.

Nº 607 Friday, October 15.

Dicite lo Paan, & lo bis dicite Paan: Decidit in casses præda petita meos. Ovid. Ars Am. 1, 1, v. 1.

Now Io Paan fing, now Wreaths prepare, And with repeated Ios fill the Air: The Prey is faln in my successful Toiles.

ANON.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

TAVING in your Paper of Monday last published my Report on the Case of Mrs. Fanny Fickle, wherein I have taken notice, that Love comes after Marriage; I hope your Readers are fatisfied of this Truth, that as Love generally produces Matrimony, so it often happens that Matrimony produces Love.

'IT perhaps requires more Virtues to make a good · Husband or Wife, than what go to the finishing any the most shining Character whatsoever.

DISCRETION seems absolutely necessary, and accordingly we find that the best Husbands have been most famous for their Wisdom. Homer, who hath drawn a perfect Pattern of a prudent Man, to make it the more complete, hath celebrated him for the just Returns of Fidelity and Truth to his Penelope; infomuch that he refused the Caresses of a Goddess for her fake, and to use the Expression of the best of Pagan Authors, vetulam suam prætulit Immortalitati, his old Woman was dearer to him than Immortality. 'VIRTUE is the next necessary Qualification for this domestic Character, as it naturally produces Constancy and mutual Esteem. Thus Brutus and Porcia were more remarkable for Virtue and Affection than any others of the Age in which they lived.

GOOD-

GOOD-NATURE is a third necessary Ingredient in the Marriage-State, without which it would ' inevitably four upon a thousand Occasions. When Greatness of Mind is joined with this amiable Quality, it attracts the Admiration and Esteem of all who be' hold it. Thus Casar, not more remarkable for his · Fortune and Valour than for his Humanity, stole into the Hearts of the Roman People, when, breaking through the Custom, he pronounced an Oration at the Funeral of his first and best beloved Wife. GOOD NATURE is infufficient, unless it be · fleady and uniform, and accompanied with an Even-• ness of Temper, which is, above all things, to be preserved in this Friendship contracted for Life. A Man must be easy within himself, before he can be so to his other felf. Socrates, and Marcus Aurelius, are Instances of Men, who, by the Strength of Philoso-' phy, having entirely composed their Minds, and subdued their Passions, are celebrated for good Husbands, ' notwithstanding the first was yoked with Xantippe, and the other with Faustina. If the wedded Pair would · but habituate themselves for the first Year to bear with one another's Faults, the Difficulty would be pretty well conquer'd. This mutual Sweetness of Temper and Complacency was finely recommended in the Nuptial Ceremonies among the Heathens, who, when they facrificed to Juno at that Solemnity, always tore out the Gall from the Entrails of the Victim, and cast it behind the Altar.

· I shall conclude this Letter with a Passage out of · Dr. Plot's Natural History of Staffordsbire, not only as it will serve to fill up your present Paper, but, if I find myself in the Humour, may give Rise to another; I having by me an old Register, belonging to the Place here undermentioned.

SIR Philip de Somervile held the Manors of Whichenoure, Scirescot, Ridware, Netherton, and Cowley, all in Com. Stafford, of the Earls of Lancaster, by this memorable Service. The faid Sir Philip shall find, maintain, and fustain, one Bacon-Flitch, hanging in his Hall. at Whichenoure, ready arrayed all times of the Year, but in Lent, to be given to every Man or Woman married, after the Day and the Year of their Marriage be past, in Form following.

WHENSOEVER that any one fuch before named will come to enquire for the Bacon, in their own Person, they shall come to the Bailiff, or to the Porter of the Lordship of Whichenoure, and shall say to them in the manner as ensueth;

'BAYLIFF, or Porter, I do you to know, that I am come for myself, to demand one Bacon Flyke hanging in the Hall of the Lord of Whichenoure, after the Form

' thereunto belonging.

AFTER which Relation, the Bailiff or Porter shall affign a Day to him, upon Promise by his Faith to return, and with him to bring Twain of his Neighbours. And in the mean time the faid Bailiff shall take with him Twain of the Freeholders of the Lordship of Whichenoure, and they three shall go to the Manor of Rudlow, belonging to Robert Knightleye, and there shall summon the aforesaid Knightleye, or his Bailiff, commanding him to be ready at Whichenoure the Day appointed, at Prime of Day, with his Carriage, that is to fay, a Horse and a Saddle, a Sack and a Prike, for to convey the faid Bacon and Corn a Journey out of the County of Stafford, at his Costages. And then the said Bailiff shall, with the said Freeholders, summon all the Tenants of the faid Manor, to be ready at the Day appointed, at Whichenovre, for to do and perform the Services which they owe to the Bacon. And at the Day affigned, all such as owe Services to the Bacon, shall be ready at the Gate of the Manor of Whichenowre, from the Sun-rising to Noon, attending and awaiting for the coming of him who fetcheth the Bacon. And when he is come, there shall be delivered to him and his Fellows, Chapelets; and to all those which shall be there, to do their Services due to the Bacon. And they shall lead the said Demandant with Trumps and Tabours, and other manner of Minstrelfy, to the Hall-Door, where he shall find the Lord of Whichenoure, or his Steward, ready to deliver the Bacon in this manner.

HE shall enquire of him, which demandeth the Bacon, if he have brought twain of his Neighbours with him:

him: Which must answer, They be here ready. And then the Steward shall cause these two Neighbours to swear, if the said Demandant be a wedded Man, or have been a Man wedded; and if since his Marriage one Year and a Day be past; and if he be a Freeman, or a Villain. And if his said Neighbours make Oath, that he hath for him all these three Points rehearsed; then shall the Bacon be taken down and brought to the Hall-Door, and shall there be laid upon one half Quarter of Wheat, and upon one other of Rye. And he that demandeth the Bacon shall kneel upon his Knee, and shall hold his Right Hand upon a Book, which Book shall be laid upon the Bacon and the Corn, and shall make Oath in this manner.

manner.

'HERE ye, Sir Philip de Somervile, Lord of Whichenowre, mayntener and gyver of this Baconne: That

I A fithe I wedded B my Wife, and fithe I had hyr in my kepying, and at my Wylle, by a Year and a Day after our Marriage, I would not have chaunged for none other; farer, ne fowler; richer, ne pourer; ne for none other descended of greater Lynage; slepying ne wak ing, at noo tyme. And if the seyd B were sole and I fole, I would take her to be my Wife before all the Wymen of the Worlde, of what condiciones soever

they be, good or evylle: as help me God and his Seyntes, and this Flesh and all Fleshes.

AND his Neighbours shall make Oath, that they trust verily he hath said truly. And if it be sound by his Neighbours before named, that he be a Freeman, there shall be delivered to him half a Quarter of Wheat and a Cheese; and if he be a Villain, he shall have half a Quarter of Rye without Cheese. And then shall Knight-leye, the Lord of Rudlow, be called for, to carry all these Things to fore rehearsed; and the said Corn shall be laid on one Horse and the Bacon above it: and he to whom the Bacon appertaineth shall ascend upon his Horse, and shall take the Cheese before him, if he have a Horse. And if he have none, the Lord of Whichenoure shall cause him to have one Horse and Saddle, to such time as he be passed his Lordship: and so shall they depart the Manor of Whichenoure with the Corn and the Bacon, tofore him that hath won it, with Trumpets, Tabourets. Bourets, and other manner of Minstrelsy. And all the Free Tenants of Whichenowre shall conduct him to be passed the Lordship of Whichenowre. And then shall they all return; except him, to whom appertaineth to make the Carriage and Journey without the County of Stafford, at the Costs of his Lord of Whichenowre.

ODE ESTABLE FOR

Nº 608 Monday, October 18.

— Perjuria ridet Amantum. Ovid. Ars Am. 1. 1. v. 633.

The Perjuries that easy Maids beguile.

DRYDEN.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

A CCORDING to my Promise I herewith transmit to you a List of several Persons, who from time to time demanded the Flitch of Bacon of Sir Philip de Somervile, and his Descendents; as it is preserved in an ancient Manuscript under the Title of The Register of Whichenovre Hall, and of the Bacon Flitch there maintained.

IN the Beginning of this Record is recited the Law or Institution in Form, as it is already printed in your last Paper: To which are added two By-Laws, as a Comment upon the General Law, the Substance where of is, that the Wise shall take the same Oath as the Husband, mutatis mutandis; and that the Judges shall, as they think meet, interrogate or cross-examine the Witnesses. After this proceeds the Register in Manner following.

AUBRY de Falstaff, Son of Sir John Falstaff, Kt. with Dame Maude his Wife, were the first that demanded the Bacon, he having bribed twain of his Father's Companions to swear falsty in his behoof, whereby he gained the Flitch: But he and his said Wife falling immediately into a Dispute how the said Bacon should be I 5 dressed, it was by Order of the Judges taken from him, and

' hung up again in the Hall.

- ALISON the Wife of Stephen Freckle, brought her faid Husband along with her, and set forth the good Conditions and Behaviour of her Consort, adding withal that fee doubted not but that he was ready to attest the Life of
- ber, his Wife; whereupon he, the said Stephen, shaking his Head, she turned short upon him, and gave him a Box on the Ear.

'PHILIP de Waverland, having laid his Hand upon the Book, when the Clause, Were I sole and she sole, was rehearsed, found a secret Compunction rising in his Mind, and stole, it off again.

RICHARD de Loveless, who was a Courtier, and a very well-bred Man, being observed to hesitate at the Words after our Marriage, was thereupon required to explain himself. He reply'd, by talking very largely of his exact Complaisance while he was a Lover; and alledg'd, that he had not in the least disobliged his Wife for a Year and a Day before Marriage, which he hoped was the same Thing.

· Rejected.

JOCELINE Jolly, Esq; making it appear by unquestionable Testimony, That he and his Wife had preserved full and entire Affection for the Space of the sirst Month, commonly called the Honey-Moon; he had in Consideration thereof one Rasher bestowed upon him.

'AFTER this, fays the Record, many Years passed over before any Demandant appeared at Whichenoure-Hall; insomuch that one would have thought that the whole Country were turned Jews, so little was their Affection to the Flitch of Bacon.

THE next Couple enrolled had like to have carried it, if one of the Witnesses had not deposed, That dining on a Sunday with the Demandant, whose Wife had sat below the Squire's Lady at Church, she the said Wife dropped some Expressions, as if she thought her Husband deserved to be knighted; to which he returned a passionate Pist! The Judges taking the Premises into Consideration, declared the aforesaid Behaviour to imply an unwarrantable Ambition in the Wife, and Anger in the Husband.

IT is recorded as a sufficient Disqualification of a certain Wife, that speaking of her Husband, she said, God forgive him.

IT is likewise remarkable, that a Couple were rejected ed upon the Deposition of one of their Neighbours, that the Lady had once told her Husband, that it was ber Duty to obey; to which he replied, Oh, my Dear! you are never in the wrong.

THE violent Passion of one Lady for her Lap-Dog; the turning away of the old House-Maid by another; a Tayern-Bill torn by the Wise, and a Tailor's by the Husband; a Quarrel about the Kissing-Crust; spoiling of Dinners, and coming in late of Nights; are so many several Articles which occasioned the Reprobation of some Scores of Demandants, whose Names are recorded in the aforesaid Register.

'WITHOUT enumerating other particular Persons,'
I shall content myself with observing, that the Sentence pronounced against one Gervase Poacher is, that he might have had Bacon to his Eggs, if he had not hitherto scolded his Wife when they were over boiled. And the Deposition against Dorothy Doolittle runs in these Words; That she had so far usurped the Dominion of the Coalsire, (the Stirring whereof her Husband claimed to himself) that by her good Will she never would suffer the Poker out of her Hand.

'I find but two Couples, in this first Century, that were fuccessful: The first was a Sea-Captain and his Wife, who fince the Day of their Marriage had not seen one another till the Day of the Claim. The Second was an honest Pair in the Neighbourhood; The Husband was a Man of plain good Sense, and a peaceable Temper; the Woman was dumb.

CHARLES CONTRACTOR

Nº 609 Wednesday, October 20.

The miscellaneous Subjects of my Book.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

Have for some time desired to appear in your Paper, and have therefore chosen a Day to steal into the SPECTATOR, when I take it for granted you will not have many spare Minutes for Speculations of your own. As I was the other Day walking with an honest Country-Gentleman, he very often was ex-pressing his Astonishment to see the Town so mightily crouded with Doctors of Divinity: Upon which I told him he was very much mistaken if he took all those Gentlemen he saw in Scarves to be Persons of that Dignity; for that a young Divine, after his first Degree in the University, usually comes hither only to show himself; and, on that Occasion, is apt to think he is but half equipp'd with a Gown and Cassock for his publick Appearance, if he hath not the additional Ornament of a Scarf of the first Magnitude to intitle him to the Appellation of Doctor from his Landlady. and the Boy at Child's. Now fince I know that this Piece of Garniture is looked upon as a Mark of Vanity or Affectation, as it is made use of among some of the little spruce Adventurers of the Town, I should be glad if you would give it a Place among those Extravagancies you have justly exposed in several of your · Papers: being very well affured that the main Body of the Clergy, both in the Country and the Univerfities, who are almost to a Man untainted with it. would be very well pleased to see this venerable Fop-' pery well exposed. When my Patron did me the Honour to take me into his Family (for I must own myfelf of this Order) he was pleased to say he took me * as a Friend and Companion; and whether he looked upon the Scarf like the Lace and Shoulder-knot of a · Footman, as a Badge of Servitude and Dependence. I do not know, but he was fo kind as to leave my wearing of it to my own Discretion; and not having any iust Title to it from my Degrees, I am content to be without the Ornament. The Privileges of our Nobi-· lity to keep a certain Number of Chaplains are undifputed, though perhaps not one in ten of those Reverend Gentlemen have any Relation to the noble Fami-· lies their Scarves belong to; the Right generally of creating all Chaplains, except the Domestic, where there is one, being nothing more than the Perquifite of a Steward's Place, who, if he happens to out-live any confiderable Number of his noble Mafters, shall probably. at one and the same Time, have fifty Chaplains, all in their proper Accoutrements, of his own Creation: though, perhaps, there hath been neither Grace nor Prayer faid in the Family fince the Introduction of the first Coronet.

I am, &c.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

Wish you would write a Philosophical Paper about Natural Antipathies, with a Word or two con-cerning the Strength of Imagination. I can give you a List upon the first Notice, of a Rational China Cup, of an Egg that walks upon two Legs, and a Quart-Pot that fings like a Nightingale. There is in my Neighbourhood a very pretty prattling Shoulder of · Veal, that squalls out at the fight of a Knife. Then, as for natural Antipathies, I knew a General Officer who was never conquered but by a smothered Rabbit; and a Wife that domineers over her Husband by the help of a Breast of Mutton. A Story that relates to myself on this Subject may be thought not unentertaining, especially when I affure you that it is ' literally true. I had long made Love to a Lady, in the Possession of whom I am now the happiest of Mankind, whose Hand I shou'd have gained with much Difficulty without the Assistance of a Cat. You " must know then, that my most dangerous Rival had fo strong an Aversion to this Species, that he infallibly swooned away at the Sight of that harmless Creature. My Friend Mrs. Lucy, her Maid, having a greater Respect for me and my Purse than she had for my Rival, always took care to pin the Tail of a Cat under the Gown of her Mistress, whenever she knew of his coming; which had such an Effect, that every Time he entered the Room, he looked more like one of the Figures in Mrs. Salmon's Wax-work, than a desirable Lover. In short, he grew sick of her Company; which the young Lady taking notice of, (who no more knew why, than he did) she sent me a Challenge to meet her in Lincoln's-Inn Chapel, which I joyfully accepted, and have (amongst other Pleasures) the Satisfaction of being praised by her for my Stratagem. I am, &c.

From the Hoop.

Tom Nimble:

Mr. SPECTATOR,

THE Virgins of Great-Britain are very much oblig'd to you for putting them upon fuch tedious Drudgeries in Needlework as were fit only for the Hilpa's and the Nilpa's that lived before the Flood. "Here's a Stir indeed with your Histories in Embroidery, your Groves with Shades of Silk and Streams of Mohair! I would have you to know, that I hope to kill a hundred Lovers before the best Housewife in " England can stitch out a Battle, and do not fear but to provide Boys and Girls much faster than your Disciples can embroider them. I love Birds and Beafts as well as you, but am content to fancy them when ' they are really made. What do you think of Gilt Leather for Furniture? There's your pretty Hangings for a Chamber; and what is more, our own "Country is the only Place in Europe where Work of that kind is tolerably done. Without minding your " musty Lessons, I am this Minute going to Paul's Church-' Yard to bespeak a Skreen and a Set of Hangings; and am resolved to encourage the Manusacture of my · Country.

Yours,

THE SURFACE DES

Nº 610 Friday, October 22.

Sic, cum transiérint mei Nullo cum strepitu dies, Plebeius moriar senex. Illi mors gravis incubat, Qui, notus nimis omnibus, Ignotus moritur sibi.

Seneca .

Thus, when my fleeting Days, at loft, Unbeeded, filently are past, Calmly I shall resign my Breath, In Life unknown, forgot in Death; While He, o'ertaken unprepar'd, Finds Death an Ewil to be fear'd, Who dies, to others too much known, A Stranger to himself alone.

I Have often wondered that the Jews should contrive such a worthless Greatness for the Deliverer whom they expected, as to dress him up in external Pomp and Pageantry, and represent him to their Imagination, as making Havock amongst his Creatures, and acted with the poor Ambition of a Casar or an Alexander. How much more illustrious doth he appear in his real Character, when considered as the Author of universal Benevolence among Men, as resining our Passions, exalting our Nature, giving us wast Ideas of Immortality, and teaching us a Contempt of that little showy Grandeur, wherein the Jews made the Glory of their Messiab to consist!

NOTHING (says Longinus) can be great, the Contempt of which is Great. The Possession of Wealth and Riches cannot give a Man a Title to Greatness, because it is looked upon as a Greatness of Mind, to contemn these Gifts of Fortune, and to be above the Desire of them. I have therefore been inclined to think, that there are greater Men who lie concealed among the Species, Species, than those who come out, and draw upon themfelves the Eyes and Admiration of Mankind. Virgil would never have been heard of, had not his Domestic Misfortunes driven him out of his Obscurity, and brought him to Rome.

IF we suppose that there are Spirits or Angels, who look into the Ways of Men, as it is highly probable there are, both from Reason and Revelation; how different are the Notions which they entertain of us, from those which we are apt to form of one another? Were they to give us in their Catalogue of such Worthies as are now living, how different would it be from that, which any of our own Species would draw up?

W E are dazzled with the Splendor of Titles, the Oftentation of Learning, the Noise of Victories: They, on the contrary, fee the Philosopher in the Cottage, who possesses his Soul in Patience and Thankfulness, under the Pressures of what little Minds call Poverty and Diffress. They do not look for great Men at the Head of Armies, or among the Pomps of a Court, but often find them out in Shades and Solitudes, in the private Walks and By-paths of Life. The Evening's Walk of a wife Man is more illustrious in their Sight, than the March of a General at the Head of a hundred thousand Men. A Contemplation of God's Works; a voluntary Act of Justice to our Detriment; a generous Concern for the Good of Mankind; Tears that are shed in Silence for the Misery of others; a private Defire or Resentment broken and subdued; in short, an unfeigned Exercise of Humility, or any other Virtue; are fuch Actions as are glorious in their Sight, and denominate Men great and reputable. The most famous among us are often looked upon with Pity, with Contempt, or with Indignation; while those who are most obscure among their own Species, are regarded with Love. with Approbation, and Esteem.

THE Moral of the present Speculation amounts to this, That we should not be led away by the Censures and Applauses of Men, but consider the Figure that every Person will make, at that Time when Wisdom shall be justistied of her Children; and nothing pass for Great or Illustrious, which is not an Ornament and Persection to human Nature.

THE Story of Gyges, the rich Lydian Monarch, is a memorable Instance to our present Purpose. The Oracle being asked by Gyges, who was the happiest Man, replied Aglaüs. Gyges, who expected to have heard himself named on this Occasion, was much surprised, and very curious to know who this Aglaüs should be. After much Enquiry he was found to be an obscure Country man, who employed all his Time in cultivating a Garden, and a few Acres of Land about his House.

COWLEY's agreeable Relation of this Story shall close this Day's Speculation.

Thus Aglaüs (a Man unknown to Men, But the Gods knew, and therefore lov'd him then) Thus liv'd obscurely then without a Name, Aglaus, now confign'd t' eternal Fame. For Gyges, the rich King, wicked and great, Presum'd at wife Apollo's Delphick Seat, Presum'd to ask, Oh thou, the whole World's Eye, See'st thou a Man that happier is than I? The God, who scorn'd to flatter Man, reply'd, Aglaus happier is. But Gyges cry'd, In a proud Rage, Who can that Aglaus be? We've heard as yet of no such King as he. And true it was, through the whole Earth around, No King of such a Name was to be found. Is some old Hero of that Name alive, Who his high Race does from the Gods derive? Is it some mighty Gen'ral, that has done Wonders in Fight, and God-like Honours won? Is it some Man of endless Wealth? said be: None, none of these; who can this Aglaus be? After long Search, and vain Enquiries paft, In an obscure Arcadian Vale at last, (Th' Arcadian Life has always shady been) Near Sopho's Town, (which he but once had seen) This Aglaus, who Monarchs Envy drew, Whose Happiness the Gods stood Witness to, This mighty Aglaus was lab'ring found, With his own Hands, in his own little Ground. So, gracious God, (if it may lawful be, Among those foolish Gods to mention thee)

So let me act, on such a private Stage, The last dull Scenes of my declining Age; After long Toils and Voyages in vain, This quiet Port let my tos'd Vessel gain; Of beav'nly Rest this Earnest to me lend, Let my Life fleep, and learn to lowe her End.

TO THE PERSON OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PERSON OF THE PERSON

Nº 611 Monday, October 25.

Perfide! sed duris genuit te cautibus horrens Caucasus, Hircanæque admorunt ubera tigres. Virg. Æn. 4. v. 366.

Perfidious Man! thy Parent was a Rock, And fierce Hyrcanian Tigers gave thee Suck.

A M willing to postpone every thing, to do any the least Service for the Deserving and Unfortunate. Accordingly I have caused the following Letter to be inferted in my Paper the Moment that it came to my Hands, without altering one Tittle in an Account which the Lady relates fo handsomly herself.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

I Flatter myself, you will not only pity, but, if possible, redress a Missortune myself and several others of my Sex lie under. I hope you will not be offended, nor think I mean by this to justify my own imprudent Conduct, or expect You should. No! I am sensible how severely, in some of your former Papers, you have reproved Persons guilty of the like Mismanagements. I was scarce Sixteen, ' and I may fay without Vanity, Handsom, when courted by a false perjured Man; who, upon Promise of ' Marriage, rendered me the most unhappy of Women. ' After he had deluded me from my Parents, who were People of very good Fashion, in less than three ' Months he left me. My Parents would not fee, nor ! hear from me; and had it not been for a Servant, who had lived in our Family, I must certainly have perished for want of Bread. However, it pleased Providence, in a very short time, to alter my miserable Condition. A Gentleman saw me, liked me, and married me. My Parents were reconciled; and I might be as happy in the Change of my Condition, as I was before miserable, but for some things. that you shall know, which are insupportable to ' me; and I am fure you have so much Honour and ' Compassion as to let those Persons know, in some of your Papers, how much they are in the wrong. I have been married near five Years, and do not know that in all that time I ever went abroad without my ' Husband's Leave and Approbation. I am obliged, through the Importunities of several of my Relations, to go abroad oftner than fuits my Temper. 'Then it is, I labour under insupportable Agonies. 'That Man, or rather Monster, haunts every Place I 'go to. Base Villain! By reason I will not admit his nauseous wicked Visits and Appointments, he frives, all the ways he can to ruin me. He left ' me destitute of Friend or Money, nor ever thought me worth enquiring after, till he unfortunately hap-' pened to see me in a Front-Box, sparkling with Jewels. Then his Passion returned. Then the Hypocrite pretended to be a Penitent. Then he practifed all those Arts that helped before to undo me. I am not to be deceived a fecond time by him. I hate and abhor his odious Passion; and as he plainly perceives it, either out of Spite or Diversion, he makes it his Bufiness to expose me. I never fail seeing him in all public Company, where he is always most industriously spiteful. He hath, in short, told all his Acquaintance of our unhappy Affair; they tell theirs; fo that it is no Secret among his Companions, which are numerous. They, to whom he tells it, think they have a Title to be very familiar. If they bow to me, and I out of good Manners return it, then I am pefter'd with Freedoms that are noways agreeable to myself or Company. If I turn my Eyes from them, or feem displeased, they sour supon it, and whisper the next Person; he is next;

'till I have at last the Eyes of the whole Company upon me. Nay, they report abominable Falshoods, under that mistaken Notion, She that will grant Fawours to one-Man, will to a bundred. I beg you will let those who are guilty, know, how ungenerous this way of Proceeding is. I am fure he will know himfelf the Person aimed at, and perhaps put a stop to the Insolence of others. Cursed is the Fate of unhappy Women! that Men may boast and glory in those things that we must think of with Shame and Horror! You have the Art of making such odious * Customs appear detestable. For my sake, and I am fure; for the fake of several others, who dare not own it, but like me, lie under the same Misfortunes, make it as infamous for a Man to boast of Favours, or expose our Sex, as it is to take the Lye or a Box on the Ear, and not refent it.

Your conftant Reader,

and Admirer,

LESBIA.

P. S. I am the more impatient under this Misfortune, having receiv'd fresh Provocation, last Wednesday, in the Abbey.

I entirely agree with the amiable and unfortunate LESBIA, that an Insult upon a Woman in her Circumstances, is as infamous in a Man, as a tame Behaviour when the Lye or a Buffet is given; which Truth I shall beg leave of her to illustrate by the following Obfervation.

IT is a Mark of Cowardise passive to sorbear refenting an Affront, the Resenting of which would lead a Man into Danger; it is no less a Sign of Cowardise to affront a Creature, that hath not Power to avenge itself. Whatever Name therefore this ungenerous Man may bestow on the helpless Lady he hath injur'd, I shall not scruple to give him in return for it, the Appellation of Coward. A Man, that can so far descend from his Dignity, as to strike a Lady, can never recover his Reputation with either Sex, because no Provocation is thought strong enough to justify such Treatment from the Powerful towards the Weak. In the Circumstances, in which poor LESBIA is situated, she can appeal to no Man what-soever to avenge an Insult, more grievous than a Blow. If she could open her Mouth, the base Man knows, that a Husband, a Brother, a generous Friend would die to fee her righted.

A generous Mind, however enrag'd against an Enemy, feels its Refentments fink and vanish away, when the Object of its wrath falls into its Power. An estranged Friend, filled with Jealousy and Discontent towards a Bosom Acquaintance, is apt to overflow with Tenderness and Remorfe, when a Creature that was once dear to him, undergoes any Misfortune. What Name then shall we give to his Ingratitude, (who forgetting the Favours he folicited with Eagerness, and receiv'd with Rapture) can infult the Miseries that he himself caused, and make Sport with the Pain to which he owes his greatest Pleasure? There is but one Being in the Creation whose Province it is to practise upon the Imbecillities of frail Creatures, and triumph in the Woes which his own Artifices brought about; and we well know, those who follow his Example, will receive his Reward.

LEAVING my fair Correspondent to the Direction of her own Wisdom and Modesty; and her Enemy, and his mean Accomplices, to the Compunction of their own Hearts; I shall conclude this Paper with a memorable Instance of Revenge, taken by a Spanish Lady upon a guilty Lover, which may serve to shew what violent Effects are wrought by the most tender Passion, when sour'd into Hatred; and may deter the Young and Unwary from unlawful Love. The Story, however Romantic it may appear, I have heard affirmed for a Truth.

NOT many Years ago an English Gentleman, who in a Rencounter by Night in the Streets of Madrid had the Misfortune to kill his Man, fled into a Church-Porch for Sanctuary. Leaning against the Door, he was surprised to find it open, and a glimmering Light in the Church. He had the Courage to advance towards the Light; but was terribly startled at the fight of a Woman in white who ascended from a Grave with a bloody Knife in her Hand. The Phantom marched up to him, and asked him what he did there. He told her the Truth, without Reserve, believing that he had met a Ghost: Upon which, she spoke to him in the following Manner. "Stranger, thou art in my Power: I am a Murderer as thou art. Know then, that I am a Nun of a Noble " Family. A base perjur'd Man undid me, and boasted " of it. I foon had him dispatched; but not content "with the Murder, I have brib'd the Sexton to let " me enter his Grave, and have now pluck'd out his " false Heart from his Body; and thus I use a Traitor's " Heart." At these Words she tore it in pieces, and trampled it under her Feet.

SHEET STEETS OF STEETS OF STEETS

Nº 612 Wednesday, October 27.

Murranum hic, atavos & avorum antiqua sonantem Nomina, per regesque actum genus omne Latinos, Præcipitem scopulo, atque ingentis turbine saxi Excutit, effunditque solo. ——— Virg. Æn. 12. v. 529.

Murranus, boasting of his Blood, that springs From a long Royal Race of Latian Kings, Is by the Trojan from his Chariot thrown, Crush'd with the weight of an unwieldy Stone.

DRYDEN.

I T is highly laudable to pay Respect to Men who are descended from worthy Ancestors, not only out of Gratitude to those who have done Good to Mankind, but as it is an Encouragement to others to follow their Example. But this is an Honour to be receiv'd, not demanded, by the Descendents of great Men; and they who are apt to remind us of their Ancestors, only put us upon making Comparisons to their own Disadvantage. There is some Pretence for boasting of Wit, Beauty, Beauty, Strength or Wealth, because the Communication of them may give Pleasure or Profit to others; but we can have no Merit, nor ought we to claim any Respect, because our Fathers acted well, whether we would or no.

THE following Letter ridicules the Folly I have mentioned, in a new, and, I think, not disagreeable Light.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

WERE the Genealogy of every Family referved, there would probably be no Man valued or de-' spis'd on Account of his Birth. There is scarce a Beggar in the Streets, who would not find himself lineally descended from some great Man; nor any one of the highest Title, who would not discover several base and indigent Persons among his Ancestors. It would be a e pleasant Entertainment to see one Pedigree of Men appear together, under the same Characters they bore when they acted their respective Parts among the Living. Suppose therefore a Gentleman, full of his illuftrious Family, should, in the same manner as Vingil makes Æneas look over his Descendents, see the whole Line of his Progenitors pass in a Review before his Eyes, with how many varying Passions would he behold Shepherds and Soldiers, Statesmen and Artificers, Princes and Beggars, walk in the Procession of five thousand Years! How would his Heart fink or flutter at the feveral Sports of Fortune in a Scene so di-" verified with Rags and Purple, Handicraft Tools and Sceptres, Enfigns of Dignity and Emblems of Difgrace; and how would his Fears and Apprehensions, his Transports and Mortifications, succeed one another, as the Line of his Genealogy appear'd bright or ob-

'IN most of the Pedigrees hung up in old Mansson'Houses, you are sure to find the first in the Catalogue a great Statesman, or a Soldier with an honourable Commission. The honest Artificer that begot him, and all his frugal Ancestors before him, are torn off from the Top of the Register; and you are not left to imagine, that the noble Founder of the Family ever had a Father. Were we to trace many boasted

Lines farther backwards, we should lose them in a Mob of Tradesmen, or a Croud of Rustics, without hope of seeing them emerge again: Not unlike the old Appian

Way, which after having run many Miles in Length,

· loses itself in a Bog.

I lately made a Visit to an old Country Gentleman, who is very far gone in this fort of Family Madness. I found him in his Study perusing an old Register of his Family, which he had just then discover'd, as it was branched out in the Form of a Tree, upon a Skin of Parchment. Having the Honour to have some of his Blood in my Veins, he permitted me to cast my Eye over the Boughs of this venerable Plant; and asked my Advice in the Reforming of some of the superstuous Branches.

Branches. WE passed slightly over three or four of our immediate Forefathers, whom we knew by Tradition. but were soon stopped by an Alderman of London, who, I perceived, made my Kinsman's Heart go pita pat. His Confusion increased when he found the * Alderman's Father to be a Grafier; but he recovered his Fright upon seeing Justice of the Quorum at the end of his Titles. Things went on pretty well, as we threw our Eyes occasionally over the Tree, when unfortunately he perceived a Merchant-Tailor perched on a Bough, who was faid greatly to have increased the Estate; he was just a going to cut him off, if he ' had not feen Gent. after the Name of his Son; who was recorded to have mortgaged one of the Manors his honest Father had purchased. A Weaver, who was burnt for his Religion in the Reign of Queen " Mary, was pruned away without Mercy; as was likewife a Yeoman, who died of a Fall from his own But great was our Triumph in one of the Blood who was beheaded for High-Treason: which nevertheless was not a little allay'd by another of our Ancestors who was hanged for stealing of Sheep. The Expectations of my good Coufin were wonderfully raifed by a ' Match into the Family of a Knight, but unfortunately for us, for this Branch proved barren: On the other ' hand Margery the Milk-maid being twined round a Bough, it flourished out into so many Shoots, and ' bent bent with so much Fruit, that the old Gentleman was quite out of Countenance. To comfort me, under this Difgrace, he fingled out a Branch ten times more fruitful than the other, which, he told me, he valued more than any in the Tree, and bad me be of good Comfort. This enormous Bough was a Graft out of a Welsh ! Heires, with so many Ap's upon it that it might have made a little Grove by itself. From the Trunk of the Pedigree, which was chiefly composed of Labourers and Shepherds, arose a huge Sprout of Farmers; this was branched out into Yeomen; and ended in a Sheriff of the County, who was Knighted for his good Service to the Crown, in bringing up an Address. Several of the Names that seemed to disparage the Family, being looked upon as Mistakes, were lopped off as rotten or withered; as, on the contrary, no small Number appearing without any Titles, my Coufin, to supply the Defects of the Manuscript, added Esq; at the End of each of them o where made as svad atserve

'THIS Tree so pruned, dressed, and cultivated was, within a few Days, transplanted into a large Sheet of Vellum and placed in the great Hall, where is attracts the Veneration of his Tenants every Sunday-Morning, while they wait till his Worship is ready to go to Church; wondering that a Man, who had for many Fathers before him, should not be made a Knight, Soundator with little Labour and great Oilentation.

or at least a Justice of the Peace. I have sell netweed

T Was mightly pleaded with your Speculation of the troly Gurious. Titlet and Honouts are the Reward of Visus : We therefore bugin'so be alivited with then : And the light stime are no boar tended with exterior Posepy at I cannot.

ACTURES ENTERINGED

Nº 613 Friday, October 29.

-Studiis florentem ignobilis ot?.

Virg. Georg. 4. v. 564.

Affecting Studies of less noisy Praise.

DRYDEN.

I is reckoned a Piece of Ill breeding for one Man to ingross the whole Talk to himself. For this Reason, since I keep three Visiting-Days in the Week, I am content now and then to let my Friends put in a Word. There are several Advantages hereby accruing both to my Readers and myself. As first, Young and modest Writers have an Opportunity of getting into Print: Again, The Town enjoys the Pleasure of Variety; and Posterity will see the Humour of the present Age, by the help of these little Lights into private and domestic Life. The Benefits I receive from thence, are such as these: I gain more time for future Speculations; pick up Hims which I improve for the public Good; give Advice; reduces Grievances; and, by leaving commodious Spaces between the several Letters that I print, surnish out a Speciator with little Labour and great Ostentation.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

I Was mightily pleased with your Speculation of Friday. Your Sentiments are Noble, and the whole worked up in such a manner, as cannot but strike upon every Reader. But give me leave to make this Remark: That while you write so pathetically on Contentment, and a retired Life, you sooth the Passion of Melancholy, and depress the Mind from Actions truly Glorious. Titles and Honours are the Reward of Virtue: We therefore ought to be affected with them: And tho' light Minds are too much pussed up with exterior Pomp, yet I cannot see why it is not as truly Philosophical, to admire the glowing Ruby, or the sparking Green of an Emerald, as the fainter and less permanent Beauties of a Rose or a Myrtle. If there are Men of extraordinary Capacities who lie conceal'd from the World, I should impute it to them as a Blot in their Character, did not I believe it owing to the Meanness of their Fortune rather than of their Spirit.

**Convley**, who tells the Story of Aglain with so much Pleasure, was no Stranger to Courts, nor insensible of Praise.

What shall I do to be for ever known,
And make the Age to come my own?

was the Refult of a laudable Ambition. It was not till efter frequent Disappointments, that he termed himself the Melancholy Cowley; and he praised Solitude, when he despair'd of shining in a Court. The Soul of a Man is an Active Principle. He therefore, who withdraws from the Scene before he has play'd his Part, ought to be histed off the Stage, and cannot be deemed Virtuous. because he refuses to answer his End. I must own I am fired with an honest Ambition to imitate every illustrious Example. The Battles of Blenbeim and Ramillies have more than once made me wish myself a Soldier. And when I have feen those Actions so nobly celebrated by our Poets, I have secretly aspir'd to be one of that diffinguished Class. But in vain I wish, in vain I pant with the Delire of Action. I am chained down in Obfeurity, and the only Pleasure I can take is in feeing fo many brighter Genius's join their friendly Lights, to add to the Splendor of the Throne. Farewel then, dear Spec, and believe me to be with great Emulation, and no Envy.

Your Professed Admirer,

Will Hopeles

the state of the the state of the state of the

and the state of t

s. Lares and the color than the state there as traly Philosophical, to admire the slowing Roby SIR, Middle-Temple, October 26, 1714. HO' you have formerly made Eloquence the Subject of one or more of your Papers, I do not remember that you ever confidered it as possessed by a Set of People, who are fo far from making Quintilian's Rules their Practice, that, I dare fay for them, they never heard of such an Author, and yet are no * less Masters of it than Tully or Demostheres among the Ancients, or whom you please among the Moderns. The Persons I am speaking of are our common Beggars about this Town; and that what I say is true, I appeal to any Man who has a Heart one Degree fofter than a Stone. As for my part, who don't pretend to more Humanity than my Neighbours, I have oftentimes gone from my Champers with Money in my Pocket, and returned to them not only Penyless, but destitute of a Farthing, without beflowing of it any other way than on these seeming Dijects of Pity. In short, I have seen more Elo-' quence in a Look from one of those despicable Creatures, than in the Eye of the fairest She I ever faw, ' yet no one a greater Admirer of that Sex than myfelf. What I have to defire of you is, to lay down fome Directions in order to guard against these powerful Orators, or else I know nothing to the contrary but I must myself be forced to leave the Profession of the Law, and endeavour to get the Qualifications ne-" cessary to that more profitable one of Begging. But in which foever of these two Capacities I shine, I ' shall always desire to be your constant Reader, and ever will be

Your most humble Servant,

J. B.

SIR.

PON Reading a Speciator last Week, where Mrs. Fanny Fickle submitted the Choice of a Lover for Life to your decisive Determination, and imagining I might claim the Favour of your Advice in an Affair of the like, but much more difficult Nature, ture. I called for Pen and Ink, in order to draw the · Characters of Seven Humble Servants, whom I have equally encouraged for some time. But alas! while I was reflecting on the agreeable Subject, and contriving an advantageous Description of the dear Person I was most inclined to favour, I happened to look into my Glass. The fight of the Small-Pox, out of which · I am just recovered, tormented me at once with the loss of my captivating Arts and my Captives. The Confusion I was in, on this unhappy, unseasonable Discovery, is inexpressible. Believe me, Sir, I was so taken up with the Thoughts of your fair Correspondent's Case, and so intent on my own Design, that I fancied myself as Triumphant in my Conquests as ever.

NOW, Sir, finding I was incapacitated to amuse myself on that pleasing Subject, I resolved to apply myself to you, or your Casuistical Agent, for Advice in my present Circumstances. I am sensible the Tincture of my Skin, and the Regularity of my Features. which the Malice of my late Illness has altered, are irrecoverable; yet don't despair, but that Loss, by your Affistance, may in some measure be reparable, if you'll please to propose a way for the Recovery of one only of my Fugitives.

ONE of them is in a more particular manner bebolden to me than the rest; he for some private Reasons being desirous to be a Lover incognito, always addresfed me with Billet-Doux, which I was so careful of in 'my Sickness, that I secured the Key of my Love-Maga-' zine under my Head, and hearing a Noise of opening a Lock in my Chamber, endangered my Life by getting out of Bed, to prevent, if it had been attempted, the Discovery of that Amour.

'I have formerly made use of all those Artifices. which our Sex daily practifes over yours, to draw, as it were undefignedly, the Eyes of a whole Congregation to my Pew; I have taken a Pride in the number of · Admirers at my Afternoon Levée; but am now quite another Creature. I think, could I regain the attractive Influence I once had, if I had a Legion of Suitors, I should never be ambitious of Entertaining more than one. I have almost contracted an Antipathy to the trisling Discourses of impertinent Lavers, though I must needs own, I have thought it very odd of late, to hear Gentlemen, instead of their usual Complacencies, fall into Disputes before me of Politicks, or elso weary me with the tedious Repetition of how thankful I ought to be, and fatisfied with my Recovery out of so dangerous a Distemper: This, though I am very sensible of the Blessing, yet I cannot but dislike, because such Advice from them rather seems to Insult than Comfort me, and reminds me too much of what I was; which melancholy Consideration I cannot yet perfectly surmount, but hope your Sentiments on this Head will make it supportable.

" more

TO shew you what a Value I have for your Dictates, these are to certify the Persons concern'd, that unless one of them returns to his Colours, (if I may so call them now) before the Winter is over, I'll voluntarily confine myself to a Retirement, where I'll punish them all with my Needle. I'll be reveng'd on them by deciphering them on a Carpet, humbly begging Admittance, myself scornfully resusing it. If you disapprove of this, as savouring too much of Malice, be pleased to acquaint me with a Draught you like better,

' and it shall be faithfully performed

By the Unfortunate

Monimia.

Monday,

Philad summeral waters

STEEN CHECKER CONTRACTION OF THE PROPERTY OF T

Nº 614 Monday, November 1.

Si mihi non animo fixum immotumque sederet, Ne cui me winclo wellem sociare jugali, Postquam primus amor deceptam morte sessellit; Si non pertæsum thalami, tædæque suisset; Huie uni sorsan perui succumbere culpæ.

Virg. An. 4. v. 15.

Were Inot refolv'd against the Yoka
Of hapless Marriage; never to be curs d
With second Love, so fatal was the first;
To this one Error I might yield again.

DAYDEN.

HE following Account hath been transmitted to me by the Love-Casuis.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

HAVING, in some former Papers taken care of the two States of Virginity and Marriage, and being willing that all People should be served in their Turn, I this Day drew out my Drawer of Widows, where I met with several Cases, to each whereof I have returned satisfactory Answers by the Post. The Cases are as follow:

of Marriage to Philander, made during her Husband's · Life?

2. WHETHER Sempronia, having faithfully given a Promise to two several Persons during the last Sickness of her Husband, is not thereby left at Liberty to choose which of them she pleases, or to reject them both for the fake of a new Laver?

CLEORA asks me, Whether she be obliged to continue single, according to a Vow made to her Husband at the Time of his presenting her with a Diamond K4

Necklace; she being informed by a very pretty young Fellow of a good Conscience, that such Vows are in their Nature finful?

'ANOTHER enquires, Whether she hath not the Right of Widowhood, to dispose of herself to a Gentleman of great Merit, who presses very hard; her Husband being irrecoverably gone in a Consumption?

' AN unreasonable Creature hath the Considence to ' ask, Whether it be proper for her to marry a Man who is younger than her eldeft Son?

' A scrupulous well-spoken Matron, who gives me a great many good Words, only doubts whether the is onot obliged in Conscience to shut up her two marriageable Daughters, till fuch time as she hath comfortably disposed of herfelf?

'SOPHRONIA, who feems by her Phrase and Spelling to be a Person of Condition, sets forth, That whereas she hath a great Estate, and is but a Woman, the defires to be informed, whether the would not do prudently to marry Camillus, a very idle tall young Fellow, who hath no Fortune of his own, and confequently hath nothing else to do but to manage hers.

BEFORE I speak of Widows, I cannot but observe one thing, which I do not know how to account for; A Widow is always more fought after, than an old Maid of the same Age. It is common enough among ordinary People, for a stale Virgin to set up a Shop in a Place where the is not known; where the large Thumb-Ring, supposed to be given her by her Husband, quickly recommends her to some wealthy Neighbour, who takes a Liking to the jolly Widow, that would have overlooked the venerable Spinfter.

THE Truth of it is, if we look into this Set of Women, we find, according to the different Characters or Circumstances wherein they are left, that Widows may be divided into those who raise Love, and those who raise Compassion.

BU I not to ramble from this Subject, there are two Things in which consists chiefly the Glory of a Widow; The Love of her deceased Husband, and the Care of her Children: To which may be added a third arising out of the former, Such a prudent Conduct as may do Honour to both.

A Widow possessed of all these three Qualities, makes not only a virtuous but a sublime Character.

THERE is something so great and so generous in this State of Life, when it is accompanied with all its Virtues, that it is the Subject of one of the finest among our modern Tragedies in the Person of Andromache; and had met with an universal and deserved Applause, when introduced upon our English Stage by Mr. Philips.

THE most memorable Widow in History is Queen Artemisia, who not only erected the famous Mausoleum, but drank up the Ashes of her dead Lord; thereby inclosing them in a nobler Monument than that which she had built, though deservedly esteemed one of the Wonders.

of Architecture.

THIS last Lady seems to have had a better Title to a Second Husband than any I have read of, since not one Dust of her First was remaining. Our modern Heroines might think a Husband a very bitter Draught, and would have good Reason to complain, if they might not accept of a second Partner, till they had taken such a troublesom Method of losing the Memory of the first.

I shall add to these illustrious Examples out of ancient. Story, a remarkable Instance of the Delicacy of our Ancestors in relation to the State of Widowhood, as I find it recorded in Cowell's Interpreter. At East and West-Enborne, in the County of Berks, if a Customary Tenant die, the Widow shall have what the Law calls her Free-Bench in all his Copy-hold Lands, dum sola & casta suerit; that is, while she lives single and chaste; but if she commit Incontinency, she forfeits her Estate; Yet if she will come into the Court riding backward upon a Black Ram, with his Tail in her Hand, and say the Words following, the Steward is bound by the Custom to re-admit her to her Free-Bench.

Here I'am; Riding upon a Black Ram; Like a Whore as I'am; And for my Crincum Crancum,
Have lost my Bincum Bancum;
And, for my Tail's Game,
Have done this worldly Shame;
Therefore, I pray you, Mr. Steward, let, me have my Land again.

THE like Custom there is in the Manor of Torre in Devonsbire, and other Parts of the West.

IT is not impossible but I may in a little time present you with a Register of Berksbire. Ladies, and other Western Dames, who rode publickly upon this occasion; and I hope the Town will be entertained with a Cavalgade of Widows.

WHERE SERVICE STREET, WHERE SHEW

Nº 613 Wednesday, November 3.

—— Qui Deorum

Muneribus sapienter uti,

Duramque callet pauperiem pati,

Pejusque letho flagitium timet:

Non ille pro caris amicis

Aut patriâ simidus perire.

Hor. Od. 9. 1. 4. v. 47.

Who spend their Treasure freely, as 'twas giv'n
By the large Bounty of indulgent Heav'n;
Who in a fix'd unalterable State
Smile at the doubtful tide of Fate,
And scorn alike her Friendship and her Hate:
Who Poison less than Falshood fear,
Loth to purchase Life so dear;
But kindly for their Friend embrace cold Death,
And seal their Country's Love with their departing Breath.

STEPHEY.

If must be owned that Fear is a very powerful Passion, fince it is esteemed one of the greatest of Virtues to subdue it. It being implanted in us for our Preservation, it is no wonder that it sticks close to us, as long as we have any thing we are willing to preserve. But as Life and all its Enjoyments, would be scarce worth the keeping, if we were under a perpetual Dread of losing them; it is the Business of Religion and Philosophy to free us from all unnecessary Anxieties, and direct our Fear to its proper Object.

IF we consider the Painfulness of this Passion, and the violent Effects it produces, we shall see how dangerous it is to give way to it upon slight Occasions. Some have snightned themselves into Madness, others have given up their Lives to these Apprehensions. The Story of a Man who grew gray in the space of one Night's Anxiety is very famous.

O! Nox, quam longa es, que facis una Senem!

A tedious Night indeed, that makes a young Man old.

T. H.E.S.E. Apprehensions, is they proceed from a Consciousness of Guilt, are the sad Warnings of Reason; and may excite our Pity, but admit of no Remedy. When the Hand of the Almighty is visibly listed against the Impious, the Heart of mortal Man cannot withstand him. We have this Passion sublimaly represented in the Punishment of the Egyptians, tormented with the Plague of Darkness, in the Apocrypbal Book of Wisdom ascribed to Solomon.

FOR when unrighteous Men thought to oppress the holy Nation; they being shut up in their Houses, the Prisoners of Darkness, and setter'd with the Bonds of a long Night, lay there exiled from the eternal Providence. For while they supposed to lie hid in their

- fecret Sins, they were scattered under a dark Veil of Forgetfulness, being horribly astonished and troubled with trange Apparitions—— For Wickedness, condemned
- by her own Witness, is very timorous, and being oppressed with Conscience, always forecasteth grievous
- things. For Fear is nothing else but a betraying of the Succours which Reason offereth For the whole World shineth with clear Light, and none were hindered
- in their Labour. Over them only was spread a heavy
- Night, an Image of that Darkness which should afterwards receive them; but yet were they unto themfelves more grievous than the Darkness.

TO Fear, so justly grounded, no Remedy can be proposed; but a Man (who hath no great Guilt hanging upon his Mind, who walks in the plain Path of Justice and Integrity, and yet either by natural Complexion, or confirmed Prejudices, or neglect of ferious Reflexion, fuffers himself to be moved by this abject and unmanly Passion) would do well to consider, That there is nothing which deserves his Fear, but that beneficent Being who is his Friend, his Protector, his Father. Were this one Thought strongly fixed in the Mind, what Calamity would be dreadful? What Load can Infamy lay upon us when we are fure of the Approbation of him who will repay the Difgrace of a Moment with the Glory of Eternity? What Sharpness is there in Pain and Difeases, when they only hasten us on to Pleasures that will never fade? What Sting is in Death when we are affured that it is only the Beginning of Life? A Man who lives fo, as not to fear to die, is inconfistent with himself, if he delivers himself up to any incidental Anxiety.

THE Intrepidity of a just good Man is so nobly set forth by Horace, that it cannot be too often repeated.

The Man resolv'd and steady to his Trust; Instexible to Ill, and obstinately just, May the rude Rabble's Insolence despise, Their senseles Clamours and tumultuous Cries; The Tyrant's Fierceness he beguiles, And the stern Brow, and the harsh Voice desies, And with superior Greatness smiles.

Not the rough Whirlwind, that deforms
Adria's black Gulf, and vexes it with Storms,
The Stubborn Virtue of his Soul can move;
Not the red Arm of angry Jove,
That flings the Thunder from the Sky,
And gives it Rage to roar, and Strength to fly.

Should the whole Frame of Nature round him break, In Ruin and Confusion hurl'd, He, unconcern'd, would hear the mighty Crack, And stand secure amidst a falling World. THE Vanity of Feat may be yet farther illustrated, if we reflect.

First, WHAT we fear may not come to pass. No. human Scheme can be so accurately projected, but some little Circumstance intervening may spoil it. He who directs the Heart of Man at his Pleasure, and understands the Thoughts long before, may by ten thousand Accidents, or an immediate Change in the Inclinations of Men, disconcert the most subtle Project, and turn it to the Benefit of his own Servants.

IN the next Place we should consider, though the Evil we imagine should come to pass, it may be much more supportable than it appeared to be. As there is no prosperous State of Life without its Calamities, so there is no Advertity without its Benefits. Ask the Great and Powerful, if they do not feel the Pangs of Envy and Ambition. Enquire of the Poor and Needy, if they have not tafted the Sweets of Quiet and Contentment. Even. under the Pains of Body, the Infidelity of Friends, or. the Misconstructions put upon our laudable Actions, our Minds (when for some time accustomed to these Pressures) are sensible of secret Flowings of Comfort, the present Reward of a pious Refignation. The Evils of this Life. appear like Rocks and Precipices, rugged and barren at a distance, but at our nearer approach, we find little fruitful Spots, and refreshing Springs, mixed with the Harshness and Deformities of Nature.

IN the last Place, we may comfort ourselves with this Consideration; that, as the Thing seared may not reach us, so we may not reach what we sear. Our Lives may not extend to that dreadful Point which we have in View. He who knows all our Failings, and will not suffer us to be tempted beyond our Strength, is often pleased in his tender Severity, to separate the Soul from its Body and Miseries together.

IF we look forward to him for Help, we shall never be in Danger of falling down those Precipices which our Imagination is apt to create. Like those who walk upon a Line, if we keep our Eye fixed upon one Point, we may step forward securely; whereas an imprudent or cowardly Glance on either Side will infallibly destroy us.

THE SERVENCE OF THE SERVENCE O

Nº 616 Friday, November 5.

Qui bellus home eft, Cotta, pufillus home eft.
Martial. Epig. 10: 1. r.

A pretty Fellow is but balf a Man.

ICERO hath observed, that a Jest is never uttered with a better Grace, than when it is accompanied with a ferious Countenance, When a pleasant Thought plays in the Features, before it discovers itself in Words, it raises too great an Expectation, and loses the Advantage of giving Surprise. Wit and Humour are no less poorly recommended by a Levity of Phrase, and that kind of Language which may be distinguished by the Name of Cant. Ridicule is never more ftrong, than when it is concealed in Gravity. True Humour lies in the Thought, and arises from the Representation of Images in odd Circumstances, and uncommon Lights. A pleasant Thought strikes us by the Force of its natural Beauty; and the Mirth of it is generally rather palled, than heighten'd by that ridiculous Phraseology, which is so much in Fashion among the Pretenders to Humour and Pleasantry. This Tribe of Men are like our Mountebanks; they make a Man a Wit, by putting him in a fantastic Habit.

OUR little Burlesque Authors, who are the Delight of ordinary Readers, generally abound in these pert Phrases, which have in them more Vivacity than Wit.

I lately faw an Instance of this kind of Writing, which gave me so lively an Idea of it, that I could not sorbear begging a Copy of the Letter from the Gentleman who shew'd it to me. It is written by a Country Wit, upon the Occasion of the Rejoicings on the Day of the King's Coronation.

Dear Jack,

Paft two o'Clock and a frosty Morning.

Have just lest the Right Worshipful and his Myrmidons about a Sneaker of Five Gallons. The whole Magistracy was pretty well disguised before I gave 'em the Slip. Our Friend the Alderman was half Seas over before the Bonfire was out. We had with us the Attorney, and two or three other bright Fellows. The Doc-

- tor plays least in fight. 'AT Nine o' Clock in the Evening we fet Fire to the Whore of Babylon. The Devil acted his Part to a Miracle. He has made his Fortune by it. We equip'd the young Dog with a Tester a piece. Hopest old Brown of England was very drunk, and showed his Loyalty to the Tune of a hundred Rockets. The Mob drank the King's Health on their Marrowbones, in Mother Day's Double. They whipped us half a dozen Hogheads. Poor Tom Tyler had like to have been demolished with the End of a Sky-Rocket, that fell upon the Bridge of his Nose as he was drinking the King's Health, and spoiled his Tip. The Mob were very loyal till about Midnight, when they grew a little mutinous for more Liquor. They had like to have dumfounded the Justice; but his Clerk came in to his Affistance, and took them all down in Black and White.
- · WHEN I had been huzza'd out of my Seven Senfes. I made a Visit to the Women, who were guzzling very comfortably. Mrs. Mayores clipped the King's Eng-· lifb. Clack was the Word.

' I forgot to tell thee, that every one of the Posse had his Hat cocked with a Diffich: The Senators fent us down a Cargo of Ribbon and Metre for the · Occasion.

SIR Richard, to flew his Zeal for the Protestant · Religion, is at the Expence of a Tar-Barrel and a Ball,

I peeped into the Knight's great Hall, and faw a very pretty Bevy of Spinsters. My dear Relict was amongst them, and ambled in a Country Dance as notably as the best of 'em.

The SPECTATOR.

Nº 617

232

MAY all his Majesty's liege Subjects love him as well as his good People of this his ancient Borough.
Adieu.

Nº 617 Monday, November 8.

Torva Mimalioneis implérunt cornua bombis, Et raptum vitulo caput ablatura superbo Bassaris, & lyncem Mænas stexura corymbis, Evion ingeminat: reparabilis adsonat Echo.

Their crooked Horns the Mimallonian Crew With blass inspir'd; and Bassaris, who slew The scornful Calf, with Sword advanc'd on high, Made from his Neck his haughty Head to sty.

Made from his Neck his haughty Head to fly.

And Mænas, when, with Ivy-bridles bound,

She led the spotted Lynx, then Evion rung around,

Evion from Woods and Floods repairing Echoes sound.

DRYDEN'.

THERE are two Extremes in the Stile of Humour, one of which confifts in the Use of that little pert Phraseology which I took notice of in my last Paper; the other in the Affectation of strained, and pompous Expressions, setched from the learned Languages. The first savours too much of the Town; the other of the College.

AS nothing illustrates better than Example, I shall here present my Reader with a Letter of Pedantic Humour, which was written by a young Gentleman of the University to his Friend, on the same Occasion, and from the same Place, as the lively Epistle published in my last Spectator.

Dear Chum,

IT is now the third Watch of the Night, the greatest Part of which I have spent round a capacious Bowl of China, filled with the choicest Products of both the Indies. I was placed at a quadrangular. Table, diametrically opposite to the Mace bearer. The Visage of that venerable Herald was, according to Custom, most gloriously illuminated on this joyful.

Occasion. The Mayor and Aldermen, those Pillars of our Constitution, began to totter; and if any one at the Board could have fo far articulated, as to have demanded intelligibly a Reinforcement of Liquor, the whole Affembly had been by this time extended under the Table.

'THE Celebration of this Night's Solemnity was opened by the obstreperous Joy of Drummers, who with their Parchment Thunder, gave a Signal for the Appearance of the Mob under their several Classes and Denominations. They were quickly joined by the melodious Clank of Marrow-bone and Cleaver, while a Chorus of Bells filled up the Confort. A Pyramid of Stack-Faggots cheared the Hearts of the Populace with the Promise of a Blaze: The Guns had no sooner uttered the Prologue, but the Heavens were brightned with artificial Meteors and Stars of our own making; and all the High-street lighted up from one End to another, with a Galaxy of Candles. We collected a Largess for the Multitude who tippled Elemosynary till they grew exceeding Vociferous. was a Paste board Pontiff, with a little swarthy Dæmon at his Elbow, who, by his diabolical Whispers and Infinuations, tempted his Holiness into the Fire, and then left him to shift for himself. The Mobile were very farcastic with their Clubs, and gave the old Gentleman several Thumps upon his triple Headpiece. Tom Tyler's Phiz is something damaged by the Fall of a Rocket, which hath almost spoiled the Gnomon of his Countenance. The Mirth of the Commons grew ' so very outrageous, that it found Work for our Friend of the Quorum, who by the help of his Amanuensis, took down all their Names and their Crimes, with a Defign to produce his Manuscript at the next Quarter-Sessions, &c, &c, &c.

I shall subjoin to the foregoing Piece of a Letter, the following Copy of Verses translated from an Iralian lian Poet, who was the Cleveland of his Age, and had Multitudes of Admirers. The Subject is an Accident that happened under the Reign of Pope Leo, when a Pirework, that had been prepared upon the Castle of St. Angelo, began to play before its time, being kindled by a Flash of Lightning. The Author hath written a Poem in the same kind of Stile, as that I have already exemplified in Prose. Every Line in it is a Riddle, and the Reader must be forced to consider it twice or thrice, before he will know that the Cynich's Tenement is a Tub, and Bacchus his Cast-Coat a Hegspead, &c.

'Twas Night, and Heav'n, a Cyclops all the Day,
An Argus now did countless Eyes display;
In ev'ry Window Rome her Joy declares,
All bright, and studded with terrestrial Stars,
A blazing Chain of Lights her Reass entwines,
And round har Neck the mingled Lustre shines;
The Cynick's rolling Tenement conspires,
With Bacchus his Cast-coat, to seed the Fires.

The Pile, still big with undiscover'd Shows, The Tuscan Pile did last its Freight disclose, Where the proud Tops of Rome's new Ætna rise, Whence Giants sally, and invade the Skies.

Whilst now the Multitude expect the Time, And their tir'd Eyes the losty Mountain climb, A thousand Iron Mouths their Voices try, And thunder out a dreadful Harmony; In treble Notes the small Artill'ry plays, The deep-mouth'd Cannon bellows in the Bass; The lab'ring Pile now beaves, and having giv'n Proofs of its Travail, sighs in Flames to Heav'n,

The Clouds invelop'd Heav'n from Human Sight, Quench'd ev'ry Star, and put out ev'ry Light; Now real Thunder grumbles in the Skies, And in disdainful Murmurs Rome desses; Non doth its answer'd Challenge Rome decline; But whilst both Parties in full Consort join,

While

While Heav'n and Earth in Rival Peals resound, The doubtful Cracks the Heaver's Sense consound: Whether the Claps of Thunderbolts they bear, Or else the Burst of Cannon wounds their Ear & Whether Clouds raged by struggling Metals rent, Or struggling Clouds in Roman Metals pent. But O, my Muse, the whole Adventure tall, As ev'ry Accident in order felt.

Tall Groves of Trees the Hadrian Tow'r Surround, Fichitious Trees with Paper Garlands crown'd. These knew no Spring, but when their Bodies sprout In Fire, and shoot their gilded Blossoms out; When blazing Leaves appear above their Head, And into branching Flames their Bodies spread. Whilst real Thunder splits the Firmament, And Hearin's rubole Roof in one wast Clest is news, The three-fork'd Tongue amidst the Rupture lolle, Then drops, and on the airy Turnet falls. The Trees now kindle, and the Garland burns, And thousand Thunderbolts for one returns: Brigades of burning Aughers upwards fly, Bright Spears and Spining Spear-men mount on high, Flash in the Clouds, and glitter in the Sky. A Seven fold Shield of Spheres doth Heav's defend, And back again the blunted Weapons send; Unwillingly they fall, and dropping down, Pour out their Souls, their Sulph rous Souls, and grome.

With Joy, great Sir, we wiew'd this pompous Show, While Heav'n, that sat Spectator still 'till now, Itself turn'd Actor, proud to pleasure you; And so 'tis sit, when Leo's Fires appear, That Heav'n itself should turn an Engineer; That Heav'n itself should all its Wonders show, And Orbs above consent with Orbs below.

92.00

Wednesday

MAN BANKER TO THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF

Nº 618 · Wednesday, November 10.

—— Neque enim concludere versum

Dixeris esse satis: neque siquis scribat, uti nos,

Sermoni propiora, putes bunc esse Poëtam.

Hor. Sat. 4. l. 1. v. 40.

'Tis not enough the measur'd Feet to close; Nor will you give a Poet's Name to those, Whose humble Verse, like mine, approaches Prose.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

70 U having, in your two last Spectators, given the Town a couple of Remarkable Letters in very different Stiles: I take this Opportunity to offer to you some Remarks upon the Epistolary way of writing in Verse. This is a Species of Poetry by itself; and has not so much as been hinted at in any of the Arts of Poetry, that have ever fallen into my Hands: Neither has it in any Age, or in any Nation, been fo much cultivated, as the other feveral 'Kinds of Poefy. A Man of Genius may, if he pleases, write Letters in Verse upon all manner of Subjects, that are capable of being embellished with Wit and Language, and may render them new and agreeable by giving the proper Turn to them. But in speaking, at present, of Epistolary Poetry, I would be understood to mean only such Writings in this Kind, as have been in Use among the Ancients, and have been copied from them by some Moderns. These may be " reduced into two Classes: In the one I shall range Love Letters, Letters of Friendship, and Letters upon · mournful Occasions: In the other I shall place such Epistles in Verse, as may properly be called Familiar, Critical, and Moral; to which may be added Letters of Mirth and Humour. Ovid for the first, and Horace for the latter, are the best Originals we · have left.

HE that is ambitious of succeeding in the Ovidian way, should first examine his Heart well, and feel whether his Passions (especially those of the gentler Kind) play easy, since it is not his Wit, but the Delicacy and Tenderness of his Sentiments, that will affect his Readers. His Versification likewise should be soft, and all his Numbers flowing and querulous.

THE Qualifications requifite for writing Epiftles, after the Model given us by Horace, are of a quite different Nature. He that would excel in this kind must have a good Fund of strong Masculine Sense:
To this there must be joined a thorough Knowledge of Mankind, together with an Infight into the Buliness, and the prevailing Humours of the Age. Our Author must have his Mind well seasoned with the finest Precepts of Morality, and be filled with nice Reflexions upon the bright and the dark fides of human Life: He must be a Master of refined Rallery, and understand the Delicacies, as well as the Absurdities of Conversation. He must have a lively Turn of Wit, with an easy and concise manner of Expression: Every thing he says, must be in a free and disengaged manner. He must be guilty of nothing that betrays the Air of a Recluse, but appear a Man of the World throughout. His Illustrations, his Comparisons, and the greatest part of his Images must be drawn from common Life. Strokes of Satire and "Criticism, as well as Panegyrick, judiciously thrown ' in (and as it were by the by) give a wonderful Life and Ornament to Compositions of this kind. But let our Poet, while he writes Epistles, though never ' fo familiar, still remember that he writes in Verse, and must for that reason have a more than ordinary care not to fall into Profe, and a vulgar Diction, excepting where the Nature and Humour of the Thing does necessarily require it. In this Point Horace hath been thought by some Criticks to be sometimes careless, as well as too negligent of his Verfification; of which he feems to have been fenfible himself.

ALL I have to add is, that both these Manners of Writing may be made as entertaining, in their Way, one they other Species of Poetry, if undertaken by Perfons duly qualify d; and the latter fort may be mamaged to as to become in a peculiar manner Infractive. I am, Gt.

I shall add an Observation or two to the Remarks of my ingenious Correspondent, and, in the first places take notice, that Subjects of the most sublime Nature are often treated in the Epistolary way with Advantages as in the famous Epistle of Horace to Augustus. The Poet surprises us with his Pomp, and seems rather betrayed into his Subject, than to have aimed at it by defign. He appears, like the Visit of a King incognito, with a mixture of Familiarity and Grandeur. In Works of this kind, when the Dignity of the Subject hurries the Poet into Descriptions and Sentiments, seemingly impremeditated, by a fort of Inspiration; it is usual for him to recollect himself, and fall back gracefully into the natural Stile of a Letter.

I might here mention an Epistolary Poem, just published by Mr. Enfden on the King's Accession to the Throne; wherein, amongst many other noble and beautiful Strokes of Poetry, his Reader may see this Rule very happily observed.

es discussiones de la

Nº 619 Friday, November 12.

Exerce imperia, & ramos compeste fluentes. Virg. Georg. 2. v. 369.

And lop the too luxuriant Boughs away.

Have often thought, that if the feveral Letters, which are written to me under the Character of Spectator, and which I have not made use of, were published in a Volume, they would not be an unentertaining Collection. The Variety of the Subjects, Stiles, Stiles, Sentiments, and Informations, which are transmitted to me, would lead a very curious, or very idle Reader, infentibly along, through a great many Pages. I know fome Authors, who would pick up a Secret History out of such Materials, and make a Bookfeller an Alderman by the Copy. I shall therefore carefully preferve the Original Papers in a Room fet apart for that Purpose, to the end that they may be of Service to Posterity; but shall at present content myself with owning the Receipt of feveral Letters, lately come to my Hands, the Authors whereof are impatient for an Answer.

CLARISSA, whose Letter is dated from Cornbill, defires to be eased in some Scraples relating to the Skill of Altrologers. Referred to the Dumb Man for an Answer.

F. C. who proposes a Love-Case, as he calls it, to the Love-Casuist, is hereby defired to speak of it to the Minister of the Parish; it being a Case of Conscience.

THE poor young Lady, whose Letter is dated Offer ber 26, who complains of a harsh Guardian, and an unkind Brother, can only have my good Wilhes, unless the pleases to be more particular.

THE Petition of a certain Gentleman, whose Name I have forgot, famous for renewing the Curls of decayed Periwigs, is referred to the Cenfor of small Wares.

THE Remonstrance of T. C. against the Profunction of the Sabbath by Barbers, Shoe-cleaners, &c. had better be offer'd to the Society of Reformers.

A learned and laborious Treatife upon the Art of Fencing, returned to the Author.

TO the Gentleman of Oxford, who defires me to infert a Copy of Latin Verses, which were denied a Place in the University Book. Answer. Nonum prematur in annum.

TO my learned Correspondent who writes against Masters Gowns, and Poke Sleeves, with a Word in Defence of large Scarves. Answer. I resolve not to raise Animosities among the Glergy.

TO the Lady who writes with Rage against one of her own Sex, upon the Account of Party Warmth.

Answer.

Answer. Is not the Lady she writes against reckoned Handsom?

I desire Tom Truelove, (who sends me a Sonnet upon his Mistress, with a desire to print it immediately) to consider, that it is long since I was in Love.

I shall answer a very profound Letter from my old Friend the Upholsterer, who is still inquisitive whether the King of Sweden be living or dead, by whispering him in the Ear, That I believe be is alive.

LET Mr. Dapperwit consider, What is that long Story of the Cuckoldom to me?

AT the earnest Desire of Monimia's Lover, who declares himself very penitent, he is recorded in my Paper by the Name of The Faithful Castalio.

THE Petition of Charles Cockfure, which the Petitioner stiles very reasonable - Rejected.

THE Memorial of Philander, which he desires may be dispatched out of Hand, Postponed.

I defire S. R. not to repeat the Expression under the Sun fo often in his next Letter.

THE Letter of P. S. who defires either to have it printed entire, or committed to the Flames. Not to be printed entire.

STACKER OF STACKES OF SELECTION OF SELECTION

Nº 620 Monday, November 15.

Hic Vir, hic est, tibi quem promitti sæpiùs audis. Virg. Æn. 6. v. 791.

Behold the promis'd Chief!

A VING lately presented my Reader with a Copy of Verses full of the false Sublime, I shall here communicate to him an excellent Specimen of the True: Though it hath not been yet published, the judicious Reader will readily discern it to be the Work of a Master: And if he hath read that noble Poem on The Prospect of Peace, he will not be at a loss to guess at the Author.

The

The ROYAL PROGRESS.

THEN BRUNSWICK first appear'd, each bonest Heart, Intent on Verse, disdain'd the Rules of Art; For him the Songsters, in unmeasur'd Odes, Debas'd Alcides, and dethron'd the Gods, In Golden Chains the Kings of India led. Or rent the Turbant from the Sultan's Head. One, in old Fables, and the Pagan Strain. With Nymphs and Tritons, wafts bim o'er the Main; Another draws fierce Lucifer in Arms, And fills th' Infernal Region with Alarms; A Third awakes some Druid, to foretel Each future Triumph from his dreary Cell." Exploded Fancies! that in vain deceive, While the Mind nauseates what she can't believe. My Muse th' expected Hero shall pursue From Clime to Clime, and keep him fill in View: His shining March describe in faithful Lays, Content to paint bim, nor presume to praise; Their Charms, if Charms they have, the Truth supplies; And from the Theme unlabour'd Beauties rife.

By longing Nations for the Throne design'd. And call'd to guard the Rights of Human-kind; With secret Grief bis God-like Soul repines, And Britain's Crown with joyless Luftre shines, While Prayers and Tears his destin'd Progress stay, And Crouds of Mourners choke their Sow reign's Way. Not so be march'd, when Hostile Squadrons stood In Scenes of Death, and fir'd his generous Blood; When his hot Courfer paw'd th' Hungarian Plain, And adverse Legion's stood the Sbock in vain. His Frontiers past, the Belgian Bounds be views, And cross the level Fields his March pursues. Here pleas'd the Land of Freedom to survey, He greatly scorns the thirst of boundless Sway. O'er the thin Soil, with filent Jo, he spies Transplanted Goods, and borrow'd Verdure rise; Vol. VIII.

Where

Where every Meadow won with Toil and Blood, From haughty Tyrants, and the raging Flood, With Fruits and Flow'rs the careful Hind supplies, And clothes the Marshes in a rich Disguise. Such Wealth for frugal Hands doth Heav'n decree, And such thy Gifts, celestial Liberty!

Through flately Towns, and many a fertile Plain,
The Pomp advances to the neighbouring Main.
Whole Nations croud around with joyful Cries,
And view the Hero with insatiate Eyes.

In Haga's Towers he waits, 'till Eastern Gales
Propitious rife to swell the British Sails.
Hither the Fame of England's Monarch brings
The Vows and Friendships of the neighb'ring Kings; Mature in Wisdom, his extensive Mind
Takes in the blended Int'rests of Mankind,
The World's great Patriot. Calm thy anxious Breast, Secure in him, O Europe, take thy rest;
Henceforth thy Kingdoms shall remain consin'd
By Rocks and Streams, the Mounds which Heav'n design'd;
The Alps their new made Monarch shall restrain,
Nor shall thy Hills, Pirene, rise in vain.

But see! to Britain's Isle the Squadrons stand,
And leave the sinking Towers, and lessening Land.
The Royal Bark bounds o'er the floating Plain, Breaks thro' the Billows, and divides the Main.
O'er the wast Deep, Great Monarch, dart thine Eyes,
A watry Prospect bounded by the Skies:
Ten Thousand Vessels, from ten thousand Shores,
Bring Gums and Gold, and either India's Stores:
Behold the Tributes hastening to thy Throne,
And see the wide Horizon all thy own.

Still is it thine; the now the chearful Crew Hail Albion's Cliffs, just whitening to the View. Before the Wind with swelling Sails they ride, Till Thames receives them in his opening Tide. The Monarch hears the thundering Peals around, From trembling Woods and echoing Hills rebound, Nor misses yet, amid the deafening Train, The Roarings of the boarse resounding Main.

As in the Flood he sails, from either Side,
He views his Kingdom in its rural Pride;
A various Scene the wide spread Landskip yields,
O'er rich Inclosures and luxuriant Fields:
A lowing Herd each fertile Pasture fills,
And distant Flocks stray o'er a thousand Hills.
Fair Greenwich hid in Woods with new Delight, (Shade above Shade) now rises to the Sight:
His Woods ordain'd to wist ew'ry Shore,
And guard the Island which they grad d before.

The Sun now rolling down the Western Way, A Blaze of Fires renews the fading Day; Unnumber'd Barks the Regal Barge infold, Brightening the Twilight with its beamy Gold; Less thick the sinny Shoals, a countless Fry, Before the Whale or kingly Dolphin sty. In one wast Shout he seeks the crouded Strand, And in a peal of Thunder gains the Land.

Welcome, great Stranger, to our longing Eyes,
Oh! King desir'd, adopted Albion cries.
For thee the East breath'd out a prosprous Breeze,
Bright were the Suns, and gently swell'd the Seas.
Thy Presence did each doubtful Heart compose,
And Factions wonder'd that they once were Foes;
That joyful Day they lost each Hostile Name,
The same their Aspect, and their Voice the same.

So two fair Twins, whose Features were design'd At one soft Moment in the Mother's Mind, Show each the other with reslected Grace, And the same Beauties bloom in either Face; The puzzled Strangers which is which enquire; Delusion grateful to the smiling Sire.

From that fair * Hill, where hoary Sages boaft To name the Stars, and count the heav'nly Hoft, * Mr. Flamstead's House.

By the next Dawn doth great Augusta rise,
Proud Town! the noblest Scene beneath the Skies.
O'er Thames her thousand Spires their Lustre shed,
And a wast Nawy bides his ample Bed,
A floating Forest. From the distant Strand
A Line of golden Cars strikes o'er the Land:
Britannia's Peers in Pomp and rich Array,
Before their King, triumphant, lead the Way.
Far as the Eye can reach, the gaudy Train,
A bright Procession, shines along the Plain.

So haply through the Heav'n's wide pathless Ways

A Comet draws a long extended Blaze;

From East to West burns through th' ethereal Frame,

And half Heav'n's Convex glitters with the Flame.

Now to the Regal Towers fecurely brought. He plans Britannia's Glories in his Thought, Resumes the delegated Pow'r be gave, Rewards the Faithful, and restores the Brave. Whom shall the Muse from out the shining Throng Select, to heighten and adorn ber Song? Thee, Hallifax. To thy capacious Mind. O Man approv'd, is Britain's Wealth confign'd. Her Coin (while Nassau fought) debas'd and rude, By thee in Beauty and in Truth renew'd, An Arduous Work! Again thy Charge we fee, And thy own Care once more returns to Thee. O! form'd in every Scene to awe and please. Mix Wit with Pomp, and Dignity with Ease: Tho' call'd to shine aloft, thou wilt not scorn To smile on Arts thyself did once adorn: For this thy Name succeeding Time shall praise, And envy less thy Garter, than thy Bays.

The Muse, if fir'd with thy enliv'ning Beams,
Perhaps shall aim at more exalted Themes,
Record our Monarch in a nobler Strain,
And sing the op'ning Wonders of his Reign;
Bright CAROLINA'S heav'nly Beauties trace,
Her valiant CONSORT, and his blooming Race.

A Train of Kings their fruitful Love supplies,
A glorious Scene to Albion's ravish'd Eyes;
Who sees by BRUNSWICK'S Hand her Sceptre sway'd,
And through his Line from Age to Age convey'd.

CHARECE MANDER CO

Nº 621 Wednesday, November 17.

Implevit, stellasque vagas miratur & Astra
Fixa Polis, vidit quanta sub nocte jaceret
Nostra dies, risitque sui ludibria
Lucan. l. g. v. 11.

Now to the blest Abode, with wonder fill'd, The Sun and moving Planets he beheld; Then, looking down on the Sun's feeble Ray, Survey'd our dusky, faint, imperfect Day, And under what a Cloud of Night we lay.

Rows.

THE following Letter having in it some Observations out of the common Road, I shall make it the Entertainment of this Day.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

THE common Topics against the Pride of Man, which are laboured by florid and declamatory Writers, are taken from the Baseness of his Original, the Impersections of his Nature, or the short Duration of those Goods in which he makes his Boast. Though it be true that we can have nothing in us that ought to raise our Vanity, yet a Consciousness of our own Merit may be sometimes laudable. The Folly therefore lies here: We are apt to pride ourselves in worthless or perhaps shameful Things; and on the other hand, count that disgraceful which is our truest Glory. HENCE it is, that the Lovers of Praise take wrong Measures to attain it. Would a vaiu Man confine fult his own Heart, he would find, that if others knew his Weaknesses as well as he himself doth, he could not have the Impudence to expect the public Esteem. Pride therefore flows from want of Reslexion, and Ignorance of ourselves. Knowledge and Humility come upon us together.

THE proper way to make an Estimate of ourselves, is to consider seriously what it is we value or despise in others. A Man who boasts of the Goods of Fortune, a gay Dress or a new Title, is generally the Mark of Ridicule. We ought therefore not to admire in ourselves, what we are so ready to laugh at in other Men.

'MUCH less can we with Reason pride ourselves in those things, which at some time of our Life we shall certainly despise. And yet, if we will give ourselves the Trouble of looking backward and forward on the several Changes which we have already undergone and hereaster must try, we shall find that the greater Degrees of our Knowledge and Wisdom serve only to hew us our own Imperfections.

' AS we rife from Childhood to Youth, we look with · Contempt on the Toys and Trifles which our Hearts have hitherto been fet upon. When we advance to Manhood, we are held wife in proportion to our Shame * and Regret for the Rashness and Extravagance of Youth. Old Age fills us with mortifying Reflexions upon a Life mispent in the Pursuit of anxious Wealth or uncertain Honour. Agreeable to this Gradation of Thought in this Life, it may be reasonably supposed, that in a future State, the Wildom, the Experience, and the Maxims of old Age, will be looked upon by a ' separate Spirit in much the same Light as an ancient Man now fees the little Follies and Toyings of Infants. The Pomps, the Honours, the Policies, and Arts of mortal Men, will be thought as trifling as Hobby-' Horses, Mock-Battles, or any other Sports that now employ all the Cunning, and Strength, and Ambition of rational Beings from four Years old to nine or

' IF the Notion of a gradual Rise in Beings, from the meanest to the most High, be not a vain Imagination.

tion, it is not improbable that an Angel looks down upon a Man, as a Man doth upon a Creature which approaches the nearest to the rational Nature. By the fame Rule (if I may indulge my Fancy in this Particular) a superior Brute looks with a kind of Pride on one of an inferior Species. If they could reflect, we might imagine from the Gestures of some of them that they think themselves the Sovereigns of the World, and that all things were made for them. Such a Thought would not be more abfurd in Brute Creatures, than one which Men are apt to entertain, namely, That all the Stars in the Firmament were created only to please their Eyes and amuse their Imaginations. Mr. Dryden, in his Fable of the Cock and the Fox, makes a Speech for his Hero the Cock, which is a pretty Inflance for this Purpofe.

Then turning, said to Pattlet, See, my Dear, How tavish Nature bath adorn'd the Year; How the pale Primrose and the Violet spring, And Birds essay their Throats, disus'd to sing: All these are ours, and I with Pleasure see Man strutting on two Legs, and aping me.

WHAT I would observe from the whole is this, That we ought to value ourselves upon those Things only which superior Beings think valuable, since that is the only way for us not to sink in our own Esteem hereafter.

STEPPENSON STREET, ST.

Nº 622 Friday, November 19.

Hor. Ep. 18. l. 1. v. 103.

A safe private Quiet, which betrays

Itself to Ease, and cheats away the Days.

Pool Y.

Mr. SPECTATOR.

IN a former Speculation you have observed, that true Greatness doth not consist in that Pomp and Noise wherein the generality of Mankind are apt to place it. You have there taken notice, that Virtue in obscurity often appears more illustrious in the Eye of superior Beings, than all that passes for Grandeur and perior Beings, than all that passes for Grandeur and Magnificence among Men. WHEN we look back upon the History of those who have born the Parts of Kings, Statesmen, or Commanders, they appear to us stripped of those out fide Ornaments that dazzled their Contemporaries; and we regard their Persons as great or little, in proportion to the Eminence of their Virtues or Vices. The wife Sayings, generous Sentiments, or difinterested Conduct of a · Philosopher under mean Circumstances of Life, set him higher in our Esteem than the mighty Potentates of the Earth, when we view them both through the long Prospect of many Ages. Were the Memoirs of an obfoure Man, who lived up to the Dignity of his Nature, and according to the Rules of Virtue, to be laid before us, we should find nothing in such a Character which might not fet him on a level with Men of the highest Stations. The following Extract out of the private Papers of an honest Country Gentleman will set this ' Matter in a clear Light. Your Reader will perhaps conceive a greater Idea of him from these Actions done conceive a greater Idea of him from these Actions done in Secret, and without a Witness, than of these which have drawn upon them the Admiration of Multitudes.

MEMOIRS.

- "IN my 22d Year I found a violent Affection for my Cousin Charles's Wife growing upon me, wherein
- "I was in danger of succeeding, if I had not upon that Account begun my Travels into foreigh Countries.
- "A little after my Return into England, at a private "Meeting with my Uncle Francis, I refused the Offer of
- " his Estate, and prevailed upon him not to disinherit
- " his Son Ned.
- " Mem. NEVER to tell this to Ned, left he should
- " think hardly of his deceased Father; though he con- " tinues to speak ill of me for this very Reason.
- "PREVENTED a fcandalous Law suit betwint
- " my Nephew Harry and his Mother, by allowing her
- " underhand, out of my own Pocket, so much Money
- " yearly as the Dispute was about.
- "PROCURED a Benefice for a young Divine,
- "who is Sifter's Son to the good Man who was my Tu-
- " tor, and hath been dead Twenty Years.
  "GAVE Ten Pounds to poor Mrs., my Friend
- " H-- 's Widow.
  - " Mem. TO retrench one Dish at my Table, till I - " have fetched it up again.
  - " Mem. TO repair my House and finish my Gardens
- in order to employ poor People after Harvest time,
- "ORDERED John to let out Goodman D--'s
- "Sheep that were pounded, by Night: but not to let
- " his Fellow-Servants know it.
- " PREVAILED upon M. T. Esq; not to take the - "Law of the Farmer's Son for shooting a Patridge, and
- " to give him his Gun again.
  - " PAID the Apothecary for curing an old Woman
- " that confessed herself a Witch.
  - "GAVE away my favourite Dog for biting a
- " Beggar."
  " MADE the Minister of the Parish and a Whig Ju-
- " flice of one Mind, by putting them to explain their
- " Notions to one another.
- " Mem. TO turn off Peter for shooting a Doe while
- " The was eating Acorns out of his Hand.

"WHEN my Neighbour John, who hath often injured me, comes to make his Request to-morrow: "Mem. I have forgiven him.

" LAID up my Chariot, and fold my Horses, to relieve the Poor in a Scarcity of Corn.

IN the same Year remitted to my Tenants a Fifth

"AS I was airing to day, I fell into a Thought that warmed my Heart, and shall, I hope, be the better " for it as long as I live.

" Mem. TO charge my Son in private to erect no
" Monument for me; but not to put this in my last " Will.

OTENES SENTEN

Nº 623 Monday, November 22.

Sed mihi wel tellus optem priùs ima dehiscat,
Vel pater omnipotens adigat me fulmine ad umbras,
Pallentes umbras Erebi noctemque profundam,
Antè, pudor, quàm te violem, aut tua jura resolvam.
Ille meos, primus qui me sibi junxit, amores
Abstulit: ille habeat secum, servetque sepulchro.
Virg. Æn. 4. v. 24.

But first let yawning Earth a Passage rend,
And let me thro' the dark Abys descend;
First let awenging Jove, with Flames from high,
Drive down this Body to the nether Sky,
Condemn'd with Ghosts in endless Night to lie;
Before I break the plighted Faith I gave:
No; he who had my Vows, shall ever have;
For whom I low'd on Earth, I worship in the Grave.

DRYDEN.

A M obliged to my Friend, the Love-Casuist, for the following curious Piece of Antiquity, which I shall communicate to the Public in his own Words.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

You an Account of an ancient Custom, in the Manors of East and West-Enborne, in the County of Berks, and elsewhere. If a Customary Tenant die, the Widow shall have what the Law calls her free Bench in all his Copy hold Lands, dum sola & casta sucrit, that is, while she lives single and chaste; but if she commits Incontinency, she forfeits her Estate: Yet if she will come into the Court riding backward upon a Black Ram, with his Tail in her Hand, and say the Words following, the Steward is bound by the Custom to readmit her to her Free Bench.

Here I am,

Riding upon a Black Ram,

Like a Whore as I am;

And, for my Crincum Craneum,

Have lost my Bincum Bancum;

And, for my Tail's Game,

Have done this sworldly Shame,

Therefore, I pray you, Mr. Steward, let me have my Land again.

· AFTER having informed you that my Lord Coke observes, that this is the most frail and slippery Tenure of any in England, I shall tell you, fince the writing of that Letter, I have, according to my Promife, been at great pains in searching out the Records of the Black Ram; and have at last met with the Proceeding of the Court-Baron, held in that Behalf, for the Space of a whole Day. The Record faith, that a first Inquisition having been made into the Right of the Tenants to their several Estates, by a crafty old Steward, he found that many of the Lands of the Manor were, by default of the several Widows, forseited to the Lord, and accordingly would have enter'd on the Premiles: Upon which the good Women demanded the Benefit of the Ram. The Steward, after having perused their several Pleas, adjourn'd the Court to Barnabybright, that they might have Day enough before them THE

'THE Court being fet, and filled with a great Concourse of People, who came from all Parts to see the Solemnity, the first who entred was the Widow Frontly, who had made her Appearance in the last Year's Ca-valcade. The Register observes, that finding it an easy Pad Ram, and foreseeing the might have further Occasion for it, she purchased it of the Steward.

MRS. Sarab Dainty, Relict of Mr. John Dainty, (who was the greatest Prude in the Parish) came next in the Procession. She at first made some Difficulty of taking the Tail in her Hand; and was observed in pronouncing the form of Penance, to foften the two most emphatical Words into Clincum Clancum: But the Steward took care to make her speak plain English, before he would let ber have ber Land again.

"THE third Widow that was brought to this worldly · Shame, being mounted upon a vicious Ram, had the Misfortune to be thrown by him; upon which she hoped to be excused from going through the rest of the " Ceremony: But the Steward being well verfed in the Law, observed very wisely upon this Occasion, that the breaking of the Rope does not hinder, the Execution of the Criminal.

'THE fourth Lady upon Record was the Widow Ogle, a famous Coquette, who had kept half a Score young Fellows off and on for the Space of two Years; but having been more kind to her Carter John, she was introduced with the Huzzas of all her Lovers about

MRS. Sable appearing in her Weeds, which were very new and fresh, and of the same Colour with her whimfical Palfrey, made a very decent Figure in the Solemnity.

ANOTHER, who had been summoned to make her appearance, was excufed by the Steward, as well knowing in his Heart, that the good Squire himself had qualified her for the Ram.

'MRS. Quick having nothing to object against the Indictment, pleaded her Belly. But it was remembred that she made the same Excuse the Year before: Upon which the Steward observ'd, that she might so contrive it, as never to do the Service of the Manor.

- "THE Widow Fidget being cited into Court, infifted that she had done no more since the Death of her Husband, than what she used to do in his Lifetime; and withal desired Mr. Steward to consider his own Wife's Case if he should chance to die before her.
- THE next in order was a Dowager of a very corpulent Make, who would have been excused as not finding any Ram that was able to carry her; upon which the Steward commuted her Punishment, and ordered her to make her Entry upon a black Ox.
- THE Widow Maskwell, a Woman who had long lived with a most unblemished Character, having turned ed off her old Chambermaid in a Pet, was by that revengeful Creature brought in upon the black Ram nine times the same Day.
- SEVERAL Widows of the Neighbourhood, being brought upon their Trial, shewed that they did not hold of the Manor, and were discharged accordingly.
- A pretty young Creature who closed the Procession came ambling in, with so bewitching an Air, that the Steward was observed to cast a Sheep's Eye upon her, and married her within a Month after the Death of his Wife.
- N. B. Mrs. Touchwood appeared, according to Summons, but had nothing laid to her Charge; having liv'd irreproachably fince the Decease of her Husband, who left her a Widow in the Sixty-ninth Year of her Age.

1 am, S I R, &c.

SOME CONTINUES CONTRACTOR

Nº 624 Wednesday, November 24.

Audire, atque togam jubeo componere, quisquis Ambitione malá, aut argenti pallet amore, Quisquis luxuria

Hor. Sat. 3. 1. 2. 7. 77.

Sit still, and hear, those whom proud Thoughts do savell,
Those that look pale by loving Coin too well;
Whom Luxury corrupts.

CREECH.

Bufy and the Idle. The Bufy World may be divided into the Virtuous and the Vicious. The Vicious again into the Covetous, the Ambitious, and the Sensual. The idle Part of Mankind are in a State inferior to any one of these. All the other are engaged in the Pursuit of Happiness, though often misplaced, and are therefore more likely to be attentive to such Means, as shall be proposed to them for that End. The Idle, who are neither wise for this World, nor the next, are emphatically called by Dr. Tillotson, Fools at large. They propose to themselves no End, but run adrift with every Wind. Advice therefore would be but thrown away upon them, since they would scarce take the pains to read it. I shall not fatigue any of this worthless Tribe with a long Harangue; but will leave them with this short Saying of Plato, that Labour is preferable to Idleness, as Brightness to Rust.

THE Pursuits of the Active Part of Mankind are either in the Paths of Religion and Virtue; or, on the other hand, in the Roads to Wealth, Honours, or Pleasure. I shall, therefore, compare the Pursuits of Avarice, Ambition and sensual Delight with their opposite Virtues; and shall consider which of these Principles engages Men in a Course of the greatest Labour, Suffering and Assiduity. Most Men, in their cool Reasonings, are willing to allow that a Course of Wirtue will in the End be rewarded the most amply; but represent the way to it as rugged and narrow. If therefore it can be made appear, that Men struggle through as many Troubles to be miserable, as they do to be happy, my Readers may perhaps be persuaded to be Good, when they find they shall lose nothing by it.

Virtue

be Good, when they find they shall lose nothing by it.

FIRST, for Avarice. The Miler is more Indufirious than the Saint: The Pains of getting, the Fears of lofing, and the Inability of enjoying his Wealth. have been the Mark of Satire in all Ages. Were his Repentance upon his Neglect of a good Bargain, his Sorrow for being over-reached, his Hope of improving a Sum, and his Fear of falling into Want, directed to their proper Objects; they would make to many different Christian Graces and Virtues. He may apply to himself a great Part of St. Paul's Catalogue of Sufferings. In journeying often; in Perils of Waters, in Perils of Robbers, in Perils among false Brethren. In Weariness and Painfulness, in Watchings often, in Hunger and Thirft. in Fastings often - At how much less Expence might he lay up to himfelf Treasures in Heaven? or if I may, in this Place, be allowed to add the Saying of a great Philosopher, he may provide such Possessions, as fear neither Arms, nor Men, nor Jove himself.

IN the second Place, if we look upon the Toils of Ambition, in the same Light as we have considered those of Avarice, we shall readily own that sar less Trouble is requisite to gain lasting Glory, than the Power and Reputation of a sew Years; or, in other Words, we may with more Ease deserve Honour, than obtain it. The Ambitious Man should remember Cardinal Wolfey's Complaint. 'Had I served God, with the same Application, wherewith I served my King, he would not have forsaken me in my old Age.' The Cardinal here softens his Ambition by the Specious Pretence of serving bis King; Whereas his Words, in the proper Construction, imply, that if instead of being acted by Ambition, he had been acted by Religion, he should now have felt the Comforts of it, when the whole World turned its Back upon him.

Thirdly, LET us compare the Pains of the Sensual, with those of the Virtuous, and see which are heavier in the Balance. It may seem strange, at the first View, that the Men of Pleasure should be advised to change their Course, because they lead a painful Life. Yet when we see them so active and vigilant in quest of Delight; under so many Disquiets, and the Sport of such various Passions; let them answer, as they can, if the Pains they undergo do not outweigh their Enjoyments. The Insidelities on the one Part between the two Sexes, and the Caprices on the other, the Debasement of Reason, the Pangs of Expectation, the Disappointments in Possession, the Stings of Remorse, the Vanities and Vexations attending even the most refined Delights that make up this Business of Life, render it so filly and uncomfortable, that no Man is thought wise till he hath got over it, or happy, but in proportion as he hath cleared himself from it.

THE Sum of all is this. Man is made an active Being. Whether he walks in the Paths of Virtue or Vice, he is fure to meet with many Difficulties to prove his Patience, and excite his Industry. The same, if not greater Labour, is required in the Service of Vice and Folly, as of Virtue and Wisdom: And he hath this easy Choice left him, whether, with the Strength he is master of, he will purchase Happiness or Repentance.

Nº 625 Friday, November 26.

De tenero meditatur Ungui.

Hor. Od. 6. 1. 3. v. 23.

Love, from ber tender Years, ber Thoughts employ'd.

THE Love-Casuist hath referred to me the following Letter of Queries, with his Answers to each Question, for my Approbation. I have accordingly consider'd the several Matters therein contained, and hereby confirm and ratify his Answers, and require the gentle Querist to conform herself thereunto.

SIR,

that Modern and J. H. A.

SI'R.

T Was Thirteen the Ninth of November last, and must now begin to think of fettling myself in the World, and fo I would humbly beg your Advice, what I must do with Mr. Fondle, who makes his Addresses to me. He is a very pretty Man, and hath the blackest Eyes and whitest Teeth you ever saw. Though he is but a ' a younger Brother, he dresses like a Man of Quality, and no Body comes into a Room like him. I know he hath refused great Offers, and if he cannot marry me, he will never have any Body elfe. But my Father hath forbid him the House, because he sent me a Copy of Verses; for he is one of the greatest Wits in Town. My eldest Sister, who, with her Good-will, would call " me Miss as long as I live, must be married before me, they fay. She tells them that Mr. Fondle makes a Fool of me, and will spoil the Child, as the calls me, like a confident thing as she is. In short, I am resolved to marry Mr. Fondle, if it be but to spite her. But because I would do nothing that is imprudent, I beg of you to give me your Answers to some Questions I will write down, and defire you to get them printed in the SPECTATOR, and I do not doubt but you will give fuch Advice, as, I am fure, I shall follow. WHEN Mr. Fondle looks upon me for half an Hour together, and calls me Angel, is he not in Love?

Answer, No.

'MAY not I be certain he will be a kind Husband, that has promifed me half my Portion in Pin-money, and to keep me a Coach and Six in the Bargain?

chief where little

No.

WHETHER I, who have been acquainted with him this whole Year almost, am not a better Judge of his Merit, than my Father and Mother, who never heard him talk, but at Table?

with the little property

258

· WHETHER I am not old enough to choose for myfelf? review to reside the resident to the and positive for Caulting to the factor of the

A CARROL ROLLINGS ON CARROLL SERVICES

abstant Ando

We will keep the state of the second WHETHER it would not have been rude in me to refuse a Lock of his Hair?

SHOU'D not I be a very barbarous Creature, if I did not pity a Man who is always Sighing for my delite of in the plant of the f

a consideration of the manual

Hand now they book in the color was the Hand

WHETHER you would not advise me to run away with the poor Man !

ni an den derinon, en linka i WHETHER you do not think, that if I won't have him, he won't drown himfelf.

or and a proposition is because of the angle of the angle

No.

WHAT shall I say to him the next time he aske me if I will marry him?

THE following Letter requires neither Introduction nor Answer.

doubt a oil lien of dience and len

Mr. SPECTATOR.

- I Wonder that, in the present Situation of Affairs, you can take Pleafure in writing any thing but
- News; for in a word, who minds any thing elfe? The Pleasure of increasing in Knowledge, and learn-
- ing fomething new every Hour of Life, is the no-
- blest Entertainment of a rational Creature. I have
- a very good Ear for a Secret, and am naturally of a ' communicative Temper; by which Means I am capable of doing you great Services in this way. In order to make myself useful, I am early in the Antichamber, where I thrust my Head into the thick of the Preis, and catch the News, at the opening of the Door, while it is warm. Sometimes I stand by the Beef eaters, and take the Buz as it passes by me. At other times I lay my Ear close to the Wall, and suck in many a valuable ! Whisper, as it runs in a straight Line from Corner to Corner. When I am weary with standing, I repair to fone of the neighbouring Coffee houses, where I fit fometimes for a whole Day, and have the News as it comes from Court fresh and fresh. In short, Sir, I spare no pains to know how the World goes. A Piece of News 'loses its Flavour when it hath been an Hour in the Air. I love, if I may to fpeak, to have it fresh from the Tree; and to convey it to my Friends before it is faded. Accordingly my Expences in Coach-hire make no small Article: which you may believe, when I affure you, that I pust away from Coffee house to Coffee house, and forestal the Evening Post by two Hours. There is a certain Gentleman, who hath given me the flip twice or thrice, and hath been beforehand with me at Child's. But I have play'd him a Trick. I have purchas'd a Pair of the best Coach-horses I could buy for Money, ' and now let him out ftrip me if he can. Once more, " Mr. SPECTATOR, let me advise you to deal in News. You may depend upon my Affistance. But I must break off abruptly, for I have twenty Letters to write.

to a He ta Moornake telegrad variations built in the

Tho. Quid-punci Lenkend Lieburg and the Alexander Company

the their Conditions of the Leading the standard of the of Copins of Marid hat a Particle of Landing Littles the Santa gives a sect agreed to Light Link, classe its and Area is and the national Californian and two and in mos

WHAT WAS TO THE PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF THE

Nº 626 Monday, November 29.

- Dulcique animos novitate tenebo. Ovid. Met. 1. 4. v. 284. With fweet Novelty your Tafte Ill pleafe. Euspen.

de water of the Land

Have feen a little Work of a learned Man, confifting of extemporary Speculations, which owed their Birth to the most trising Occurrences of Life. His usual Method was, to write down any fudden Start of Thought which arose in his Mind upon the fight of any odd Gesticulation in a Man, any whimfical Mimickry of Reason in a Beaft, or whatever appeared remarkable in any Object of the visible Creation. He was able to moralize upon a Snuff-Box, would flourish eloquently upon a Tucker or a Pair of Ruffles, and draw practical Inferences from a full-bottom'd Periwig. This I thought fit to mention, by way of Excuse, for my ingenious Correspondent, who hath introduced the following Letter by an Image, which, I will beg leave to tell him, is too ridiculous in fo ferious and noble a Speculation.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

THEN I have feen young Puss playing her wanton Gambols, and with a thousand antic Shapes express her own Gaiety at the same time that ' she moved mine, while the old Grannum hath sat by with a most exemplary Gravity, unmov'd at all that past; it hath made me reflect what should be the Occa-' fion of Humours so opposite in two Creatures, between whom there was no visible Difference but that of Age; and I have been able to resolve it into nothing else but the Force of Novelty.

'IN every Species of Creatures, those who have been least Time in the World, appear best pleased with their Condition: For, besides that to a new Comer the World hath a Freshness on it that strikes the Sense after a most agreeable Manner, Being itfelf, unattended with any great Variety of Enjoyments, excites a Sensation of Pleasure. But as Age advances, every thing feems to wither, the Senses are disgusted with their old Entertainments, and Existence turns flat and infipid. We may fee this exemplified in Mankind: The Child, let him be free from Pain, and gratified in his Change of Toys, is diverted with the smallest Trifle. Nothing disturbs the Mirth of the Boy. but a little Punishment or Confinement. The Youth must have more violent Pleasures to employ his Time; the Man loves the Hurry of an active Life, devoted to the Pursuits of Wealth or Ambition; and Lastly, old Age, having loft its Capacity for these Avocations, becomes its own insupportable Burden. This Variety may in part be accounted for by the Vivacity and Decay of the Faculties; but I believe is chiefly owing to this. That the longer we have been in Possession of Being. the less sensible is the Gust we have of it; and the more it requires of adventitious Amusements to relieve us from the Satiety and Weariness it brings along with it.

AND as Novelty is of a very powerful, so of a most extensive Influence. Moralists have long fince observed it to be the Source of Admiration, which lessens in proportion to our Familiarity with Objects, and upon a thorough Acquaintance is utterly extinguished. But I think it hath not been so commonly remarked, that all the other Passions depend considerably on the same Circumstances. What is it but Novelty that awakens Defire, enhances Delight, kindles Anger, provokes Envy, inspires Horror? To this Cause we must ascribe it, that Love languishes with Fruition, and Friendship itself is recommended by Intervals of Absence: Hence Monsters, by use, are beheld without lothing, and the most inchanting Beauty without Rap-That Emotion of the Spirits in which Passion consists, is usually the Effect of Surprise, and as long as it continues, heightens the agreeable or disagreeable Qualities of its Object; but as this Emotion ceases (and it ceases with the Novelty) things appear in another Light, and affect us even less than might be expected from their proper Energy, for having moved us too much before.

OUR

IT may not be an ufeles Enquiry how far the Love of Novelty is the unavoidable Growth of Nature, and in what Respects it is peculiarly adapted to the present State. To me it feems impossible, that a reasonable Creature should rest absolutely satisfied im any Acquifitions whatever, without endeavouring farther, for after its highest Improvements, the Mind hath an Idea of an Infinity of things still behind worth knowing, to the Knowledge of which therefore it cannot be indifferent; as by climbing up at Hill in the midst of at wide Plain, a Man hath his Prospect enlarged, and, together with that; the bounds of his Defires. Upon this account, I cannot think he detracts from the State of the Bleffed. who conceives them to be perpetually employed in fresh Searches into Nature, and to Eternity advancing into the fathomless Depths of the Divine Perfections. In this Thought there is nothing but what doth Honour to these glorified Spirits; provided still it be remembred, that their Defire of more proceeds not from their diffelishing what they posses; and the Pleasure of a new Enjoyment is not with them measured by its Novelty (which is a thing merely foreign and accidental) but by its real intrinsic Value. Afternan Acquaintance of many thousand Years with the Works of God, the Beauty and Magnificence of the Creation fills them with the fame pleafing Wonder and profound Awe, which " Adam felt himself seiz'd with as he first opened his · Eyes upon this glorious Scene. Truth captivates with unborrowed Charms, and whatever hath once given Satisfaction will always do it: In all which they have manifestly the Advantage of us, who are so much govern'd by fickly and changeable Appetites, that we can with the greatest Coldness behold the stupendous Difplays of Omnipotence, and be in Transports at the puny Essays of human Skill; throw aside Speculations of the fublimest Nature and vastest Importance into some obfoure Corner of the Mind, to make room for New 'Notions of no Confequence at all; are even tired of Health, because not enlivened with alternate Pain; and prefer the first Reading of an indifferent Author, to the second or third Perusal of one whose Merit and Reputation are established.

OUR being thus formed ferves many useful Purpoles in the present State, It contributes not a little to the Advancement of Learning; for, as Cicero takes notice. That which makes Men willing to undergo the Fatigues of Philosophical Disquisitions, is not so much the Greatness of Objects as their Novelty. It is not enough that there is Field and Game for the Chace, and that the Understanding is prompted with a restless Thirst of Knowledge, effectually to rouse the Soul, sunk into the State of Sloth and Indo lence, it is also necessary that there be an uncommon Pleasure annexed to the first Appearance of Truth in the Mind. This pleasure being exquisite for the Time it lasts, but transient, it hereby comes to pass that the Mind grows into an Indifference to its former Notions, and passes on after new Discoveries, in hope of repeating the Delight. It is with Knowledge as with Wealth, the Pleasure of which lies more in making endless Additions, than in taking a Review of our old Store. There are some Inconveniences that follow this Temper, if not guarded against, particularly this, that through a too great Eagerness of something new, we are many times impatient of staying long enough upon a Question that? requires some time to resolve it, or, which is worse, persuade ourselves that we are Masters of the Subject before we are fo, only to be at the Liberty of going upon a fresh Scent; in Mr. Locke's Words, Wefee a little, presume a great deal, and so jump to the " Conclusion.

A farther Advantage of our Inclination for Novelty, as at present circumstantiated, is, that it annihilates all the boasted Distinctions among Mankind. Look not up with Envy to those above thee. Sounding Titles, stately Buildings, fine Gardens, gilded Chariots, rich Equipages, what are they? They dazzle every one but the Possessor To him that is accustomed to them they are cheap and regardless Things: They supply him not with brighter Images, or more sublime Satisfactions than the plain Man may have, whose small Estate may just enable him to support the Charge of a simple unincumbered Life. He enters heedless into his Rooms of State as you or I do under our poor Sheds. The noble Paintings and costly Furniture are lost on him; he sees them not: As how can it be otherwise, when by Custom, a Fabrick infinitely more grand and finish'd, that of the Universe, stands unobserved by the Inhabitants, and the everlasting Lamps of Heaven are lighted up in vain, for any Notice that Mortals take of them? Thanks to indulgent Nature, which not only placed her Children originally upon a Level, but still, by the Strength of this Principle, in a great measure preserves it, in spite of all the Care of Man to introduce artificial Distinctions.

' into

TO add no more, Is not this Fondness for Novelty. which makes us out of conceit with all we already have, a convincing Proof of a future State? Either Man was made in vain, or this is not the only World he was made for: For there cannot be a greater Instance of Vanity, than that to which Man is liable, to be de-· luded from the Cradle to the Grave with fleeting Shadows of Happiness. His Pleasures, and those not confiderable neither, die in the Possession, and fresh Enjoyments do not rife fast enough to fill up half his Life with · Satisfaction. When I fee Persons fick of themselves any Ionger than they are called away by fomething that is of Force to chain down the present Thought; when I fee them hurry from Country to Town, and then from Town back again into the Country, continually shifting · Postures, and placing Life in all the different Lights they can think of; Surely, fay I to myself, Life is vain, and the Man beyond Expression stupid or prejudic'd, who from the Vanity of Life cannot gather, He is designed for Immortality.

the cares were used their left and amarkets

eli v methat tadaler nod mid-vic

promot na rakil povlace. Bod scopi skolik Wasi

SATERIAN CONTRACTOR

Nº 627 Wednesday, December 1.

Tantum inter densas umbrosa cacumina sagos Assiduè veniebat; ibi bæc incondita solus Montibus & Sylvis studio jastabat inani.

Virg. Ecl. 2. v. 3.

He, underneath the Beechen Shade alone, Thus to the Woods and Mountains made his moan.

DRYDEN.

THE following Account, which came to my Hands fome time ago, may be no disagreeable Entertainment to such of my Readers as have tender Hearts and nothing to do.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

Friend of mine died of a Fever at Week which he caught by walking too late in a dewy Even-ing amongst his Reapers. I must inform you that his greatest Pleasure was in Husbandry and Gardening. He had fome Humours which feemed inconfiftent with that good Sense he was otherwise Master of. His Uncafiness in the Company of Women was very remarkable in a Man of fuch perfect Good-breeding, and his avoiding one particular Walk in his Garden, where he had used to pass the greatest Part of his Time, raised abundance of idle Conjectures in the Village where he lived. Upon looking over his Papers we found out the Reason, which he e never intimated to his nearest Friends. He was, it feems, a passionate Lover in his Youth, of which a s large Parcel of Letters he left behind him are a Witness. I fend you a Copy of the last he ever wrote upon that Subject, by which you will find that he VOL. VIII.

concealed the true Name of his Mistress? under that of Zelinda.

A Long Month's Absence would be insupportable to me, if the Business I am employed in were not for the Service of my Zelinda, and of such a Nature as to place her every Moment in my Mind. I have furnished the House exactly according to your Fancy, or, if you please, my own; for I have long since learned to like nothing but what you do. The Apartment designed for your Use is so exact a Copy of that which you live in, that I often think myself in your House when I step into it, but sigh when I find it without its proper Inhabitant. You will have the most delicious Prospect from your Closet Window that England affords: I am sure I should think it so, if the Landskip that shows such Variety did not at the same time suggest to me the Greatness of the Space that lies between us.

THE Gardens are laid out very beautifully; I have dressed up every Hedge in Woodbines, sprinkled Bowers and Arbours in every Corner, and made a little Paradise round me; yet I am still like the first Man, in his Solitude, but half blest without a Partner in my Happiness. I have directed one Walk to be made for two Persons, where I promise ten thousand Satisfactions to myself in your Conversation. I already take my Evening's Turn in it, and have worn a Path upon the Edge of this little, Alley, while I foothed myself with the Thought of your walking by my Side. I have held many imaginary Discourses with you in this Retirement; and when I have been weary, have sat down with you in the midst of a Row of Jessamins. The many Expressions of Joy and Rapture I use in these silent Conversations have made me, for some time the Talk of the Parish; but a neighbouring young Fellow, who makes Love to the Farmer's Daughter, hain found me out, and made my Case known to the whole Neighbourbood.

IN planting of the Fruit-Trees I have not forgot the Peach you are so fond of. I have made a Walk of Elms along the River Side, and intend to sow all the Place about with Cowssips, which I hope you will like as well as that I have heard you talk of by your Father's House in the Country.

OH! Zelinda, What a Scheme of Delight have I drawn up in my Imagination! What Day-Dreams do I indulge myself in! When will the Six Weeks he at an End, that lie between me and my promised Happiness?

HOW could you break off so abruptly in your last, and tell me you must go and dress for the Play? If you loved as I do, you would find no more Company in a Crowd, than

I have in my Solitude.

ON the Back of this Letter is written in the Hand of the Deceased, the following Piece of History.

Mem. HAVING waited a whole Week for an Anfewer to this Letter, I hurried to Town, where I found the perfidious Creature married to my Rival. I will bear it as becomes a Man, and endeavour to find out Happiness for myself in that Retirement, which I had prepared in vain for a false ungrateful Woman.

I am, &c.

Nº 628 Friday, December 3.

Labitur et labetur in omne volubilis ævum.

Hor. Ep. 2. 1. 1. v. 43.

It rolls, and rolls, and will for ever roll.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

HERE are none of your Speculations which please me more than those upon Infinitude and Eternity. You have already considered that Part of Eternity which is past, and I wish you M 2 would would give us your Thoughts upon that which is to come.

'YOUR Readers will perhaps receive greater Pleafure from this View of Eternity than the former, fince we have every one of us a Concern in that which is to come: Whereas a Speculation on that which is past is rather curious than useful.

BESIDES, we can eafily conceive it possible for fuccessive Duration never to have an End; tho as you have justly observed, that Eternity which never had a Beginning is altogether incomprehensible; That is, we can conceive an Eternal Duration which may be, though we cannot an Eternal Duration which bath been; or, if I may use the Philosophical Terms, we may apprehend a Potential though not an Assual · Eternity.

'THIS Notion of a future Eternity, which is natural to the Mind of Man, is an unanswerable Argu-" ment that he is a Being defigned for it; especially if we consider that he is capable of being Virtuous or Vicious here; that he hath Faculties improveable to all Eternity; and by a proper or wrong Employment of them, may be happy or milerable throughout that infinite Duration. Our Idea indeed of this Eternity is not of an adequate or fixed Nature, but is perpetually growing and enlarging itself toward the Ob-' ject, which is too big for human Comprehension. As we are now in the Beginnings of Existence, so shall we always appear to ourfelves as if we were for ever entring upon it. After a Million or two of Centuries, fome confiderable Things, already past, may slip out of our Memory; which, if it be not strengthened in a wonderful manner, may possibly forget that ever there was a Sun or Planets, and yet, notwithstands ing the long Race that we shall then have run, we ' shall still imagine ourselves just starting from the Goal, and find no Proportion between that Space which we know had a Beginning, and what we are fure will never have an End.

BUT I shall leave this Subject to your Management, and question not but you will throw it into fuch Lights as shall at once improve and entertain your Reader.

'I have inclosed fent you a Translation of the Speech of Cato on this Occasion, which hath accidentally fallen into my Hands, and which for Conciseness, Purity, and Elegance of Phrase cannot be sufficiently admired.

ACT. V. SCEN. I.

the days of the the state of the County and additional and the CATO folus, &c.

william should bail a molecular that me and the state of the second second and the state of the

CIC, sic se habere rem necesse prorsus est, Patione vincis, do lubens manus, Plato. Quid enim dediffet, Quæ dedit fruftra nibil, Æternitatis insitam cupidinem Natura? Quorsum hæc dulcis Expectatio; Vitæque non explenda melioris sitis? Quid vult sibi aliud iste redeundi in nihil Horror, sub imis quemque agens præcordiis? Cur territa in se refugit anima, cur tremit Attonita, quoties, morte ne pereat, timet? Particula nempe est cuique nascenti indita Divinior; quæ corpus incolens agit; Hominique succinit, Tua est Æternitas. Æternitas! O lubricum nimis aspici, Mixtumque dulci Gaudium formidine?

Quæ demigratitur alia binc in corpora? Quæ terra mox incognita? Quis orbis novus, Manet incolendus? Quanta erit mutatio? Hac intuenti spatia mibi quaquà patent Immensa: Sed caliginosa nox premit; Nec luce clarà vult videri singula. Figendus kic pes; certa sunt hæc hactenus: Si quod gubernet Numen Humanum genus, (At, quod gubernet, effe clamant omnia) Virtute non gaudere certe non potest: Nec ese non Beata, quâ gaudet, potest. Sed qua Beata sede? Quove in tempore? Hæc quanta quanta terra, tota est Cæfaris. Quid dubius hæret animus usque adeò? Brevi Hic nodum bic omnem expediet. Arma en induor,

ACT V. SCENE I.

CATO alone, &c.

I'must be so—Plate, thou reason'st well—
Else whence this pleasing Hope, this sond Desire,
This Longing after Immortality?
Or whence this secret Dread, and inward Horror,
Of salling into Nought? Why shrinks the Soul
Back on herself, and startles at Destruction?
'Tis the Divinity that stirs within us;
'Tis Heav'n itself, that points out an Hereaster,
And intimates Eternity to Man.
Eternity! thou pleasing, dreadful, Thought!

Through what Variety of untry'd Being,
Through what new Scenes and Changes must we pass!
The wide, th' unbounded Prospect, lies before me;
But Shadows, Clouds, and Darkness rest upon it.
Here will I hold. If there's a Pow'r above us,
(And that there is all Nature cries aloud Through all her Works) He must delight in Virtue;
And that which he delights in must be happy.
But when, or where! — This World was made for Casar.

I'm weary of Conjectures — This must end 'em.

[Laying bis Hand on bis Saword.

In utramque partem facta; quæque vim inferant, Et quæ propulsent! Dextera intentat necem; Vitam finifira : Vulnus bæc dabit manus ; Altera medelam vulneris: Hic ad exitum Deducet, ictu simplici ; bæc vetant mori. Secura ridet anima mucronis minas, Ensesque strictos, interire nescia. Extinguet ætas sidera diuturnior: Ætate languens ipse Sol obscurius Emittet Orbi consenescenti jubar: Natura et ipsa sentiet quondam vices Ætatis; annis ipsa deficiet gravis: At tibi juventus, at tibi îmmortalitas; Tibi parta Divûm est vita. Periment mutuis Elementa sese et interibunt ictibus : Tu permanebis sola semper integra, Tu cuncta rerum quassa, cuncta naufraga, Jam portu in ipso tuta, contemplabere. Compage rupta, corruent in se invicem, Orbesque fractis ingerentur orbibus; Ellafa tu fedebis extra Fragmina.

Thus am I doubly arm'd; my Death and Life,
My Bane and Antidote are both before me.
This in a Moment brings me to an End;
But this informs me I shall never die.
The Soul, secur'd in her Existence, smiles
At the drawn Dagger, and desies its Point.
The Stars shall sade away, the Sun himself
Grow dim with Age, and Nature sink in Years;
But thou shalt flourish in immortal Youth,
Unhurt amidst the War of Elements,
The Wrecks of Matter and the Crush of Worlds.

CERTAIN CONTROL OF THE CONTROL OF TH

Nº 629 Monday, December 6.

Experiar quid concedatur in illos, Quorum Flaminiâ tegitur cinis, atque Latinâ. Juv. Sat. 1. v. 170.

Arraign them in the Persons of the Dead.

DRYDEN.

EXT to the People who want a Place, there are none to be pitied more than those who are so-licited for one. A plain Answer with a Denial in it, is looked upon as Pride, and a Civil Answer as a Promise.

NOTHING is more ridiculous than the Pretenfions of People upon these Occasions. Every thing a Man hath suffered, while his Enemies were in play, was certainly brought about by the Malice of the opposite Party. A bad Cause would not have been lost, if such an one had not been upon the Bench; nor a profligate Youth disinherited, if he had not got drunk every Night by tosting an outed Ministry. I remember a Tory, who having been fined in a Court of Justice for a Prank that deserved the Pillory, desir'd upon the Merit of it to be made a Justice of Peace when his Friends came into Power; and shall never forget a Whig Criminal, who, upon being indicted for a Rape, told his Friends, You see what a Man suffers for sticking to his Principles.

THE Truth of it is, the Sufferings of a Man in a Party are of a very doubtful Nature. When they are such as have promoted a good Cause, and fallen upon a Man undeservedly, they have a Right to be heard and recompensed beyond any other Pretensions. But when they rise out of Rashness or Indiscretion, and the Pursuit of such Measures as have rather ruined, than promoted

moted the Interest they aim at, (which hath always been the Case of many great Sufferers) they only serve to recommend them to the Children of Violence or Folly.

I have by me a Bundle of Memorials presented by several Cavaliers upon the Restoration of King Charles II. which may serve as so many Instances to our present Purpose.

AMONG several Persons and Pretensions recorded by my Author, he mentions one of a very great Estate, who, for having rosted an Ox whole, and distributed a Hogshead upon King Charles's Birth-Day, desired to be provided for, as his Majesty in his great Wisdom shall think sit.

ANOTHER put in to be Prince Henry's Governor, for having dared to drink his Health in the worst of

A Third petitioned for a Colonel's Commission, for having cursed Oliver Cromwell, the Day before his Death, on a publick Bowling-Green.

BUT the most whimsical Petition I have met with is that of B. B. Esq; who desir'd the Honour of Knighthood, for having Cuckolded Sir T. W. a notorious Roundhead.

THERE is likewise the Petition of one who having let his Beard grow from the Martyrdom of King Charles the First, till the Restoration of King Charles the Second, desired in Consideration thereof to be made a Privy-Counfellor.

I must not omit a Memorial setting forth that the Memorialist had, with great dispatch, carried a Letter from a certain Lord to a certain Lord, wherein, as it asterwards appeared, Measures were concerted for the Restoration, and without which he verily believes that happy Revolution had never been effected; who there-upon humbly prays to be made Post-Master-General.

A certain Gentleman, who feems to write with a great deal of Spirit, and uses the Words Galantry and Gentleman-like very often in his Petition, begs (that in Confideration of his having worn his Hat for ten Years past in the Loyal Cavalier Cock, to his great Danger and Detriment) he may be made a Captain of the Guards.

I shall close my Account of this Collection of Memorials, with the Copy of one Petition at length, which I recommend to my Reader as a very valuable Piece.

The Petition of E. H. Efq; bumbly sheweth.

THAT your Petitioner's Father's Brother's Uncle, Colonel W. H. loft the Third Finger of his Left " Hand, at Edgebill Fight.

- THAT your Petitioner notwithstanding the Smallness of his Fortune (he being a younger Brother) always.
- * kept Hospitality, and drank Consusion to the Roundheads in half a Score Bumpers every Sunday in the Year, as several honest Gentlemen (whose Names are:

underwritten) are ready to testify.

- 'THAT your Petitioner is remarkable in his Country
- for having dared to treat Sir P. P. a curfed Sequestrator, and three Members of the Assembly of Divines,
- with Brawn and Minced Pies upon New Year's Day.
  THAT your faid humble Petitioner hath been five - times impusoned in five several County-Goals, for
- having been a Ring-leader in five different Riots; into which his Zeal for the Royal Cause hurried him, when Men of greater Estates had not the Courage to rife.

- 'THAT he the faid E. H. hath had fix Duels and
- four and twenty Boxing Matches in Defence of his.
  Majeffy's Title; and that he received such a Blow upon
- the Head at a Bonfire in Stratford upon Avon, as he
- hath been never the better for from that Day to this.
- 'THAT your Petitioner hath been so far from im-
- of proving his Fortune, in the late damnable Times, that:
  he verily believes, and hath good Reason to imagine,
- that if he had been Master of an Estate, he had infal· libly been plundered and sequestred.

- 'YOUR Petitioner, in Consideration of his said
- Merits and Sufferings, humbly requests that he may have the Place of Receiver of the Taxes, Collector of
- the Customs, Clerk of the Peace, Deputy-Lieutenant,
- or whatfoever else he shall be thought qualified for.

And your Petitioner Shall ever pray, &c.

FREE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY

Nº 630 Wednesday, December 8.

Favete linguis -

Hor. Od. 1. 1. 3. v. 21

With mute Attention waits.

HAVING no spare Time to write any thing of my own, or to correct what is sent me by others,.

I have thought set to publish the following Letters.

SIR;

Oxford, November 22.

F you would be so kind to me, as to suspend that.
Satisfaction, which the Learned World must receive in reading one of your Speculations, by publishing this Endeavour, you will very much oblige and improve one, who has the Boldness to hope, that he may be admitted into the Number of your Correfpondents.

I have often wondered to hear Men of good Senfeand good Nature profess a Dislike to Music, when at the same time, they do not scruple to own, that it has the most agreeable and improving Influences over their Minds: It feems to me an unhappy Contradiction, that those Persons should have an Indisference for an Art, which raises in them such a Variety of sublime.

· Pleafures.

HOWEVER, though some few, by their own or the unreasonable Prejudices of others may be led into a Distaste for those Musical Societies, which are erected:

merely for Entertainment; yet sure I may venture to.

fay, that no one can have the least Reason for Disassec-tion to that folemn kind of Melody which confifts of 4 the Praises of our Creator.

YOU have, I presume, already prevented me in an Argument upon this Occasion (which some Di-vines have successfully advanced upon a much greater);

that Musical Sacrifice and Adoration has claimed a Place in the Laws and Customs of the most different Nations; as the Grecians and Romans of the Profane, the Jews and Christians of the Sacred World did as unanimously agree in this, as they disagreed in all other Parts of their · Oeconomy.

' I know there are not wanting some who are of Opinion that the pompous kind of Music which is in use in foreign Churches is the most excellent, as it most affects our Senses. But I am swayed by my Judge ment to the Modesty which is observed in the musical Part of our Devotions. Methinks there is fomething very laudable in the Custom of a Voluntary before the first Lesson; by this we are supposed to be prepared for the Admission of those Divine Truths, which we are shortly to receive. We are then to cast all worldly Regards from off our Hearts, all Tumults within are then becalmed, and there should be nothing near the Soul but Peace and Tranquillity. So that in this short Office of Praise, the Man is raised above. himself, and is almost lost already amidst the Joys of Futurity.

I have heard some nice Observers frequently commend the Policy of our Church in this Particular, that it leads us on by such easy and regular Methods, that we are perfectly deceived into Piety. When the Spirits begin to languish (as they too often do) with a constant Series of Petitions, she takes care to allow them a pious Respite, and relieves them with the Raptures of an Anthem. Nor can we doubt that the sublimest Poetry, softened in the most moving Strains of Music, can never fail of humbling or exalting the Soul to any Pitch of Devotion. Who can hear the Terrors of the Lord of Hosts described in the most expressive Melody, without being awed into a Veneration?
Or who can hear the kind and endearing Attributes of a merciful Father, and not be softened into Love towards him?

A S the rifing and finking of the Passions, the casting soft or noble Hints into the Soul, is the natural Privilege of Music in general, so more particularly of that kind which is employed at the Altar.
Those

Those Impressions which it leaves upon the Spirits are more deep and lasting, as the Grounds from which it receives its Authority are founded more upon Reason. It diffuses a Calmness all around us, it makes us drop all those vain or immodest Thoughts which would be an hindrance to us in the Performance of that great Duty of Thanksgiving, which, as we are informed by our Almighty Benefactor, is the most acceptable Return which can be made for those infinite Stores of Bleffings which he daily condescends to pour down upon his Creatures. When we make use of this pathetical Method of addressing ourselves to him, we can scarce contain from Raptures! The Heart is warmed with a Sublimity of Goodness! We are all Piety and all Love!

' HOW do the Blessed Spirits rejoice and wonder to behold unthinking Man proftrating his Soul to his dread Sovereign in such a Warmth of Piety as they themfelves might not be ashamed of!

'I shall close these Reflexions with a Passage taken out of the Third Book of Milton's Paradife Loft. where those harmonious Beings are thus nobly defcribed.

Then Crown'd again, their Golden Harps they took, Harps ever tun'd, that glitt'ring by their side, Like Quivers bung, and with Preamble sweet Of charming Symphony they introduce The Sacred Song, and waken Raptures high: No one exempt, no Voice but well could join Melodious part, such Concord is in Heav'n.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

HE Town cannot be unacquainted, that in divers parts of it there are vociferous Sets of Men who are called Rattling Clubs; but what shocks " me most is, they have now the Front to invade the · Church and institute those Societies there, as a Clan of them have in late times done, to fuch a degree of Insolence, as has given the Partition where they " refide in a Church near one of the City Gates, the Denomination of the Rattling Pew, These gay Fellows from humble Lay Professions set up for Critics without any Tincture of Letters or Reading, and have the Vanity to think they can lay hold of fomething from the Parson which may be formed into-Ridicule.

IT is needless to observe, that the Gentlemen who every Sunday have the hard Province of instructing these Wretches in a way they are in no present Disposition to take, have a fixt Character for Learning. and Eloquence, not to be tainted by the weak Efforts. of this Contemptible Part of their Audiences. Whether the Pulpit is taken by these Gentlemen, or any Strangers their Friends, the Way of the Club is this: · If any Sentiments are delivered too Sublime for their · Conception; if any uncommon Topic is entered on. or one in use new modified with the finest Judgment: and Dexterity; or any controverted Point be never fo elegantly handled; In short whatever surpasses the narrow Limits of their Theology, or is not fuited to their Tafte, they are all immediately upon their Watch. fixing their Eyes upon each other, with as much. . Warmth as our Gladiators of Hockley in the Hole, and waiting like them for a Hit; if one touches, all take: Fire, and their Noddles instantly meet in the Centre of the Pew; then, as by beat of Drum, with exact Discipline, they rear up into a full Length of Stature, and with odd Looks and Gesticulations confer together in so loud and clamorous a Manner, continued to the close of the Discourse, and during the After-· Pfalm, as is not to be filenced but by the Bells. Nordoes this fuffice them, without aiming to propagate: their Noise through all the Church, by Signals given to the adjoining Seats, where others defigned for this Fraternity are sometimes placed upon Trial to receive:

them.
THE Folly as well as Rudeness of this Practices is in nothing more conspicuous than this, that all that follows in the Sermon is lost; for whenever our Sparks take alarm, they blaze out and grow so Tue multuous that no After Explanation can avail, it being impossible for themselves or any near them to give an Account thereof. If any thing really Novel is advanced, how averse soever it may be to their way of thinking, to say nothing of Duty, Men of less Levity than these would be led by a natural Curiofity to bear the whole.

LAUGHTER, where things Sacred are transfacted, is far less pardonable than Whining at a Conventicle; the last has at least a Semblance of Grace, and where the Affectation is unseen may possibly imprint wholsom Lessons on the Sincere; but the first has no Excuse, breaking through all the Rules of Order and Decency, and manifesting a Remission of Mind in those important Matters, which require the strictest Composure and Steadiness of Thought: A Proof of the greatest Folly in the World.

I shall not here enter upon the Veneration due to the Sanctity of the Place, the Reverence owing the Minister, or the Respect that so great an Assembly as a whole Parish may justly claim. I shall only tell them, that as the Spanish Cobler, to reclaim a profligate Son, bid him have some regard to the Dignity of his Family, so they as Gentlemen (for we Citizens assume to be such one Day in a Week) are bound for the future to repent of, and abstain from, the gross Abuses here mentioned, whereof they have been Guilty in Contempt of Heaven and Earth, and contrary to the Laws in this Case made and provided.

Lam, SIR,

Your very bumble Servant,

steed to otraid actainment full model try or make traver to the contract the fact of R. M.

out are not the First Agence where a compact agen-

WHERE CHEST STREET, WASHINGTON

Nº 631 Friday, December 10.

Simplex Munditiis -

Hor. Od. 5. 1. 1. v. 5.

Charms neat without the belp of Art. CREECH.

Had occasion to go a few Miles out of Town, some Days fince, in a Stage-Coach, where I had for my Fellow-Travellers a dirty Beau, and a pretty young Quaker Woman. Having no Inclination to Talk much at that time, I placed my felf backward, with a Defign to survey them and pick a Speculation out of my two Companions. Their different Figures were sufficient of themselves to draw my Attention. The Gentleman was dreffed in a Suit, the Ground whereof had been Black, as I perceived from some few Spaces, that had escaped the Powder, which was Incorporated with the greatest part of his Coat: His Periwig, which cost no small Sum, was after so Slovenly a manner cast over his Shoulders, that it seemed not to have been combed fince the Year 1712; his Linen, which was not much concealed, was daubed with plain Spanish from the Chin to the lowest Button, and the Diamond upon his Finger (which naturally dreaded the Water) put me in mind how it sparkled amidst the Rubbish of the Mine, where it was first discovered. On the other hand, the pretty Quaker appeared in all the Elegance of Cleanliness. Not a Speck was to be found on her. A clear, clean oval Face, just edged about with little thin Plaits of the purest Cambrick, received great Advantages from the Shade of her black Hood; as did the Whiteness of her Arms from that fober-coloured Stuff, in which she had Clothed herself. The Plainness of her Dress was very well suited to the Simplicity of her Phrases; all which put together, though they could not give me a great Opinion of her Religion they did of her Innocence.

THIS

THIS Adventure occasioned my throwing together a few Hints upon Cleanliness, which I shall consider as one of the Half Virtues, as Aristotle calls them, and shall recommend it under the three following Heads, As it is a Mark of Politeness: As it produces Love; and As it bears Analogy to Purity of Mind.

First, IT is a Mark of Politeness. It is universally agreed upon, that no one, unadorn'd with this Virtue, can go into Company without giving a manifest Offence. The easier or higher any one's Fortune is, this Duty rises proportionably. The different Nations of the World are as much distinguished by their Cleanliness, as by their Arts and Sciences. The more any Country is civilized, the more they consult this part of Politeness. We need but compare our Ideas of a Female Hottentot and an English Beauty to be satisfied of the Truth of what hath been advanced.

In the next Place, Cleanliness may be said to be the Foster Mother of Love. Beauty indeed most commonly produces that Passion in the Mind, but Cleanliness preferves it. An indifferent Face and Person, kept in perpetual Neatness, hath won many a Heart from a pretty Slattern. Age itself is not unamiable, while it is preferved clean and unfullied: Like a piece of Metal constantly kept smooth and bright, we look on it with more Pleasure than on a new Vessel that is canker'd with Rust.

I might observe farther, that as Cleanliness renders us agreeable to others, so it makes us easy to ourselves; that it is an excellent Preservative of Health; and that several Vices, destructive both to Mind and Body, are inconsistent with the Habit of it. But these Reslexions I shall leave to the Leisure of my Readers, and shall observe in the Third Place, that it bears a great Analogy with Purity of Mind, and naturally inspires refined Sentiments and Passions.

WE find from Experience, that through the Prevalence of Custom, the most vicious Actions lose their Horror, by being made familiar to us. On the contrary, those who live in the Neighbourhood of good Examples, sly from the first Appearances of what is shocking. It fares with us much after the same Manner, as our ideas. Our Senses, which are the Inlets to all the Images conveyed to the Mind, can only transmit the Impression of such things as usually surround them. So that pure and unsullied Thoughts are naturally suggested to the Mind, by those Objects that perpetually encompass us, when they are beautiful and elegant in their kind.

IN the East, where the warmth of the Climate makes Cleanliness more immediately necessary than in colder Countries, it is made one Part of their Religion: The Jewish Law, (and the Mohometan, which in some things copies after it) is filled with Bathings, Purifications, and other Rites of the like Nature. Though there is the abovenamed convenient Reason to be assigned for these Ceremonies, the chief Intention undoubtedly was to typisy inward Purity and Cleanliness of Heart by those outward Washings. We read several Injunctions of this Kind in the Book of Deuteronamy, which confirm this Truth; and which are but ill-accounted for by saying as some do, that they were only instituted for Convenience in the Desert, which otherwise could not have been habitable for se many Years.

I shall conclude this Essay, with a Story which I have somewhere read in an Account of Mahometan Super-Aitions.

A Dervise of great Sanctity one Moraing had the Misfortune as he took up a Crystal Cup which was confectated to the Prophet, to let it fall upon the Ground, and dash it in Pieces. His Son coming in, some time after, he stretched out his Hand to bless him, as his manner was every Morning; but the Youth going out stumbled over the Threshold and broke his Arm. As the old Man wondered at these Events, a Caravan passed by in its way from Mecca. The Dervise approached it to beg a Blessing; but as he stroked one of the Holy Camels, he received a Kick from the Beast, that sorely bruised him. His Sorrow and Amazement increased upon him, till he recollected that through Hurry and Inadvertency he had that Moraing come abroad without washing his Hands.

MINICAL MANAGEMENT

Nº 632 Monday, December 13

-Explebo numerum, reddarque tenebris. Virg. Æn. 6. v. 545.

- the Number I'll complete, Then to Obscarity well-pleas'd netreat.

HE Love of Symmetry and Order, which is natural to the Mind of Man, betrays him sometimes into very whimfical Fancies. This noble Principle, says a French Author, loves to amuse itself on the most trifling Occasions. You may see a profound Philosopher, says he, walk for an Hour together in his Chamber, and industriously treading, at every Step, upon every other Board in the Flooring. Every Reader will recollect feveral Infrances of this Nature without my Affistance. I think it was Gregorio Leti who had published as many Books as he was Years old; which was a Rule he had laid down and punctually observed to the Year of his Death. It was, perhaps, a Thought of the like Nature, which determined Homer himfelf to divide each of his Poems into as many Books, as there are Letters in the Greek Alphabet. Herodotus has in the fame manner adapted his Books to the Number of the Muses, for which Reason many a Learned Man hath wished there had been more than Nine of that Sifterhood.

SEVERAL Epic Poets have religiously followed Virgil as to the Number of his Books; and even Milton is thought by many to have changed the Number of his Books from Ten to Twelve, for no other Reason; as Cowley tells us, it was his Defign, had he finished his Davideis, to have also imitated the Eneid in this Particular. I believe every one will agree with me, that a Perfection of this Nature hath no Foundation in Reason; and, with due Respect to these great Names, may be looked upon as fomething whimifical.

I mention these great Examples in Defence of my Bookseller, who occasioned this Eighth Volume of Spectators, because, as he said, he thought Seven a very Odd Number. On the other Side, several grave Reasons. were urged on this important Subject; as in particular, that Seven was the precise Number of the Wise Men, and that the most Beautiful Constellation in the Heavens was composed of Seven Stars. This he allowed to be true, but still infisted, that Seven was an Odd Number; fuggesting at the same time that if he were provided with a fufficient Stock of leading Papers, he should find Friends ready enough to carry on the Work. Having by this Means got his Vessel lanched and set afloat, he hath committed the Steerage of it, from time to time, to such as he thought capable of conducting it.

THE Close of this Volume, which the Town may now expect in a little time, may possibly ascribe each Sheet to its proper Author.

. IT were no hard Task to continue this Paper a confiderable Time longer, by the Help of large Contributions fent from unknown Hands.

I cannot give the Town a better Opinion of the SPECTATOR'S Correspondents, than by publishing the following Letter, with a very fine Copy of Verses upon a Subject persectly new.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

Dublin, Nov. 30, 1714.

YOU lately recommended to your Female Readers, the good old Custom of their Grandmothers, who used to lay out a great Part of their Time in Needle-work: I entirely agree with you in your Sentiments, and think it would not be of less Advantage to themselves, and their Posterity, than to the Reputation of many of their good Neighbours, if they past many of those Hours in this innocent Entertainment, which are lost at the Tea-Table. I would, however, humbly offer to your Consideration, the Case of the Poetical Ladies; who, though they may be willing to take any Advice given them by the Spectator, yet can't so easily quit their Pen and Ink, as you may imagine. Pray allow them, at least now and then, to indulge themselves in other Amusements of Fancy, when they are tired with stooping to their Tapestry. There is a very particular kind of Work, which of late feveral Ladies here in our Kingdom are very fond of, which seems very well adapted to a Poetical Genius: It is the making of Grottoes,

I know a Lady who has a very Beautiful one, composed by herself, nor is there one Shell in it not fluck up by her own Hands. I here fend you a Poem to the fair Architect, which I would not offer to herself, till I knew whether this Method of a

Lady's passing her Time were approved of by the British SPECTATOR, which, with the Poem, I fubmit to your Censure, who am,

Your Conftant Reader,

and humble Servant,

on her Grotto.

A Grotto so complete, with such Design, What Hands, Calypso, cou'd have form'd but Thine? Each checker'd Pebble, and each shining Shell, So well proportion'd, and dispos'd so well, Surprising Lustre from thy Thought receive, Assuming Beauties more than Nature gave. To her their various Shapes, and gloffy Hue, Their curious Symmetry they owe to You. Not fam'd Amphion's Lute, whose pow'rful Call Made willing Stones dance to the Theban Wall, In more harmonious Ranks cou'd make them fall. Not Ev'ning Cloud a brighter Arch can show, Not richer Colours paint the heav'nly Bow.

Where can unpolish'd Nature boast a Piece. In all her Mossy Cells exact as This? At the gay parti colour'd Scene we fart, For Chance too regular, too rude for Art.

Charm'd with the fight, my ravish'd Breast is sir'd With Hints like those which ancient Bards inspir'd; All the seight Tales by Superstition told, All the bright Train of sabled Nymphs of old, Th' enthusiastic Muse believes are true, Thinks the Spot sacred, and its Genius You. Lost in wild Rapture, would she sain disclose, How by degrees the pleasing Wonder rose: Industrious in a faithful Verse to trace The various Beauties of the lovely Place; And while she keeps the glowing Work in View, Thre' ev'ry Maxe thy artful Hand pursue.

O were I equal to the bold Design,
Or cou'd I boast such happy Art as Thine!
That cou'd rude Shells in such sweet Order place,
Give common Objects such uncommon Grace!
Like them my well-chose Words in ew'ry Line,
As sweetly temper'd should as sweetly shine.
So just a Fancy shou'd my Numbers warm,
Like the gay Piece shou'd the Description charm.
Then with superior Strength my Voice I'd raise,
The echoing Grotto shou'd approve my Lays,
Pleas'd to restet the well-sung Founder's Praise.

DOCOCOCOCOCOCO

Nº 663 Wednesday, December 15.

Omnia profecto, cum se à cœlestibus rebus referet ad bumanas, excelfius magnificentiusque & dicet & sentiet.

Cicero.

The Contemplation of celeftial Things will make a Man both speak and think more sublimely and magnificently, when he descends to human Affairs.

HE following Discourse is printed, as it came to my Hands, without Variation.

e against those Evily

Cambridge, Dec. 11.

T was a very common Enquiry among the An-- cients why the Number of Excellent Orators, under all the Encouragements the most flourishing States could give them, fell so far short of the Number of those who excelled in all other Sciences. Friend of mine used merrily to apply to this Case an Observation of Herodotus, who says, That the most useful Animals are the most fruitful in their Generation; whereas the Species of those Beasts that are fierce and mischievous to Mankind are but scarcely continued. The Historian instances in a Hare, which always either breeds or brings forth; and a Lioness, which brings forth but once, and then loses 'all Power of Conception. But, leaving my Friend to his Mirth, I am of Opinion, that in these latter Ages we have greater Cause of Complaint than the Ancients had. And fince that folemn Festival is approaching, which calls for all the Power of Oratory, and which affords as noble a Subject for the Pulpit as any Revelation has taught us, the Defign of this Paper shall be to show, that our Moderns have greater Advantages towards true and solid Eloquence, than any which the celebrated Speakers of Antiquity enjoy'd. VOL. VIII.

'THE first great and substantial Difference is, that their Common-Places, in which almost the whole Force of Amplification confifts, were drawn from the Profit or Honesty of the Action, as they regarded only this present State of Duration. But Christianity, as it exalts Morality to a greater Perfection, as it brings the Confideration of another Life into the Question, as it proposes Rewards and Punishments of a higher Nature and a longer Continuance, is more adapted to affect the Minds of the Audience, naturally inclined to purfue what it imagines its greatest Interest and Con-If Pericles, as Historians report, could shake the firmest Resolutions of his Hearers, and set the Pasfions of all Greece in a Ferment, when the present Welfare of his Country, or the Fear of hostile Invasions, was the Subject: What may be expected from that Orator, who warns his Audience against those Evils which have no Remedy, when once undergone, either from Prudence or Time? As much greater as the Hvils in a future State are than these at present, so much are the Motives to Persuasion under Christianity greater than those which meer moral Confiderations could sup-' ply us with. But what I now mention relates only to the Power of moving the Affections. There is another Part of Eloquence, which is indeed its Mafter-piece: I mean the Marvellous or Sublime. In this the Chriflian Orator has the Advantage beyond Contradiction. Our Ideas are so infinitely enlarged by Revelation, the Eye of Reason has so wide a Prospect into Eternity, the Notions of a Deity are so worthy and refined, and the Accounts we have of a State of Happiness or Mifery fo clear and evident, that the Contemplation of ' fuch Objects will give our Discourse a noble Vigour, an ' invincible Force, beyond the Power of any human · Confideration. Tully requires in his Perfect Orator fome Skill in the Nature of Heavenly Bodies, because, fays he, his Mind will become more extensive and unconfined; and when he descends to treat of human Affairs, he will both think and write in a more exalted and magnificent Manner. For the fame Reason that excellent Master would have recommended the Study of those great and glorious Mysteries which Revelation has discovered to us; to which the noblest Parts of this System of the World are as much inferior, as the Creature is less excellent than its Creator. The wifest and most knowing among the Heathens had very poor and imperfect Notions of a future State. They had indeed some uncertain Hopes, either received by Tradition, or gathered by Reason, that the Existence of virtuous Men would not be determined by the Separation of Soul and Body: But they either disbelieved a future State of Punishment and Misery; or, upon the same Account that Apelles painted Antigonus with one Side only towards the Spectator, that the Lofs of his Eye might not cast a Blemish upon the whole Piece: so these represented the Condition of Man in its fairest View, and endeavoured to conceal what they thought was a Deformity to human Nature. I have often observed, that whenever the abovementioned Orator in his Philosophical Discourses is led by his Argument to the Mention of Immortality, he feems like one awaked out of Sleep: rous'd and alarm'd with the Dignity of the Subject, he stretches his Imagination to conceive fomething uncommon, and, with the Greatness of his Thoughts, casts, as it were, a Glory round the Sentence. Uncertain and unfettled as he was, he feems fixed with the Contemplation of it. And nothing but fuch a Glorious Prospect could have forced fo great a Lover of Truth, as he was, to declare his Resolution never to part with his Persuasion of Immortality, tho' it should be proved to be an erroneous one. But had he lived to see all that Christianity has brought to Light. how would he have lavished out all the Force of Eloquence in those noblest Contemplations which human Nature is capable of, the Resurrection and the Judgment that follows it? How had his Breast glowed with · Pleasure, when the whole Compass of Futurity lay open and exposed to his View? How would his Imagination have hurried him on in the Pursuit of the Myfteries of the Incarnation? How would he have enter'd. with the Force of Lightning, into the Affections of his Hearers, and fixed their Attention, in spite of all the Opposition of corrupt Nature, upon those glorious Themes which his Eloquence hath painted in fuch lively and lasting Colours.

'THIS Advantage Christians have; and it was with no small Pleasure I lately met with a Fragment of Longinus, which is preserv'd, as a Testimony of that Critick's Judgment, at the Beginning of a Manuscript of the New Testament in the Vatican Library. After that Author has number'd up the most celebrated Orators among the Grecians, he fays, Add to these Paul of Tarsus, the Patron of an Opinion not yet fully proved. As a Heathen, he condemns the Chriflian Religion; and, as an impartial Critick, he judges in Favour of the Promoter and Preacher of it. To me it feems, that the latter Part of his Judgment adds great Weight to his Opinion of St. Paul's Abilities. fince, under all the Prejudice of Opinions directly opposite, he is constrained to acknowledge the Merit of that Apostle. And no doubt, such as Longinus describes St. Paul, such he appeared to the Inhabitants of those Countries which he visited and blessed with those Doctrines he was divinely commissioned to preach. Sacred Story gives us, in one Circumstance, a convincing Proof of his Eloquence, when the Men of Lystra called him Mercury, because he was the chief Speaker, and would have paid Divine Worship to him. as to the God who invented and prefided over Eloquence. This one Account of our Apostle fets his Character, confider'd as an Orator only, above all the celebrated Relations of the Skill and Influence of Demostheres and his Contemporaries. Their Power in Speaking was admired, but still it was thought human: Their Eloquence warmed and ravished the Hearers, but still it was thought the Voice of ' Man, not the Voice of God. What Advantage then had St. Paul above those of Greece or Rome? I confess I can ascribe this Excellence to nothing but the Power of the Doctrines he delivered, which may have still the same Insluence on the Hearers; which have still the Power, when preached by a skilful Orator, to make us break out in the same Expresfions, as the Disciples, who met our Saviour in their ' Way to Emmaus, made use of; Did not our Hearts burn within us, when he talked to us by the Way, and while he opened to us the Scriptures? I may be thought bold in my Judgment by some; but I must affirm, That no one Orator has left us so visible Marks and Footsteps of his Eloquence as our Apostle. 'It may perhaps be wondered at, that in his Reasonings upon Idolatry at Athens, where Eloquence was bern and flourished, he confines himself to strict Argument only; but my Reader may remember what ma-'ny Authors of the best Credit have assured us, That ' all Attempts upon the Affections and Strokes of Oratory were expresly forbidden by the Laws of that Country, in Courts of Judicature. His want of Eloquence therefore here, was the Effect of his exact Conformity to the Laws. But his Discourse on the Resurrection to the Corinthians, his Harangue before Agrippa upon his own Conversion, and the Necessity of that of others. are truly Great, and may serve as full Examples to those excellent Rules for the Sublime, which the best of Criticks has left us. The Sum of all this Discourse is, That our Clergy have no farther to look for an Example of the Perfection they may arrive at, than to St. Paul's Harangues; that when he, under the want of several Advantages of Nature (as he himself tells us) was heard, admired, and made a Standard to " fucceeding Ages by the best Judge of a different Perfuasion in Religion, I say, our Clergy may learn, That however instructive their Sermons are, they are capable of receiving a great Addition; which St. Paul has given them a noble Example of, and the · Christian Religion has furnished them with certain " Means of attaining to.

RECEIVED AND THE PROPERTY OF T

Nº 634 Friday, December 17.

Ο έλαχίσων δεόμθυ Είγισα θεών.
Socrates apud Xen.

The fewer our Wants, the nearer we resemble the Gods.

I T was the common Boast of the Heathen Philosophers, that by the Efficacy of their several Doctrines, they made Human Nature resemble the Divine. How much mistaken soever they might be in the several Means they proposed for this End, it must be owned that the Design was great and glorious. The sinest-Works of Invention and Imagination are of very little Weight, when put in the Balance with what resines and exalts the rational Mind. Longinus excuses Homer very handsomly, when he says the Poet made his Gods like Men, that he might make his Men appear like the Gods: But it must be allowed that several of the ancient Philosophers acted, as Citero wishes Homer had done; they endeavoured rather to make Men like Gods, than Gods like Men.

ACCORDING to this general Maxim in Philofophy, fome of them have endeavoured to place Men in such a State of Pleasure, or Indolence at least, as they vainly imagined the Happiness of the Supreme Being to consist in. On the other hand, the most virtuous Sect of Philosophers have created a chimerical wise Man, whom they made exempt from Passion and Pain, and thought it enough to pronounce him Allsufficient.

THIS last Character when divested of the Glare of Human Philosophy that furrounds it, signifies no more, than that a Good and a Wise Man should so arm himself with Patience, as not to yield tamely to the Violence of Passion and Pain; that he should learn so to suppress and contract his Desires as to have few

Wants

Wants; and that he should cherish so many Virtues in his Soul, as to have a perpetual Source of Pleasure in Himfelf.

THE Christian Religion requires, that, after having framed the best Idea, we are able, of the Divine Nature, it should be our next Care to conform ourfelves to it, as far as our Imperfections will permit. I might mention feveral Paffages in the facred Writings on this Head, to which I might add many Maxims and wife Sayings of Moral Authors among the Greeks and Romans.

I shall only instance a remarkable Passage, to this Purpose, out of Julian's Casars. That Emperor having represented all the Roman Emperors, with Alexander the Great, as passing in Review before the Gods, and striving for the Superiority, lets them all drop, excepting Alexander, Julius Cafar, Augustus Cafar, Trajan, Marcus Aurelius, and Constantine. Each of these great Heroes of Antiquity lays in his Claim for the upper Place; and, in order to it, fets forth his Actions after the most advantageous Manner. But the Gods, instead of being dazzled with the Lustre of their Actions, enquire, by Mercury, into the proper Motive and governing Principle that influenced them throughout the whole Series of their Lives and Exploits. Alexander tells them, That his Asm was to conquer: Julius Casar, That his was to gain the highest Post in his Country; Augustus, To govern well; Trajan, That His was the same as that of Alexander, namely, To conquer. The Question, at length, was put to Marcus Aurelius, who replied, with great Modesty, That it had always been his Care to imitate the Gods. This Conduct seems to have gained him the most Votes and best Place in the whole Assembly. Marcus Aurelius being afterwards asked to explain himfelf, declares, That, by imitating the Gods, he endeavoured to imitate them in the Use of his Understanding, and of all other Faculties; and, in particular, That it was always his Study to have as few Wants as possible in himself, and to do all the Good he could to others.

AMONG the many Methods by which Revealed Religion has advanced Morality, this is one, That it N 4 has has given us a more just and perfect Idea of that Being whom every reasonable Creature ought to imitate. The young Man, in a Heathen Comedy, might justify his Lewdness by the Example of Jupiter; as, indeed, there was scarce any Crime that might not be countenanced by those Notions of the Deity which prevailed among the common People in the Heathen World. Revealed Religion sets forth a proper Object for Imitation, in that Being who is the Pattern, as well as the Source, of all spiritual Perfection.

WHILE we remain in this Life, we are subject to innumerable Temptations, which, if listen'd to, will make us deviate from Reason and Goodness, the only Things wherein we can imitate the Supreme Being. In the next Life we meet with nothing to excite our Inclinations that doth not deserve them. I shall therefore dismiss my Reader with this Maxim, viz. Our Happiness in this World proceeds from the Suppression of our Desires, but in the next World from the Gratification of them.

*CHESSESSESSESSES

Nº 635 Monday, December 20.

Sentio Te sedem Hominum ac Domum contemplari; qua se tibi parva (ut est) ita videtur, bæc cælestia semper spectato; illa bumana contemnito.

Cicero Somn. Scip.

I perceive you contemplate the Seat and Habitation of Men; which if it appears as little to you as it really is, fix your Eyes perpetually upon heavenly Objects, and despife earthly.

Author of the Letter upon Novelty, printed in a late Spectator: The Notions are drawn from the Platonick way of Thinking; but as they contribute to raise the Mind, and may inspire noble Sentiments of our own future Grandeur and Happiness, I think it well deserves to be presented to the Publick.

IF

the of our line of the following who was required as

F the Universe be the Creature of an intelligent Mind. this Mind could have no immediate Regard to himfelf in producing it. He needed not to make Trial of his Omnipotence, to be informed what Effects were within its Reach: The World as existing in his eternal Idea was then as beautiful as now it is drawn forth into Being; and in the immense Abyss of his Essence are eontained far brighter Scenes than will be ever fet forth to View; it being impossible that the great Author of Nature should bound his own Power by giving Exiflence to a System of Creatures so perfect that he cannot improve upon it by any other Exertions of his Almighty Will. Between Finite and Infinite there is an unmeasured Interval, not to be filled up in endless Ages; for which Reason, the most excellent of all God's Works. must be equally short of what his Power is able to produce as the most imperfect, and may be exceeded with the same Ease.

THIS Thought hath made some imagine, (what, it must be confess'd, is not impossible) that the unfathomed Space is ever teeming with new Births, the younger still inheriting a greater Perfection than the elder. But as this doth not fall within my present View, I shall content myself with taking notice, that the Consideration now mentioned proves undeniably, that the Ideal Worlds in the Divine Understanding yield a Prospect incomparably more ample, various, and delightful, than any created World can do: And that therefore as it is not to be supposed that God should make a World merely of inanimate Matter, however diverlified; or inhabited only by Creatures of no higher an Order than Brutes; fo the End for which he defigned his reasonable Offspring is the Contemplation of his Works. the Enjoyment of himself, and in both to be happy; having, to this Purpose, endowed them with correfoondent Faculties and Defires. He can have no greater Pleasure from a bare Review of his Works, than from the Survey of his own Ideas; but we may be affored that he is well pleased in the Satisfaction derived to Beings capable of it, and for whose Entertainment he hatherected this immense Theatre. Is not this more than an Intimation

NS

that

tion of our Immortality? Man, who when confidered as on his Probation for a happy Existence hereafter, is the most remarkable Instance of Divine Wisdom, if we cut him off from all Relation to Eternity, is the most wonderful and unaccountable Composition in the whole Creation. He hath Capacities to lodge a much greater Variety of Knowledge than he will be ever Master of, and an unfatisfied Curiofity to tread the fecret Paths of Nature and Providence: But, with this, his Organs, in their present Structure, are rather fitted to serve the Necessities of a vile Body, than to minister to his Underflanding; and from the little Spot to which he is chained, he can frame but wandering Guesses concerning the innumerable Worlds of Light that encompass him, which, tho' in themselves of a prodigious Bigness, do but just glimmer in the remote Spaces of the Heavens; and, when with a great deal of Time and Pains he hath laboured a little way up the steep Ascent of Truth, and beholds with Pity the groveling Multitude beneath, in a Moment, his Foot slides, and he tumbles down headlong into the Grave. THINKING on this, I am obliged to believe, in justice to the Creator of the World, that there is another State when Man shall be better situated for Contemplation, or rather have it in his Power to remove from Object to Object, and from World to World; and be accommodated with Senses, and other Helps, for making the quickest and most amazing Discoveries. How doth fuch a Genius as Sir Isaac Newton, from amidst. the Darkness that involves human Understanding, break forth, and appear like one of another Species! The vast Machine, we inhabit, lies open to him; he seems not unacquainted with the general Laws that govern it; and while with the Transport of a Philosopher he beholds and admires the glorious Work, he is capable of paying at once a more devout and more rational Homage to his Maker. But alas! how narrow is the Prospect even of such a Mind? and how obscure to the Compass that is taken in by the Ken of an Angel; or of a Soul but newly escaped from its Imprisonment in the Body! For my part, I freely indulge my Soul in the Confidence of its future Grandeur; it pleases me to think that I who know so small a portion of the Works of the Creator, and with flow and painful Steps creep up and down on the Surface of this Globe, shall ere long shoot away with the Swiftness of Imagination, trace out the hidden Springs of Nature's Operations, be able to keep pace with the heavenly Bodies in the Rapidity of their Career, be a Spectator of the long Chain of Events in the natural and moral Worlds, visit the several Apartments of the Creation, know how they are furnished and how inhabited, comprehend the Order, and measure the Magnitudes and Distances of those Orbs, which to us feem disposed without any regular Defign, and set all in the same Circle; observe the Dependence of the Parts of each System, and (if our Minds are big enough to grasp the Theory) of the several Systems upon one another, from whence results the Harmony of the Universe. In Eternity a great deal may be done of this kind. I find it of use to cherish this generous Ambition; for besides the fecret Refreshment it diffuses through my Soul, it engages me in an Endeavour to improve my Faculties, as well as to exercise them conformably to the Rank I now hold among reasonable Beings, and the Hope I have of being once advanced to a more exalted Station.

THE other, and that the Ultimate End of Man, is the Enjoyment of God, beyond which he cannot form a Wish. Dim at best are the Conceptions we have of the Supreme Being, who, as it were, keeps his Creatures in Suspence, neither discovering, nor hiding himfelf; by which means, the Libertine hath a Handle to dispute his Existence, while the most are content to speak him fair, but in their Hearts prefer every trifling Satiffaction to the Favour of their Maker, and ridicule the good Man for the Singularity of his Choice. Will there not a Time come, when the Free-thinker shall see his impious Schemes overturned, and be made a Convert to the Truths he hates; when deluded Mortals shall be convinced of the Folly of their Pursuits, and the few Wife who followed the Guidance of Heaven, and, fcorning the Blandishments of Sense and the fordid Bribery of the World, aspired to a celestial Abode, shall stand possessed of their utmost Wish in the Vision of the Creator? Here the Mind heaves a Thought now and then towards him, and hath fome transient Glances of his Prefence: When, in the Instant it thinks itself to have the fastest hold, the Object eludes its Expectations, and it falls back tired and baffled to the Ground. Doubtless. there is some more perfect way of conversing with heavenly Beings. Are not Spirits capable of mutual Intelligence, unless immersed in Bodies, or by their Intervention? Must superior Natures depend on inferior for the main Privilege of fociable Beings, that of converfing with, and knowing each other? What would they have done, had Matter never been created? I suppose, not have lived in eternal Solitude. As incorporeal Substances are of a nobler Order, so be sure, their Manner of Intercourse is answerably more expedite and intimate. This Method of Communication, we call Intellectual Vision, as somewhat Analogous to the Sense of Seeing, which is the Medium of our Acquaintance with this visible World. And in some such way can God make himself the Object of immediate Intuition to the Bleffed; and as he can, 'tis not improbable that he will, always condescending, in the Circumstances of doing it, to the Weakness and Proportion of finite Minds. His Works but faintly reflect the Image of his Perfections: 'tis a Second-hand Knowledge: To have a just Idea. of him, it may be necessary that we see him as he is. But what is that? 'Tis something that never entered into the Heart of Man to conceive; yet, what we can eafily conceive, will be a Fountain of Unspeakable, of Everlasting Rapture. All created Glories will fade and die away in his Presence. Perhaps it will be my Happiness to compare the World with the fair Exemplar of it in the Divine Mind; perhaps, to view the original Plan of those wise Designs that have been executing in a long Succession of Ages. Thus employed in finding out his Works, and contemplating their Author, how shall I fall prostrate and adoring, my Body swallowed up in the Immensity of Matter, my Mind in the Infinitude of his Perfections!

THE

I de nota N of the D of E A A A X

TOTHE

Been, his Saying of a greedy words were theorem

Receptor in a bosen company

'Amid h goer had

EIGHTH VOLUME.

Burleft August the Paligua of Chainer Readers

A CTIONS, Principles of, two in Man, N.
588.

Adulterers, how punish'd by the Primitive Christians, N. 579.

Aglais, his Story told by Convley, N. 610.

Ambition, various kinds of it, N. 570. Laudable, 613.

Anatharsis, the Corinthian Drunkard, a Saying of his, N. 569.

Ancestry, how far Honour is to be paid to it, N.
612.

Answers to several Letters at once, N. 581, and 619.

Antipathies, a Letter about them, N. 609.

Anxieties, unnecessary, the Evil of them and the Vanity of them, N. 615.

Applause and Censure should not missead us, N. 610.

Applause and Centure should not missead us, N. 610.

Araspas and Panthea, their Story out of Xenophon, N. 564.

Ari-

The INDEX.

Aristippus, his Saying of Content, N. 574.

Augustus, his Saying of Mourning for the Dead, N.

575.

B.

Bacon Flitch, at Wichenowre in Staffordshire, who are intitled to it, N. 607. Several Demands for it, 608.

Bantam, Ambassador of, his Letter to his Master about the English, N. 557.

Baxter, what a Bleffing he had, N. 598.

Benevolence treated of, N. 601.

Beneficence, the Pleasure of it, N. 588. A Discourse of it, 601.

Bion, his Saying of a greedy Search after Happiness, N.

Blank, his Letter to the Spectator about his Family, N.

Bonosus, the Drunken Briton, a Saying of him after he had hang'd himself, N. 569.

Burlesk Authors the Delight of Ordinary Readers, N. 616, and 625.

Burlesk Humour, N. 616. Busy World, N. 624.

very bow year'd by the Pennine Call.

Accethes, or Itch of Writing, an Epidemical Diftemper, N. 582. Calamities, whimfical ones, N. 558.

Calumny, the great Offence of it, N. 504. Rules against it by the Fathers of la Trape, ibid.

Cases in Love answer'd, N. 614.

Cato, an Inflance of his Probity, N. 557.

Cave of Trophonius, several People put into it to be mended, N. 599.

Censure and Applause should not mis-lead us, N. 610.

Chancery-Court, why erected, N. 564.

Chaffity, how priz'd by the Heathens, N. 579. Cherubims, what the Rabbins fay they are, N. 600.

Chit-Chat Club's Letter to the Spettator, N. 560.

Chri-

Christianity, the only System that can produce Content, N. 574. How much above Philosophy, 634.

Cleanliness, the Praise of it, N. 631.

Clergymen, the Vanity of some in wearing Scarves, N.

Coach, Stage, its Company, N. 631.

Content, how described by a Rosscrusian, N. 574. The Virtue of it, ibid.

Country-Gentlemen, Advice to them about spending their Time, N. 583. Memoirs of the Life of one, 622.

Cowley, Mr. his Description of Heaven, N. 590. His Story of Aglaus, 610. His Ambition, 613.

Crazy, a Man thought fo by reading Milton aloud, N.

Criticks, Modern ones, some Errors of theirs about Plays, N. 592.

Cyrus, how he try'd a young Lord's Virtue, N. 564.

D.

Differetion absolutely necessary in a good Husband, N. 607.

Distempers, difficult to change them for the better, N.

Divine Nature, our narrow Conceptions of it, N. 565. Its Omnipresence and Omniscience, ibid.

Dreams, a Discourse of them, N. 593, and 597. Several extravagant ones, ibid. Of Trophonius's Cave, 599.

Drunkard, a Character of one, N. 569. Is a Monster, ibid.

Drunkenness, the ill Effects of it, N. 569. What Seneca and Publius Syrus said of it, ibid.

Dryden, Mr. his Translation of Iapis's Cure of Aineas, out of Virgil, N. 572. Of Aineas's Ships being turn'd to Goddesses, N. 589. His Cock's Speech to Dame Partlet, N. 621.

Dumb Conjurer's Letter to the Spectator, N. 560.

llow much upper little

Egotism, the Vanity of it condemn'd, N. 562. A young Fellow very guilty of it, ibid. Egyptians tormented with the Plague of Darkness, N.

615.

Eloquence of Beggars, N. 613.

English, a Character of them by a great Preacher, N. 557. By the Bantam Ambassador, ibid. A Distemper they are very much afflicted with, 582.

Epistolary Poetry, the two kinds of Stiles, N. 618.

Erratum, a fad one committed in Printing the Bible. N. 579.

Eternity, an Essay upon it, N. 590. Part is to come, 628. Speech in Cate on it, translated into Latin. dow he try a a young Lord's vinte, Iv shidi PACES, every Man should be pleased with his own,.

N. 559. Fadlallah, his Story out of the Persian Tales, N. 578: Family Madness in Pedigrees, N. 612. Fancy, her Character, N. 558. her Calamities, ibid. Favours, Ladies, not to be boafted of, N. 611. Fear, how necessary 'tis to subdue it, N. 615. Fellow of a College, a wife Saying of one about Posterity, N. 583. Flattery, how grateful, N. 621. Fontenelle, his Saying of the Ambitious and Covetous.

N, 576.

Free-thinkers put into Trophonius's Cave, N. 599.

Fritilla's Dream, N. 597.

Funnel, Will, the Toper, his Character, N. 569.

Futurity, the strong Inclination Man has to know it, N. 604. A Weakness, ibid. The Misery of knowing it, ibid.

G.

Encalogy, a Letter about it, N. 612.

Gladio's Dream, N. 597.

God, a Contemplation of his Omnipresence and Omnificience, N. 565. He cannot be absent from us, ibid. Considerations on his Ubic. 571.

Grotto, Verses on one, N. 610.

H.

TAmadryads, the Fable of them to the Honour of Trees, N. 589. Happiness of Souls in Heaven treated of, N. 600. An Argument that God has affign'd us for it, ibid. Hearts, a Vision of them, N. 587. Heaven, its Glory, N. 580. Described by Mr. Cowley, 500. The Notions several Nations have of it, 600. What Dr. Tillotson says of it, ibid. Hermit, his faying to a lewd young Fellow, N. 575. Heroism, an Essay upon it, N. 601. Hilpa, the Chinese Antediluvian Princess, her Story, N. 584. Her Letter to Shalum, 585. History, Secret, an odd way of writing one, N. 619. Hobbes's Notions debase human Nature, N. 588. Humour, the two Extremes, N. 617. Burlesk, 616. Pedantick, 617. Hunting reprov'd, N. 583. Husbands: Rules for marrying them by the Widow Club, N. 561. Qualities necessary to make good ones, 607.

I.

Apis's Cure of Æneas, a Translation of Virgil, by Mr. Dryden, N. 572.

Idle World, N. 624.

Jest, how it should be uttered, N. 616.

Initial Letters, the Use Party-Writers make of them, N.

N. 567. An Instance of it, ibid. Criticisms upon it, 568.

Integrity, great Care to be taken of it, N. 557.

Intrepidity of a just good Man taken from Horace, N.

John a Nokes and John a Stiles, their Petition, N.

Irifo Gentlemen, Widow-Hunters, N. 561.

Isadas the Spartan, his Valour, N. 564.

Julian the Emperor, an excellent Passage out of his Casars relating to the Imitation of the Gods, N.

634.

Jupiter, his first Proclamation about Griefs and Calamities, N. 558. His second, ibid. His just Distribution of them, 559.

Justice, the Spartans famous for it, N. 564.

L.

Adies, not to mind Party, N. 607.

Laughter indecent in any religious Assembly, N. 630.

Lesbia's Letter to the Spectator, giving an Account how the was deluded by her Lover, N. 611.

Letter from the Bantam Ambassador to his Master about the English, N. 557. From the Dumb Conjuror to the Spectator, 560. From the Chit-Chat Club, ibid. From Oxford about his recovering his Speech, ibid. From Frank Townly, ibid. About the Widow's Club, 561. From Blank about his Family, 563. About an angry Husband, ibid. From Will Warly, about Military Education, 566. From an Half-pay Officer about a Widow, ibid. From Peter Push on the same Subject, ibid. Against Quacks, 572. From the President of the Widows Club, 573. From a Man taken to be mad for reading of Poetry aloud, 577. A fecond Letter about the Ubiquity of the Godhead, 580. Several answered at once, 581. From Conflantio Spec, ibid. From Amanda Lovelength, ibid. From Shalum the Chinese to the Princels Hilpa, before the Flood, 584. From Hilpa to Shalum, 585.

From John Shadow, at Oxford, about reflecting at Night on the past Day's Actions, 586. About a Vision of Hearts, 587. About Planting, 589. From John Shadow about Dreams, 593. Of inconfistent Metaphors, 595. From Jeremy Lovemore, with an Account of his Life, 596. About making Love, 602. From Fanny Fickle, 605. From an Aunt about her Neice's Idleness, 606. About the Vanity of some Clergymens wearing Scarves, 609. From Tom Nimble. about Antipathies, ibid. From Cleora against the Ladies Work, ibid. From Lesbia a deluded Lady. 611. About Genealogy, 612. From Will Hopeless about Ambition, 613. From the Temple about Beggars Eloquence, ibid. From Monimia to recover a loft Lover, ibid. From a Country Wit in the Burlesk way, 616. From a Pedant in his Pedantick way on the same Subject, 617. About the Stiles of Letters, 618. Answers to several, 619. About Flattery, 621. From the Love-Casuist about the Widows Tenure, and the Black Ram, 623. From the same about Love Queries, 625. From one who recommended himself for a News-monger, ibid. About the Force of Novelty, 626. About a Cros'd Lover, 627. About Eternity to come, 628. About Church Musick, 630. About the Rattling Club's getting into Church, ibid.

Life, Eternal, what we ought to be most solicitous about,
N. 575. Man's not worth his Care, ibid. Valuable only as it prepares for another, ibid.

Lover Casuist, some Instructions of his, N. 591, 607.

Lover, an Account of the Life of one, 596. A cross'd one retires, 627.

M.

Marcia's Prayer in Cato, N. 593.

Memoirs of a private Country-Gentleman's Life, N. 622.

Man, the two Views he is to be considered in, N. 588.

An active Being, 624. His ultimate End, ibid.

Merry Part of the World amiable, N. 598.

Messiab, the Jews mistaken Notion of his worldly Grandeur, N. 610.

Metaphors,

The INDEX.

Metaphors, when vicious, N. 595. An Inflance of it, ibid. Military Education, a Letter about it, N. 566. Mischief rather to be suffered than an Inconvenience, N.

564.

Montagne, fond of speaking of Himself, N. 562. Scahiger's Saying of him, ibid. Musick, Church, recommended, N. 630. Musician, Burlesk, an Account of one, N. 570.

N.

N Eedlework recommended to Ladies, N. 606. A. Letter from Cleera against it, 609.

News the Pleasure of it, 625.

Newton (Sir Isaac) his noble way of considering infinite Space, N. 564.

Night, a clear one described, N. 565. Whimfically deferib'd by William Ramsey, 582.

No, a Word of great Use to Women in Love Matters, N. 625.

Novelty, the Force of it, N. 626.

0.

Orator, what requifite to form one, N. 633.

Ovid, his Verses on making Love at the Theatre, translated by Mr. Dryden, N. 602. How to succeed in his Manner, 618.

P.

Passions, the Work of a Philosopher to subdue them, N. 564. Instances of their Power, ibid.

Patience, her Power, N. 559.

Pedantick Humour, N. 617.

Penelope's Web, the Story of it, N. 606.

Person, the Word defined by Mr. Lecke, N. 578.

Petition

The INDEX.

Petition of John a Nokes and John a Stiles, N. 577. Petition from a Cavalier for a Place, with his Pretences to it, N. 629.

Phebe and Colin, an original Poem, N. 603.

Philosophers (Pagan) their Boast of exalting Human Nature, N. 634.

Pittacus, a wife Saying of his about Riches, N. 574.

Pity, the Reasonableness of it, N. 588.

Places, the Unreasonableness of Party Pretences to them, N. 629.

Planting recommended to Country-Gentlemen, N. 583. Again, 589.

Plato's Saying of Labour, N. 624.

Play-house, how improved in Storms, N. 592.

Politicians, the Mischief they do, N. 556. Some at the Royal Exchange, N. 568.

Puss, Speculations on an old and a young one, N. 626, Pythagoras, his Advice to his Scholars about examining at Night what they had done in the Day, N. 586.

Q.

Ouestion, a curious one started by a Schoolman about the Choice of present and suture Happiness and Misery, N. 575.

Quid-nunc (Tho.) His Letters to the Spectator about News, N. 625.

Quacks, an Essay against them, N. 572.

R

RAKE, a Character of one, N. 576.

Rattling Club got into the Church, N. 630.

Ramsey (William) the Astrologer, his whimsical Description of Night, N. 582.

Revelation, what Light it gives into the Joys of Heaven, N. 600.

Revenge of a Spanish Lady on a Man who boasted of her Favours, N. 611.

Rofteru-

Rofierusian, a pretended Discovery made by one, N. 574. Royal Progress, a Poem, N. 620.

god M mad Sinisho at , and bee wall

ST. Paul's Eloquence, N. 633.

Satire, whole Duty of Man turned into one, N. 568.

Scarves, the Vanity of some Clergymens wearing them,
N. 600.

Scribblers, the most offensive, N. 582.

Self-Love, the Narrowness and Danger of it, N. 588.

Seneca, his Saying of Drunkenness, N. 569.

Shakespear, his Excellence, N. 562.

Shalum the Chinese, his Letter to the Princess Hilpa before the Flood, N. 584.

Sight (Second) in Scotland, N. 604.

Singularity, when a Virtue, N. 576. An Instance of it, in a North-Country Gentleman, ibid.

Socrates, his Saying of Misfortunes, N. 558.

Space (Infinite) Sir Isaac Newton's noble way of confidering it, N. 564.

Spartan Justice, an Instance of it, N. 564.

Speciator breaks a fifty Years Silence, N. 556. How he recovered his Speech, ibid. His Politicks, ibid. Loquacity, ibid. Of no Party, ibid. A Calamity of his, 558. Criticks upon him, 568. He fleeps as well as wakes for the Publick, 599. His Dream of Trophonius's Cave, ibid. Why the Eighth Volume published, 632.

Spleen, its Effects, N. 558.

Stars, a Contemplation of them, N. 565. Sublime in Writing, what it is, N. 592.

Syncopists, modern ones, N. 567.

Syracusan Prince, Jealous of his Wise, how he served her, N. 579.

ation, what ingit at T. at the Toys of the Temper (Serious) the Advantage of it, N. 598.

Tender Hearts, an Entertainment for them, N. 627.

Tenure,

The INDEX.

Tenure, the most slippery in England, N. 623. Thales, his Saying of Truth and Falshood, N. 594. Theatre, of making Love there, N. 602.

Torre in Devenshire, how unchaste Widows are punished

there, N. 614.

Townly, Frank, his Letter to the Spectator, N. 560.

Tully praises himself, N. 562. What he said of the Immortality of the Soul, 588. Of uttering a Jest, 616.

Of the Force of Novelty, 626. What he required in his Orator, 633.

V.

Use as laborious as Virtue. N. 624

Vice as laborious as Virtue, N. 624, Vision of Human Misery, N. 604.

Vulcan's Dogs, the Fable of them, N. 579.

W.

WEst-Enborne in Berkshire, a Custom there for Widows, N. 614. What Lord Coke said of the Widows Tenure there, 623.

Wichenowre Bacon Flitch, in Staffordshire, who intitled to it, N. 607.

Whole Duty of Man, that excellent Book turned into a Satire, N. 568.

Widows Club, an Account of it, N. 561. A Letter from the Prefident of it to the Speciator about her Suitors, 573. Duty of Widows in old Times, 606. A Custom to punish unchaste ones in Berkshire and Devonshire, 614. Instances of their riding the black Ram there, 623.

Writing, the Difficulty of it to avoid Censure, N. 568.

Work necessary for Women, N. 606.

Xeno-

The ha b E &. and the state of t

T Enophon, his Account of Cyrus's trying the Virtue of aryoung Lord, N. 564. Z) Special section of the section of Emroude, Queen, her Story out of the Persian Tales, N. 578.

or well to Delbert in the the North

la suo della la l

in the contraction of the contra

- on nor Grotton bye.

Marin, ber. The world and the state of the Miss.

